Labor-Profit Curbs Will Be Pressed, Vinson Says

Green Protests

Decision to proceed with the Congressional drive for profits-labor legislation was signaled yesterday in the teeth of Administration opposition and labor demands for investigation of alleged "organized" public letter writing.

House members were put on notice by Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Committee, that they face a vote on the Smith-Vinson bill shortly after they return from their Easter holidays.

"I want members of Congress to go home during their recess," said Vinson. "They can learn first hand what public opinion on this matter is. When they return they should be in a position to vote. I can say now, they will be given an opportunity."

Labor Demands Inquiry

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor and President Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations meanwhile before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee demanded a Congressional investigation of what Murray called a "blitzkrieg on the part of labor baiters and enemies of our Government."

Green charged the avalanche of Congressional mail stems from a campaign initiated by two Oklahoma newspapers and asked investigation of "the financial sources, background and affiliations of the individuals and organizations making these large outlays of money to spread disunity and disrupt America's war effort."

Murray, who with Green opposed enactment of any labor legislation, said he turned over to the committee a copy of a circular letter he charged was sent out by Thomas J. Walliner, president of the Southern States Industrial Council. Murray said the circular solicited demands for repeal of the 40-hour week and enactment of "anti-labor legislation."

Military Secret Or Not, Spring Has Arrived

Don't tell the enemy, but spring came in at 2:11 this morning. At that minute the sun was directly over the equator and night and day were equal.

Thus ended a winter so mild here that it was unnecessary even to hitch the big District snow plows to the city's trucks.

As if to typify the season's untypical nature, the last day of winter was one of soft winds and warm temperatures, ranging as high as 62.

More of the same is due for today, said the weatherman, with occasional rain in the afternoon.

Trolley Kills D. C. Man, 68

Struck by a streetcar in the afternoon, a 68-year-old retired Government worker died last night in Emergency Hospital, the District's twenty-ninth traffic victim of the year. At this time last year the toll was 18.

Martin McDevitt, of 1863 Mintwood Place Northwest, was hurled 17 feet, according to investigating police, when hit by a Capital Transit car as he crossed the 1900 block Columbia Road Northwest.

Police listed Forrest C. Canard, 27, of 1713 Trinidad Avenue Northeast, as the motorman.

Reports from the West Coast last night said that Clark Shaughnessy, famous Stanford University football coach, would resign there today to become athletic director and football coach at the University of Maryland.

His Fare Was a Congressman

'Overcharge' of 30 Cents May Cost Cabbie His License

A Congressman who makes $10,000 a year and a cab driver whose earnings average $25 a week are involved in a dispute over 30 cents and the question of how long it takes a Congressman to say goodby to a companion.

The parties are John Edward Sheridan (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, and Cabbie Harold B. Strickland. The latter's job hangs on the result.

SHERIDAN

Sheridan says Strickland tried to charge him 30 cents for a 50-cent ride on February 19—a 30-cent fare and one 20-cent stop.

Strickland told the Public Utilities Commission that the extra 30 cents wasn't for the ride but for 14 minutes waiting he had to do while the Congressman told a feminine companion goodby.

The Congressman says it wasn't either 14 minutes, that all he did was take the companion to the door and tell the companion goodby, an operation which he says couldn't have required more than two minutes at the outside.

Strickland's version is that the Congressman got out of the cab, walked a few feet in front of it with his companion and then stood there talking several minutes, later taking the companion to the door. By his watch, he says, it was 14 minutes.

"I told the Congressman," Strickland said last night, "that it always seems a shorter time when you're playing than when you're working. I was working." Strickland says when he

Women Told They Must Fill 5 Million Jobs

Girls Must Expect Assembly Line Tasks, Miss Perkins Says

(War industries will require five million women by January, says Secretary Perkins.—Story on Page 4.)

President Roosevelt forecast yesterday possible skilled labor shortage by next fall.

At his press conference he declared there was enough man power for all purposes of wartime production at the present time, but he was inclined to think that the situation would change by autumn.

In answer to a question, he said that there is no present plan at least for labor conscription for those between the ages of 45 and 65 who are to register for service on April 27.

The President's comments on this phase of the labor problem came in response to a question of whether the newly announced registration would be used for the mobilization of men in the war industries. After answering in a qualified negative, Mr. Roosevelt added that if a shortage developed the only important point would be to supply the deficiency rather than be overly concerned about the manner.

By way of helping to set at rest the wave of complaints over the country that the 44-hour week is helping to hold down production, President Roosevelt presented statistics showing that average weekly employment runs consistently above the 44-hour standard provided in the wage-hour law. The figures were compiled for him by the War Production Board and were for the month of February, he said.

Only for two industries, in both of which 24-hour daily operation is maintained, did the figures show an average work week below 40 hours. These are the blast furnace industry with 39.8 and the smelting industry with 39.6 hours.

Other industries with their average hours follow:

Foundry and machine, 48.9; electrical machine, 42.4; brass and copper, 46.1; aluminum, 45.9; machine tools, 55; airplane frames, 48.7; shipbuilding, 48.2; explosives, 44.9, and engine making, 51.1.

Citing the great range in individual plants, the President said that one machine tool plant is working its employes 77 hours per week, a figure which he described as excessively high.

Administration officials have contended that there is no necessity for suspending the 40-hour law since employes are permitted to work more hours if time and a half pay is received for hours in excess of this standard. The additional cost

Victory Certain If None Shirks, Roosevelt Says

Proclaims April 6 Army Day, Dedicates It to Total War

President Roosevelt yesterday proclaimed next April 6 Army Day and Total-War Day and promised the world that America will win this war "as we have won every war we have fought."

But in a statement accompanying his proclamation, the President gravely cautioned the United States that this greatest of all wars will touch and profoundly affect the lives of every American and that all must share in the burden.

Mr. Roosevelt declared earlier this week what America now needs is more parades, more waving of flags, and more martial music to stir up its fighting spirit. His proclamation of Army Day will provide the step-off for this psychological surge, but he advised Americans that they should likewise give "special thought to the great responsibility for contributing unstintedly of their effort and of their means in order that our armed forces may be adequately equipped for victory."

The text of the President's statements follows:

"I have proclaimed April 6 Army Day. That day means more than ever to us this year. We are fighting an all-out war in defense of our rights and liberties.

"Army Day becomes, therefore, in fact a total-war day. It becomes a day when all of our citizens in civil pursuits can rally to the support of our armed forces, for only in the united effort of all of our forces—Army, Navy and civilians—can we find the strength to defeat our enemies.

"Never before in the 165 years of our history as a free republic under God have our armed forces had so much meaning for us all. We are engaged in our greatest war, a war

D. C. May Have Parade On Army Day, After All

There were indications yesterday that Washington may have an Army Day parade on April 6, after all.

Nothing definite was forthcoming, but it appeared that the decision to cancel the parade, an annual spectacle here, was being reconsidered.

President Roosevelt remarked at his press conference last Tuesday that this country could do with more parades, more band music and more flag-waving.

As Wage Parley Begins

General Motors, Union Clash Over Double Pay for Holidays

By the Associated Press

Detroit, March 20.—Starting the first wartime discussion of their working contract, high officials of General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) conferred here today and quickly disclosed diverse opinions as to what changes were required.

First clash of ideas brought into the open was the question of double pay for work on holidays.

The union demanded this plan be continued and that Armistice Day be added to the holiday list; the corporation proposed that double pay under any circumstances be eliminated for the duration of the war.

Principal union demands are for a flat $1 a day wage increase and wage boosts every 90 days based on cost of living; a $100 defense bond in lieu of vacation pay, and strengthening of the shop steward system.

C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors, described the union demands as "an attitude of 'business as usual' by the union."

The corporation's proposals were made public by H. W. Anderson, vice president in charge of personnel. In addition to abolishing double-time pay, they would provide that the union accept a plan of individual piecework or other incentive method of pay when the

Guthrie Seen As 'Capable, Courageous'

WPB Official Says That Ex-Textile Chief Knew Wool Order Would Be Unpopular

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A War Production Board official yesterday defended Robert R. Guthrie, resigned chief of the agency's textile branch, as a "capable and courageous" executive, whose decisions were generally correct, but who had "great obstacles" placed in his path by subordinates.

Testifying on the controversial circumstances surrounding Guthrie's resignation last Saturday, Alexis Sommaripa, textile consultant in the WPB civilian supply division, told a special House Military Affairs subcommittee that the former chief was correct in his decision to curtail domestic wool consumption and force blending of the scarce material with other fibers, even though he knew the order would be unpopular with the wool industry, some of whose representatives served as dollar-a-year men in Guthrie's office.

"Need Heads Banged Together"

On the wool order, he said, "the jury was locked" against Guthrie.

At the conclusion of a day's testimony by Sommaripa and earlier, by Guthrie himself, filled with details of conflicting opinions and of difficulties in obtaining data on military requirements for textiles, Subcommittee Chairman Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, exclaimed:

"It looks like what they need is a strong man (in WPB) who can take 'em by the hair and bang their heads together when they don't agree. But I don't seem to see any bruised heads down there except Guthrie's."

The former chief had told the committee of incidents of "insubordination," principally by subordinates drawn from various branches of the textile industry, when Guthrie directed certain actions with which they disagreed.

Specifically, Guthrie accused A. J. Rice, textile consultant of the WPB purchases division and liaison between the WPB and the Army, of failing to supply him adequate data on military requirements in order that appropriate measures could be taken in time to meet the needs.

In addition, he charged that a consultant who was loaned by a large firm manufacturing cotton duck refused to carry out orders to convert the carpet industry to duck manufacture, despite a shortage to meet Army needs.

Guthrie's troubles, he said, became pronounced after a reorganization which transferred his branch from the purchase division to the WPB bureau of industry operations, where his immediate chief was Phillip Reed, chairman of the board of General Electric Co.

Nylon Needs Are Cited

Asked by the subcommittee if he appealed to Reed after alleged lack of cooperation from Rice, Guthrie replied that he took this step, but Reed "dealt in glittering generalities."

Failing to get support from Reed, and being fought by the industry representatives who constituted the principal officers of his branch, Guthrie said he felt his "scissors" to cut red tape had been taken away from him, and therefore resigned.

Leader Welcomed

Melbourne, Australia (Saturday), March 21.—Gen. Douglas MacArthur arrived here early today and was enthusiastically greeted by a large crowd, thrilled by his promise a few hours earlier that Allied defense would give way to an offensive to drive the Japanese out of the Philippines.

The hero of Bataan, supreme commander of United Nations forces in the Southwest Pacific, in the first interview of his new position, said the present defensive phase of the war would be followed by a great Allied attack. MacArthur came here by train from Adelaide.

Gen. MacArthur's train pulled into the station, where a great crowd had gathered to welcome him, at 9:30 a. m.

"I am glad indeed to be in immediate cooperation with the Australian soldier," the general said when he arrived.

"I know him well from World War days and admire him greatly.

"I have every confidence in the ultimate success of our joint cause, but success in modern war requires careful preparation.

Depends on Materials

"This means furnishing sufficient troops and sufficient material to meet the known strength of a potential enemy.

"No general can make something from nothing. My success or failure will depend primarily upon the resources which our respective governments place at my disposal.

"My faith in them is complete. In any event I shall do my best. I shall keep the soldiers' faith.

"The President of the United States," he said succinctly, "ordered me to break through the Japanese lines and proceed from Corregidor to Australia for the purpose, as I understand it, of organizing an American offensive against Japan.

"The primary purpose of this is the relief of the Philippines. I came

Nazis Mowed Down Trying Desperately to Escape From Trap

By the Associated Press

Moscow, March 20.—The Russians put more pressure on the trapped German Sixteenth Army at Staraya Russa today, and reports from the front told of the capture of an important Nazi defense center and slaughter of hundreds of desperate Nazis trying by any means to break out of the encirclement.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, said the defense center on the north central front was captured after only its commander and 15 men were left alive.

Other dispatches said 1000 Germans were killed at a fortified junction point. It was not clear whether these accounts dealt with the same or separate actions, but all reports said the ring was drawing tighter and tighter about the starving, frostbitten Sixteenth Army.

U-Boat Visit In Martinique Raises Storm

By Wilfrid Fleisher

The entry of a Nazi submarine into Fort de France, Martinique, on February 21, to land a wounded German officer, came near to bringing about American seizure of the French island possession in the Caribbean, it was authoritatively learned here yesterday.

When the incident became known in Washington, the American Government sent a strong warning to the Vichy government that the United States could not allow French possessions to be used as bases of operations by the Axis powers and that unless definite assurances were received from the French government against such a practice, the American Government would be compelled to take such action as it deemed necessary to the security of the Western Hemisphere.

The German submarine called at Fort de France to land a German officer who was suffering from gangrene in the leg and was said to be in a dying condition. The submarine remained about half an hour in port and it was ascertained after three separate inquiries that it obtained no supplies and that no communication was established with any individuals ashore. The German officer is believed to have been wounded while engaged in raiding in the Atlantic.

This incident was the basis of diplomatic representations made both through Admiral William D. Leahy, American Ambassador at Vichy, and through Gaston Henry-Haye, the French Ambassador here, in the last week of February when the State Department disclosed it was seeking further clarification of the French government's attitude toward the Axis.

Casey Transfer Stirs Dispute In Australia

Curtin Indicates He Opposed Shift Taking Envoy From Washington

By the Associated Press

Canberra, Australia, March 20.—An empire family clash of personalities, policies and purposes between British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Australian Prime Minister John Curtin came into the open today and created a sensation that almost crowded war news from Australian front pages.

Caught in the middle was handsome, moustached Richard Casey, the Australian Minister to Washington, who is going to the Middle East as minister of state for the British, not the Australian, war cabinet.

The news of this Churchill appointment reached Australia on the London radio before Curtin had announced it himself, and today Australia's Laborite premier made it known in the House of Commons that he would table next week a white paper containing a complete documentation of how it happened.

Reveals Churchill's Surprise

This, it was disclosed authoritatively, will relate:

1. Curtin's extreme reluctance to have Casey leave the service of Australia in Washington.

2. Churchill's tartly expressed "surprise at the tone and substance" of Curtin's public reaction to the Casey appointment.

Australian public reaction, as expressed by the important Melbourne Herald, was "surprise, shock and disappointment," and a feeling that "if it is not altogether too late the matter should be remedied."

The Australian Associated Press said the B. B. C. broadcast of the appointment embarrassed the government and disappointed ministerial circles, although the "signal honor" to Casey was appreciated.

Roosevelt Weighs Tour to Sample Public's War Views

By Lee Carson
International News Service Staff Writer

President Roosevelt is seriously debating the advisability of a wartime tour of the Nation this spring or early summer.

According to his closest advisers last night, with whom he has discussed the proposed trip, the President is strongly in favor of the idea.

He was represented as believing that such a tour would:

1. Go far in boosting American morale, and weld the Nation more firmly for the long fight ahead.

2. Once again give him the opportunity to talk with the people and get their reactions to the critical questions and problems pressing the Chief Executive.

He wants to sharpen his keen understanding of America by listening to and visiting with "the plain citizens."

Raids in 36 Cities

60 Arrested as FBI Smashes $10,000,000 Lottery Ring

With simultaneous raids in 36 Eastern cities and the arrest of 60 persons, the Federal Bureau of Investigation said yesterday it had smashed a widespread lottery ring whose operations brought in ten million dollars yearly.

Leaders in the ring were named as Louis, Joseph, Harry, Frank and Charles Cohen, brothers, in a statement issued by J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director.

"Louis Cohen and his associates, because of their considerable wealth and political influence, have been able to remain in business despite the numerous attempts of local law-enforcement agencies to enforce local statutes barring lottery activities," Hoover added.

Louis Cohen was described as having a sizeable financial interest in various Miami, Fla., night clubs.

Others allegedly connected with the ring also have interests in the Miami area. These include Seymour Burns, Cohen's brother-in-law, operator of a restaurant and bar at Miami Beach, and Charles Cohen and Benjamin Lustgarten, connected with a Miami loan company.

Hoover said approximately four million lottery tickets had been printed weekly at Albany, N. Y., and 125,000 weekly at Fort Plain, N. Y.

The FBI did not detail operations of the lottery, but the pay-off reportedly was based on guessing beforehand certain figures in the daily Treasury balance.

The Cohens, except for Harry, were arrested. Harry is being sought. Louis, Joseph and Charles were seized at Miami, and Frank at Albany.

Raids also were made in the following cities: Williamsport, Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Erie, Schuylkill Haven, Upper Darby, Harrisburg, Reading and Lemoyne, all in Pennsylvania; Miami Beach, Fla.; Albany, Schenectady, Fort Plain, Ilion, Cohoes, Troy, Binghamton and Nineveh, all in New York; Burlington, Vt.; Rutland, Vt.; St. Albans, Vt.;

Threat of 'Third Front' Against Nazis Grows in the Balkans

By the Associated Press

Already throttled in the east and haunted by the spector of an Allied invasion in the west, Adolf Hitler was harassed today by reports of mounting discord among his own "new order" satellites and by fresh revolt among Europe's subject peoples.

A potential "third front" was threatened in the southeast with a revival of the long-standing territorial quarrel between Hungary and Rumania, both junior partners in the Axis setup.

Advices reaching London said the Hungarians were strengthening border forces facing Rumania after an exchange of long-distance charges and counter-charges between Budapest and Bucharest.

The Rumanians, still chafing at the loss of part of Transylvania to Hungary in 1940 at Hitler's dictation, started the latest flare-up. Acting Premier Mihail Antonescu of Rumania charged in a Thursday speech that the Rumanian army was insulted by "words and writings" in Hungary. His speech was interrupted by shouts of "we want Transylvania."

Budapest responded in kind yesterday with expression of shock at Antonescue's words and the "press armistice" between the two countries

Anzacs Ask Pacific War Council Here

Australian Minister of External Affairs Sees Roosevelt Upon Arrival in Capital

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The Anzacs want a Pacific War Council set up in Washington, one in which they can have a voice with America and Britain in shaping the broad strategy for fighting Japan.

Dr. Herbert Vere Evatt, Australia's minister for external affairs, arrived in Washington yesterday to urge the creation of such a council. Both Australia and New Zealand, he told reporters, agreed three weeks ago at Canberra that they ought to establish first-hand contact with the United States Government, hence his flight to Washington.

Dr. Evatt, whose post corresponds somewhat to that of Secretary of State Cordell Hull, agreed that there was a Pacific War Council in London, but he pointed out that the United States Government was not represented in this. He cited another reason for a Pacific strategy board here.

"Washington is somewhat closer to the scene of action than London," he observed.

Dr. Evatt went to the White House after his arrival yesterday, escorted by Maj. Richard G. Casey, the Australian Minister to the United States. He had a brief conference with President Roosevelt and it was arranged for him to return to the White House today.

He declined to comment on the dispute that has grown out of Minister Casey's selection by Prime Minister Churchill to be a British minister of state, representing the war cabinet in Cairo. Prime Minister Curtin of Australia protested against the appointment, saying Casey was needed in Washington.

Dr. Evatt, at his press conference in the Australian Legation, appeared to be confident that Australia would withstand Japan's assault, but he emphasized that further and heavier American reinforcements were urgently needed.

He issued a statement saying in part:

"The prime minister of the Commonwealth of Australia has sent me to the United States in this most critical hour in the history of Australia and New Zealand. My mission is to take counsel with the President and his service and other advisers especially in relation to the Pacific theater, for the outcome of the struggle there may determine the very life of our country.

"We have urgent reports and recommendations to submit here, and at a later stage the mission will go to Canada, and then to London.

"The Commonwealth government also has assigned to me the task of reviewing and coordinating Australian governmental activities in the United States, with a view to securing full cooperation with the United States authorities.

Sees Great Opportunity Now

"In the Pacific theater the democratic powers now have a great opportunity—and it may be the last one—of hurling back the Japanese aggressor.

"By his appointment of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the President has himself initiated the offensive, which is deeply appreciated by the people of Australia and New Zealand.

"The Japanese attacks on these southern democracies will be condemned by the conscience of all mankind . . . When Japan was devastated by earthquake, the people of Australia and New Zealand rushed to relieve the distress of the Japanese people . . .

"In Australia today, American soldiers are fighting side by side with Australians, and the spirit which animates them is the spirit of the Crusaders—a spirit of valor which is embodied in Gen. MacArthur. American soldiers in Australia know that they are fighting for America, but above all they are fighting for the same elemental things which finally make life worth living.

Must Have Aid at Once

"This valorous spirit can destroy Japanese aggression, but for it to do so, all the implements of war, especially aircraft, must be provided at once.

"Next month may be a month too late."

Dr. Evatt, in discussing the creation here of a Pacific war council, said that Australia and New Zealand thoroughly realized that the United States and Great Britain were the predominant partners. Nevertheless, he said, the Anzacs felt that since they were vitally affected, they ought to have a voice in the grand strategy.

The statesman from "Down Under" said that the council he had in mind would have nothing to do with military operations, which would be left to Gen. MacArthur. Rather, he said, it would deal with such questions as the selection of theaters of war, the allocation of war supplies, and matters involving grand strategy and the relationships between countries.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference yesterday that the United States is doing everything possible in the current phase of the war in the South Pacific, but he called attention anew to what he termed a little, old lesson in geography.

The Old Story—Ship Shortage

That lesson teaches, he observed, that to get anything to the southwest Pacific area takes an awful long time. Furthermore, he said, there is a world shortage of shipping.

He repeated previous declarations that all possible was being done when reporters asked whether he could elaborate, without going beyond the limits of military secrecy and strategy, on stories from Australia that Gen. MacArthur, supreme commander of United Nations forces, was considering plans for an eventual offensive and for relief of American and Filipino forces in the Philippines.

Incidentally, Mr. Roosevelt declared with an amused twinkle in his eye that he had told a charming lady who had supper at the White House recently that MacArthur had left the Philippines by rowboat, disguised as a Filipino fisherman, passed directly by a lot of Japanese submarines and warships, and rowed 2500 miles to Australia.

And some people at the table, he thought, actually believed him.

His Goal: Tokyo

Gen. Stilwell To Head All Yanks in Asia

By the United Press

Chungking, March 20 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell revealed today that all United States forces in Burma, India and China, as well as two Chinese Burma armies, have been assigned to his command, and he declared:

"Our happiest day will be when we see American and Chinese soldiers together in Tokyo."

America is determined to carry the war to Japan, he said, and toward that end all possible United States aid will be sent to China because "the Chinese soldier is the best trooper in the world—none can beat him if he has the equipment."

It was the United States general's first interview since becoming field commander of the Chinese Fifth and Sixth armies in Burma in addition to being Chiang Kai-shek's chief of staff. He said that United States forces on the Asiatic mainland had been assigned him by Brig. Gen. John Magruder's United States military mission to China.

The American Volunteer Group, fighter pilots who have been harassing the Japanese in Burma from their South China bases, apparently are not included in Stilwell's command since they are attached officially to the Chinese army.

Stilwell declined to say whether his Burma duties would be supervised by the British Burma command or would be considered part of the "China Theater," where in his high Chinese post he would have great freedom of action and decision.

Stilwell doged questions about Chinese assertions that not enough Chinese troops have been allowed in Burma, saying "There are never enough troops in war—we always want more."

Burma Clash With Chinese Costs Japs 700

New Delhi, India, March 20 (AP).—The Japanese already have suffered 700 casualties in heavy fighting now in progress south of Toungoo, Burma, where tough Chinese cavalrymen spurred into action against the invaders' armored cars, infantry and horsemen, the British announced tonight.

Official advices placed the scene on the Sittang front on the left wing of the British-Chinese line defending central Burma.

The fighting had spread northward from a point some 35 miles south of Toungoo, where the Chinese troopers swooped down on the Japanese yesterday, and the British—in a new defense line in the vicinity of Toungoo—were heavily engaged today.

Hard fighting continues, a special communique said.

In the first strong Chinese action on the British-held front since Chiang Kai-shek's troops took up positions in Burma last January, the cavalry detachment pounced on a mired force of 400 Japanese infantrymen and cavalrymen south of Pyu, killed 100 of the enemy and destroyed the column's complement of three armored cars.

Pyu is 35 miles south of the important defense point of Toungoo, on the eastern rail-highway route northward to Mandalay.

Tired British troops have been falling back slowly along this route and the locale of today's fight demonstrated not only the offensive determinations of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, the American commander of the Chinese forces, but it showed plainly their new liaison with their British allies.

Only official news from the Irrawaddy or western sector of the front, the important Prome Road area leading toward the Burmese oil fields, was that the Japanese, feeling their way northward from Rangoon, had sent patrols as far as Letpadan, 80 miles north of the lost capital. But the communique said the main enemy strength remained below Taikkya, 40 miles south of Letpadan.

through and I will return."

This brief but clear suggestion of what Allied strategy is to be—first, a dynamic defense and then a great push through the southern seas—came on a day of heavy air fighting over the Australian approaches. This was centered around Port Moresby, the southern New Guinea port about 300 miles from the Australian mainland across the Torres Strait.

While enemy planes were delivering two new and ineffective attacks on Port Moresby, Japanese field columns said to be led by pro-Nazi German missionaries apparently were finding hard going in their effort to push westward across New Guinea from the vicinity of Lae to the Markham Valley, a region of good air fields within easy striking distance of the Moresby Harbor.

Reports from that area stated that Australian snipers, presumably civilian volunteers, already were engaging the Japanese and their German accomplices, although it was officially announced that regular Allied troops had not as yet clashed with the invaders, and that the enemy's incursion had crossed only the easiest part of the valley. Ahead were miles of malarial swamps, jungles and ravines—a hard and twisted terrain.

[The London Star in a Sydney dispatch reported that two great Japanese invasion armadas including transports, heavy cruisers and aircraft carriers, were headed for Australia. The report was similar to claims in a broadcast Thursday from unoccupied France, which lacked substantiation from any other quarter.]

An afternoon Australian communique, summarizing enemy air raids of yesterday, declared that attacks on Darwin in which 50 bombs were dropped had killed two persons and injured eight and that over Port Moresby the enemy had been held by strong antiaircraft fire to altitudes of 20,000 to 30,000 feet. Even at this great range, it added, an enemy bomber was hit and crippled.

New enemy air raids on the Solomon Islands resulted in no substantial damage and no casualties.

Allied aircraft continued in strong counteraction, of which official details were scarce.

The day brought a new increase in the Allied forces, with the arrival of detachments of American airmen from fallen Java, and British and Australian troops from Singapore, and was one of still rising confidence in Allied ability to hold on.

Prime Minister John Curtin, announcing that Gen. MacArthur would reach the Australian capital of Canberra on Tuesday to confer with the war council, expressed full confidence in the general's aggressive promise that the Philippines would yet be reclaimed.

"What he says is the truth," declarde the prime minister.

"We will hold what we have and will take back what we lost.

"Gen. MacArthur's gallant men in the Philippines will find Australia and her allies advancing toward them."

In the first official inspection of a United States Army camp, the Australian Army Minister Francis Forde and Maj. Gen. Stantke, adjutant general of the Australian army, reviewed the troops while the bands played "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Forde examined a United States Army rifle, showed particular interest in American equipment and chatted with each member of his guard of honor.

"They are a fine lot of boys, keen and well equipped," he remarked to the American Maj. Gen. J. F. Barnes.

In a speech later to Australians, Forde said this country, encouraged by arrival of the Americans, was determined that future tactics against the Japanese would be aggressive and that Australians would fight shoulder-to-shoulder with the Americans.

Gen. Casey's Flight Cheers Wife Here

Mrs. Hugh J. Casey, 4401 Dexter Street Northwest, had been waiting day after day since last January for some news of her husband, a brigadier general serving in the Philippines. She knew she would hear sometime—whether good or bad.

Yesterday Mrs. Casey heard—and it was most cheerful news. A voice over the radio said that Gen. Casey was one of those American officers who had broken through the Japanese lines with Gen. MacArthur in his dash to Australia.

"I could hardly believe my ears," Mrs. Casey said last night. "It was the greatest news I have heard in a long, long time. Now that he has left the Philippines he will have much more room for maneuverability. You don't know how happy I am."

Had Not Heard Since December 26

Mrs. Casey had not heard directly from her husband since the day after Christmas. At that time he had been under fire of the Japs since early December. She received a radiogram in which he merely said he was safe. Last January the War Department announced that, on recommendations of Gen. MacArthur, five colonels had been promoted to the rank of temporary brigadier general for distinguishing themselves in fierce fighting on the Bataan Peninsula. In that list was the name of Col. Casey, engineer officer of the United States Far Eastern forces.

Casey, a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., was assigned to the Philippines in 1937 and came here in November, 1940. He served in the construction division of the Quartermaster Corps for about a year and, last September, returned to the Philippines.

A Captain 2 Years Ago

Two years ago Brig. Gen. Casey was a captain in the Army Engineer Corps. A little more than a year ago, he was major and soon afterward he was promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel, and then a colonel. Now, it's Brig. Gen. Casey, who received the rank while under fire.

Mrs. Casey, who has traveled extensively with her husband, has been living here more than a year. They have three children, Hugh, 16, a student at Woodrow Wilson High School; Keith, 13, Alice Deal Junior High, and Patricia, 18, who attends William and Mary College. Brig. Gen. Casey was graduated from West Point in 1918, a year ahead of schedule.

Churchill May Go to Commons In Casey Fight

By the United Press

London, March 20.—Prime Minister Winston Churchill, determined not to yield to Australian criticism of his appointment of Richard G. Casey, Australian Minister in Washington, as British State Minister for the Middle East, was understood tonight to be placing the dispute before the House of Commons.

His main defense, it was said, would be that Australian Prime Minister John Curtin had given the impression that he had at first favored the appointment.

Government circles were surprised and embarrassed by Curtin's blunt objections to Casey's transfer from Washington.

Some observers wondered if the dispute had raised the question of whether Australia was placing her fate solely in the hands of the United States and resented any interference by London, but it was not believed that Churchill was motivated by a desire to interfere.

Though there was some feeling, led by the Daily Mail, that the appointment should be reconsidered if it were going to increase Anglo-American friction, most commentators regarded it as a tribute to both Casey and Australia. Several stressed the importance of Casey's duties in Cairo in maintaining a barrier to Japanese and German ambitions to join hands on the Indian Ocean.

Curtin's protests against losing an experienced minister in Washington might be met, it was suggested, by arranging for Casey to stay there until he could acquaint Herbert V. Evatt, Australian external affairs minister, with all details of the post. Evatt arrived in the United States yesterday.

It was believed that Evatt was scheduled to come here from Washington to replace Sir Earle Page as Australian high commissioner and Australian representative in the empire war cabinet. As Evatt would take over the duties of minister in Washington only temporarily, it was reported Page would retain his post until he could be relieved.

Jap Charges Called Shield For Atrocities

Acting Secretary of State Welles expressed doubt yesterday that the world would take seriously a Japanese charge that British and United States forces have been unduly ruthless in their methods of warfare.

The Japanese government should know, Welles commented at his press conference, that if there are any nations in the world which have shown complete disregard for the rules of warfare and the precedents of international law then Germany and Japan certainly fall into that category.

In other quarters, the Japanese charge was viewed as a backfire of propaganda to obscure the atrocities of which the Japanese themselves have been accused repeatedly.

The Japanese navy itself grossly flouted international law by attacking Pearl Harbor prior to a declaration of war, it was noted.

Japan was a signer of the 1907 Geneva Convention which codified previous attempts to humanize the conduct of belligerents. This was framed in the light of the Russo-Japanese War, in which the Japanese similarly attacked by treachery.

The charges of atrocity thus far have been virtually all from the United Nations, and directly mostly at Japanese land forces. They were capped by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's recent statement to the British House of Commons that bound British soldiers had been bayonetted in occupied Hongkong and civilians grossly mistreated there and elsewhere.

In the Philippines the War Department has reported such instances as the bombing of the open city of Manila.

Japs to Retaliate For Alleged Violations

Tokyo (from Japanese broadcasts), March 20 (AP).—The Japanese navy charged today that the United States and Britain, since the start of the war in the Pacific, had waged "extreme warfare based on retaliation and hatred" and declared that Japan would reciprocate.

Alleging that Japan's foes were employing tactics in disregard of international law, the navy promulgated an ordinance "revising" its warfare regulations which it said were based on the London declaration of 1909 and precedents of international law.

The precise nature of the revision as well as the specific charges against the United States and Britain were not given.

Navy Minister Admiral Shigetaro Shimada announced the decision to the cabinet while the government took action to notify Japan's foes through neutral powers of the decision.

'Lucky' Texan Is Bad Luck For the Nips

By Pat Robinson
International News Service Staff Writer

Somewhere in Australia, March 20.—Capt. Alvin Mueller, of Seguin, Tex., is quite a man.

Tall, raw-boned, sandy-haired and freckled, he is known as "Lucky" to his fellow-American pilots, who are daily supplying fresh material for stories of the almost incredible heroism of American fliers in this increasingly active theater of the Pacific war.

But it takes more than luck to compile a record like Mueller's. On the recommendation of his superior officers he already has been cited for the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Distinguished Service Cross for valorous action.

If he can stay in one place long enough—and get a little time off from bombing the Nips—the decorations may be formally conferred.

But "Lucky" Mueller left only ten minutes ago on another mission.

I hope and pray he returns.

Sometimes They Don't

Only a few days ago a pal of mine said good night, and we made a dinner date for the next night. The next morning he went into a tail spin at 4000 feet. He didn't come out of it.

I had no appetite for dinner that night.

Japanese superiority in the air has accounted for the Japanese successes so far. Not individual superiority. Just the sheer weight of numbers. But this disadvantage is being rapidly overcome, and I can promise that it will not be long before the United States Air Force has indisputable control of the skies. The planes are coming, and they will be manned by fellows like Mueller.

He hopped off humming a Texas cowboy ballad. It was a solemn moment for me. I like the guy, and I worry.

But his pals reassured me. They swear a flock of guardian angels rides with this Texan wherever he goes.

And Bring Him Back

If I hadn't seen with my own eyes the plane in which he arrived safely from a recent mission I would never have believed such a thing possible. It had more holes in it than a hundred Swiss cheeses. There was scarcely a foot of it through which you couldn't see daylight.

Capt. Mueller climbed out of the heap of wreckage he had brought in to a beautiful three-point landing—and laughed.

"How . . . ? Where . . . ? What . . . ?" I questioned him in amazement when I managed to corner him later.

He shrugged and grinned, explaining that he and Capt. George Schatzel, of California, out on a two-plane bombing mission on Jap shipping, had found "a bit of action."

"George and I found some Jap transports and destroyers anchored in a harbor at nightfall," he said.

"We gave them a little surprise, setting four of them afire.

"After that we landed for refueling. At daybreak we discovered another concentration of Nip ships. This time we ran into trouble. Plenty of ack-ack all around. The Jap Zeros got after us, too.

"We got two of the ships and then scrammed with the Zeros right on our tails.

"George's plane was hit hard. One of his motors was crippled. I dropped back to cover him. By this time the sky was black with Zeros. I counted 17 of them nearby with others swarming up like hornets out of a nest.

"We had climbed to 26,000 feet. We were getting along all right, blazing away at the Zeros, when the skibbies managed to blow out my hydraulic system and shoot my supercharger away. The bomb bay was punctured and they blasted the fuel lines. I was carrying 400 gallons of gas. I still don't know how it kept from catching fire.

"Then the oxygen tank went," he said quietly. "Well, you know what that means at 26,000 feet. You just can't live upstairs without oxygen.

"I went into a dive at 430 miles an hour.

"Now, the Japs never dive straight down like we do. Their dive is more like a glide. That's how I got away.

"When I found my controls were still all right I cruised around looking for George. I couldn't find him. He had escaped in the clouds, but I didn't know that. I was in a sweat all the way back. But when I came in at the home port, there was George, safe and sound."

Thyssen Steel Works Bombed, R.A.F. Reveals

London, March 20 (AP).—The Thyssen steel works, between Hamborn and the Rhine, was bombed by a small number of planes during the R. A. F. raid on the Ruhr Valley's industrial centers on March 9, the air ministry news service disclosed today.

Large fires were started in the plant, one of the most important in the Ruhr Valley. It has its own power station.

"There can be little doubt that substantial damage was done," reported the news service, on the basis of photographs taken during the attack.

U. S. Bombers Hit Cruiser At Rabaul

Australian-based aircraft which set a large Japanese cruiser ablaze in a raid on Rabaul Harbor on the island of New Britain were American bombers, the War Department revealed yesterday.

The raid was made by two heavy bombers of the Flying Fortress type, the War Department said. It took place Wednesday.

Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia announced Thursday that a raid had been made on Rabaul by "our aircraft." A large cruiser was hit directly on the stern, he said, and near misses were observed on two other craft. The cruiser was left with columns of black smoke pouring from the stern.

In yesterday's only communique, the War Department announced also that 14 officers and one noncommissioned officer accompanied Gen. Douglas MacArthur on his hazardous jump from the Philippines to Australia. In addition to the officers, Mrs. MacArthur and their young son, Arthur, made the trip.

Army Communique No. 153

Text of the War Department communique issued yesterday as of 10 a. m. follows:

"Philippine theater: No activity reported.

"Australia: Two American Army heavy bombers of the Flying Fortress type attacked Japanese vessels in the harbor of Rabaul, New Britain Island, on March 18. A direct hit was scored on a large enemy cruiser.

"The complete list of Army personnel who accompanied Gen. MacArthur from the Philippines to Australia follows:

"Maj. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, chief of staff.

French Crewmen Reported on Sub

Santiago, Cuba, March 20 (AP).—Arthur Wilder, third officer of the American ship Olga, torpedoed and sunk off Cuba's north coast March 12, charged tonight that French and Italian crewmen were helping to operate the German submarine which sank his ship.

Wilder reached Santiago today from Guantanamo, where he and 31 companions were taken after their rescue by an American patrol plane and ship. Wilder said he had been taken aboard the enemy submarine when he jumped overboard from the Olga.

"There were French and Italians among the crew members I saw," the third officer said.

Wilder said he jumped overboard from the sub's deck and joined his companions in the water when the submarine crew relaxed its vigilance momentarily.

Casey's Transfer From Washington Causes Dispute in Australia

affair made available here went back to early in the winter when Casey spent a night with Churchill aboard a train during the latter's visit to the United States. At that time, he later informed Curtin, he found Casey anxious for a change.

On March 12 Churchill cabled Curtin, proposing Casey to succeed Oliver Lyttleton in the Middle East post, saying he had not yet asked Casey to take the job.

Curtin replied, acknowledging the compliment to Australia but saying that Casey's American contacts made his presence in Washington most valuable to the Commonwealth. He added he believed it would be in the interests of all concerned if Churchill would not approach Casey on the Middle East job at the present juncture.

Churchill replied that his practical chiefs of staff and ministers thought Casey the man for the Middle East post, mentioned Casey's desire for a change and said he (Churchill) hoped that such an appointment would "strike the note of using men from other parts of the empire in the United Kingdom service."

He then suggested the name of a certain Australian for Casey's Washington job, asked Curtin to reconsider and added:

"I trust you will not resent my intrusion into your affairs."

Successor Is Not Named

To this second message from Churchill, Curtin replied that the full extent of his demurrer was that Casey's presence in the United States at this time was invaluable in view of the current mission to America of Herbert V. Evatt, Australian minister of external affairs, who now is expected to act temporarily as chief Australian representative in the United States.

Curtin went on to say that Casey had never intimated to him or to any other minister that he was ready for a change, but he added that the Commonwealth government would not stand in the way if Casey wanted to make one.

Authoritative sources said Curtin did not intend to replace Casey at Washington either with Churchill's candidate or with Evatt on a permanent basis.

Greek Ship Sunk Off Virginia Coast

35 Crew Members, Rescued 45 Minutes Later, Reach Norfolk

By the United Press

Norfolk, Va., March 20.—All 35 crew members of a medium-sized Greek freighter which was torpedoed off the Atlantic Coast late Tuesday have been landed here.

Capt. Thamis Millas said the ship left New York Sunday, March 14, and was bound for the Panama Canal Zone with Army goods.

"The submarine fired two torpedoes," Millas said. "The first one we managed to avoid by quick maneuvering, but the second one, coming almost simultaneously, hit us square amidships. The ship began to list badly immediately. I gave the order to stand by the lifeboats and the radio operator sent out an S O S. The crew stood by the lifeboats 25 or 30 minutes before they were ordered actually to abandon ship."

Millas said he saw the submarine's periscope 200 yards away, but that the U-boat never came to the surface.

He said Navy planes flew overhead both before and after the ship was struck, but that no bombs were dropped by the planes.

"We were adrift about 45 minutes before being picked up," he said.

Captain Millas took the same vessel to Greece in a convoy which left the United States February 1, 1941, carrying Red Cross goods to Greece. When he arrived there German occupation had already been effected and the cargo, consisting of food and medical supplies, was left at the British Ministry in Alexandria.

'Little Navy Red Head' Sinks Axis Submarine

New York, March 20 (AP).—An unidentified "little redheaded" Navy gunner was credited today by a hardy group of American merchant mariners with the sinking of an Axis submarine which torpedoed and sank their freighter in the South Atlantic on the night of February 23.

The survivors came here yesterday only long enough to get their papers in order, sign on immediately with other vessels and put out to sea again.

The Navy gun crew, under the direction of Ensign Peter M. Wendt, said the survivors went into action right after the Axis torpedo crashed into the freighter's starboard bow.

Then, out of the midnight blackness of the sea, a parachute flare arose from the submarine, whose commander apparently wanted to view the damage he had caused and had surfaced about 200 yards astern.

But, said the sailors, the U-boat commander made one mistake. He had fired his flare to windward. A gust of wind blew the floating flare back over the submarine and the minute his target came into view, the little Navy gunner, who "was no more than 17, to look at him," let go with his hard-hitting deck gun.

In rapid succession, the redhead pumped three shells into the Axis marauder—shells that struck with a metallic clank that could be heard by the cheering crewmen of the freighter.

At that point, said the seamen, the flare went out and presumably the submarine went down because they neither saw nor heard any more of it during the next 12 hours they were afloat, first on the sinking freighter and then on a raft.

Riom Court Told Retreat Was Surprise

By the Associated Press

Riom, March 20.—The worst blow to the French army's morale was the order to fall back on the Maginot Line after penetrating into the Waarndt forest the first month of the war, Gen. Fernand Lenclud testified today.

He was the eleventh witness to appear before the special court trying five former leaders of France for responsibility for defeat.

"I believe there were different things that temporarily influenced the troops," Lenclud said. "The first was that one of the reasons given for the advance was to make it possible for Alsatians to return to their abandoned villages.

"The advance was costly in casualties. When the order came to abandon the positions, leaving behind our villages and our losses, the troops did not understand."

The general added, however, "they got over it later."

(The withdrawal from positions in advance of the Maginot Line was announced by the French high command on October 22, 1939. It was in this area, near Saarbrucken, that advance French and German patrols fought a lengthy series of engagements which resulted in numerous casualties on both sides during the first month of the war.)

Lenclud was emphatic on the subject of lack of equipment, saying men left on the campaign without blankets and it sometimes took three months to supply them.

When some of his troops left for Norway, he said, they were replaced by a regiment which the Germans themselves nicknamed the "string regiment," after they had taken some prisoners. This was the regiment, he said, that used strings for belts, straps and suspenders and burlap bags for clothing.

"Yet this regiment fought very well and got a citation after the war," he said.

close, then mowed down 400 of them.

Elsewhere, said the Soviet reports, German soldiers with their hands in the air trudged toward the Russian lines to surrender, but were shot in the backs by their own officers.

On the southwestern front, where winter has closed in again after a premature thaw, the government paper Izvestia said a Red army pincers attack with motorsleds had burst into a strongly fortified village and brought death to 413 of the Thirty-first German Engineers Battalion.

The night raid in a snowstorm was preceded by a heavy artillery barrage which drove the Germans to cover, the paper said. Then the firing suddenly ceased, the Russian sleds roared forward from two sides and caught the Germans in a crossfire as they tried to flee along a single road to the next town.

(Dispatches from Stockholm yesterday said the Germans were burning and blasting military stores and equipment preparatory to retreating from Kharkov, key city on the southwestern front.)

At the extreme south of the continent-wide battle line, the Russians said their Black Sea fleet and coastal batteries had smashed 15 German fortifications around Sevastopol.

Another abortive German air raid against Moscow was reported by the army paper Red Star, which said Russian planes destroyed 4 of 20 Junkers bombers with fighter escorts and forced the others to turn back before reaching the city.

Axis Shells British Patrols in Africa

Cairo, March 20 (U.P.).—Enemy activity against British patrols operating west of El Gazala, approximately 50 miles west of Tobruk, was reported today by British general headquarters.

German and Italian artillery shelled the British patrols, but did not prevent them continuing their reconnaissance work. Enemy activity was on an increased scale in the area between Mekili and Tmimi, southeast of German-held Derna. British air forces bombed landing [illegible] Martuba, in this same area.

The Soviet Tass news agency reported from Ankara that "violent anti-Hungarian demonstrations" broke out in Bucharest after the Antonescu speech. It quoted Ankara sources as saying Rumania and Hungary "are ready to fly at each other's throat at the very moment when Hitler is calling on these 'allies' to prepare the spring offensive against Russia."

Still another Balkan country—Bulgaria—was heard from through the Sofia newspaper Utro, which took notice of "fantastic rumors" being circulated in southeastern Europe. It reproduced Hitler's 1939 declaration, "I want peace in the Balkans . . . I ask nothing of Bulgaria."

4000 Serbs Executed

A dispatch received in Vichy from the Bulgarian capital commented:

"Recalling of this declaration on the eve of a spring which will in all probability bring to Europe military and political events of considerable import has made a deep impression in well-informed circles in Sofia."

This was taken to indicate that the precariously neutral Bulgarians were hoping they could take Hitler at his word and wouldn't be called upon to shoulder arms when the spring offensives begin rolling.

Coupled with these ominous signs from the Balkans were accounts of brutal, mass machine-gun executions of 4000 Serb patriots, or new arrests among restive Belgians and Frenchmen and harsher restrictions on Jews.

Reports of Massacre

Yugoslav government sources in London, quoting from eyewitnesses, told how the Serb men and boys were mowed down late last November after Hitler personally had invoked a 100-for-1 reprisal against Yugoslavs unconverted to the Fuehrer's "new order."

An attack was made on a German patrol shortly after Hitler's edict calling for the execution of 100 Serbs for every German soldier killed. At this ratio it thus appeared that 4000 patriots paid with their lives for the death of 40 Nazis.

The belated eyewitness accounts said the round-up of the Serbs started in Kragiyevac a month after Hitler issued his personal order.

"Germans started to search all houses for the men," the Yugoslavs related. "The men were led out of town. Nobody knew the reason for the measure.

Some Sing Through Night

"The Germans rounded up about 60,000 men and boys, from 15 to about 50. Although bewildered, all were not unduly perturbed and some even sang throughout the night.

"On Tuesday, November 21, the German soldiers proceeded to divide the thousands into batches of 40. Armed guards then led these groups into fields and bushes and began to work their machine guns on them.

"About 100 schoolboys with school books still in their hands were with them. The number executed was more than 4000. According to an official statement of the Mayor of Kragijevac, about 60 per cent of the whole male population was killed."

Across the continent, German authorities in Brussels announced yesterday that 50 Belgians had been arrested as Communists and ordered deported to eastern Europe in reprisal for recent "terrorist" attacks in Belgium.

Women and Children Killed

"The Nazi announcement said women and children had been killed and wounded in the last few days in dynamite attacks—apparently simultaneously in several Belgian cities—on "Belgian adherents of new order movements."

As for the actual perpetrators of these attacks, the Germans said they would be hanged, rather than put before the firing squad, because they imperiled lives in a "brutal" way.

At Roulers, Belgium, a butcher was sentenced to five months' imprisonment for allegedly making "insultating declarations" about Belgian volunteers fighting on the Russian front.

Dutch Labor Coerced

To help relieve a growing labor shortage in Germany, the Anela news agency reported in London that the Nazis had ordered that official subsidies given some 75,000 to 100,000 Dutchmen would be cut off unless they agreed to migrate to the Reich.

Jews were the target of new restrictions in the Axis countries of Hungary, Bulgaria and Slovakia.

man submarine to Martinique, the American Government declared in a formal note addressed to Marshal Henri Petain and communicated through Ambassador Leahy, that the use of French possessions as bases for the Axis powers would be a direct blow to the security of the Western Hemisphere and that unless assurances were received from the French government that it would bar Axis vessels or planes from French territories in this hemisphere, the United States would be compelled to take such action as might be necessary in accordance with its inter-American obligations.

This warning constituted a clear implication that if the French government failed to give the assurances sought, the United States would seize Martinique and possibly other French possessions in the Atlantic and the Caribbean.

The American Government has received several communications in reply to its warning. It was learned yesterday, in which the French government has given categorical assurances to the United States that no Axis vessels or planes will be permitted, under any circumstances or pretext, to enter any French port in the Western Hemisphere.

The French government stated furthermore that it intended to observe complete neutrality which, if strictly interpreted, would bar American vessels and planes as well as those of the Axis, but this statement was qualified by a declaration that the Vichy government intends to stand by the Robert-Greenslade and the Robert-Horn agreements with the United States giving to this country the right to station observers in the French possessions and to carry on patrol activities.

The attitude of France with regard to the French possessions in the Western Hemisphere, which has been the main point at issue between the United States and France within recent weeks, is considered here to have been satisfactorily clarified by the new assurances, and other minor points are expected to be cleared up within the next few days, it was reliably disclosed yesterday. As a result the relations of the United States and the Vichy government are regarded as less tense than they have been for some considerable time past although there is a disposition here to treat any assurances with circumspection due to the continued pressure from Germany under which the Vichy government is placed.

It is understood that the assurances regarding the French possessions in the Western Hemisphere do not extend to other territories under French administration, such as the Island of Madagascar, which is now the focus of attention in view of a possible Japanese attempt to bloc the Allied shipping lane by way of the Cape of Good Hope.

If They Have Time

Japs to Teach Language To Victims

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), March 20 (AP).—The Japanese are preparing a simplified form of their highly complicated language in an effort to advance their "greater East Asia program."

Domei announced today that a cabinet-sponsored meeting of scholars decided to choose 600 common ideographs or simple ideograph-combinations "as an initial step toward unfolding Japanese culture and a general understanding of the language to East Asiatic races."

"The Japanese language . . . presents a formidable challenge to beginners," Domei said.

(Japanese, probably the most difficult language used by any major people, is written in ideographs borrowed from the Chinese supplemented by Japanese syllabic signs to indicate its highly complicated inflections. Although Japanese newspapers attempt to use as few ideographs as possible a knowledge of some 2000 is necessary to read them easily. A well-educated person knows 5000 or more and the total is several times that number.)

Church Aroused

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, March 20.—Accusing the British Government of "consistently ignoring the wishes of the Christian people," the Church of England, through its official newspaper, today made a strong protest against the government's order to war factories, banks and other institutions to remain at work over Good Friday.

The government, the Church of England newspaper said, seems to go out of its way "to wound the susceptibilities of those who wish to worship God as well as to serve their fellowmen."

Has Real Scrap Now

New York, March 20 (INS).—The Army ended a scrap today for 28-year-old Jim Cunningham.

Cunningham became involved in an argument with a restaurant owner over the "coldness" of a hot sandwich he had ordered. A policeman was called. Said Cunningham:

"This fuss is all kinda silly. I'm due to report for Army induction in just five minutes."

He did.

Threat to Ban Tabloid Rouses London Press

By the Associated Press

London, March 20.—The committee of the London branch of the National Union of Journalists, together with a number of British newspapers, raised an outcry today over Home Secretary Herbert Morrison's threat to suspend the tabloid Daily Mirror on the grounds that its attacks on the government jeopardize the Nation's war effort.

The committee resolution charged the action was a "grave invasion of freedom of the press."

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard asserted that "France fell largely because her people were gagged and blindfolded." It proposed that instead of resorting to such arbitrary powers the government employ another section of the defense regulations under which the home secretary may prosecute offending newspapers in court if their publication is likely to hinder the successful carrying on of the war.

The Standard, the Star and several other papers reminded Morrison that the power of "summary execution" was placed in the home secretary's hands only at the peak of the 1940 invasion threat. The Star asked whether "the country is to be put into a sort of essayist's straitjacket?"

'Defense' Banned, The Word Is 'War'

The Army's newly created Service of Supply yesterday hitched up its trousers and kicked weasel words out the window.

No longer, announced Lieut. Gen. Brehon H. Somervell, commanding the SOS, will the words "defense" and "national defense" be used. Instead, the short, simple and adequately descriptive "war" will suffice.

This order applies to such terms as "defense plant," "defense contract," "defense program" and "defense work." It is, Gen. Somervell said, "in keeping with the recent assumption of a more aggressive attitude on the part of the Army."

Ugly Duckling Completes First Trip to Egypt

By Preston Grover

Associated Press Staff Writer

Alexandria, Egypt, March 18 (Delayed). — An American-built "Ugly Duckling freighter flying the Stars and Stripes has braved the challenge of Nazi bombers and submarines by sailing through the eastern Mediterranean into Alexandria bringing war materials to reinforce Britain's North African armies.

The ship—the first of her class to be commissioned under the United States emergency wartime building program—brought a note of cheer to British forces in Egypt, which have scarcely seen an American flag in Egypt since the beginning of the war.

The vessel, under command of Capt. Richard Ellis, a tall Louisianan, immediately began discharging her 10,000-ton cargo—which made the British almost pop-eyed with delight.

The nature of the cargo cannot, of course, be disclosed.

It can be revealed, however, that the ship, which was built in Baltimore and took on her cargo there, traveled around the southern tip of South Africa, through the Red Sea and the Suez into the Mediterranean.

Not a single enemy submarine or plane was sighted during the entire voyage.

She carried a naval gun crew.

The ship had a whole string of "firsts" to her credit:

She was the first begun and the first finished in the Baltimore yard; she was the first "ugly duckling" to pass through the Suez, and the first to reach Alexandria.

The British noted three Filipinos among the pantry help and immediately asked the captain:

"Have you Japanese aboard?"

The captain replied grimly:

"If there were, these Filipinos would kill them in a hurry."

Despite the epithet "Ugly Duckling" affixed to ships of this class, the British thought the new arrival was really a splendid ship and a harbinger of better times to come.

that will leave none of our lives wholly untouched.

"We shall win that war as we have won every war we have fought. We are fighting it with a combined force of free men that is, in Lincoln's words, of the people, by the People, for the people of the United States of America.

"Our Army is a mighty arm of the tree of liberty. It is a living part of the American tradition, a tradition that goes back to Israel Putnam who left his plow in a New England furrow to take up a gun and fight at Bunker Hill. In this tradition American men of many ages have always left the pacific round of their usual occupations to fight in causes that were worth their lives—from Lexington to the Argonne.

"In times of peace we do not maintain a vast standing Army that might terrorize our neighbors and oppress our people. We do not like to rehearse interminably the cruel art of war. But whenever a tyrant from across the seas has threatened our liberties, our citizens have been ready to forge and use the weapons necessary for their defense.

"It is the men of the Regular Army together with the citizen soldiers, our friends and relatives and neighbors of a few short days ago, and the men of all our armed forces, that we honor on Army Day."

Russia Extends Jap Fishing Pact

Moscow, March 20 (AP).—The Russian government announced tonight a one-year extension of the Soviet-Japanese fisheries agreement which expired December 31.

A protocol to this effect was signed today at Kuibyshev by Andrei J. Vishinsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs, and Lieut. Gen. Yoshitsugu Tatekawa, retiring Japanese Ambassador to Russia.

The announcement of the agreement said there had been "an exchange of notes on the question."

Birmingham Slides Down Ways Minus Usual Fanfare

By the Associated Press

Newport News, Va., March 20.—Minus much of the fanfare usually attendant upon a ship of her size, the United States Navy's 10,000-ton light cruiser Birmingham eased into the James River from her building ways at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. plant today.

The only concessions to ceremony were a three-minute talk by Representative Luther Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama, and the smashing of a bottle of champagne across the cruiser's bow by Mrs. W. Cooper Green, wife of the president of the Birmingham City Commission.

The launching was closed to the public and the sponsor's platform held a mere handful of people.

The Birmingham was the first of her class launched in the Hampton Roads area.

Ordered on July 3, 1940, the Birmingham was completed on schedule.

MacArthur Relative Christens Ship

Kearny, N. J., March 20 (AP).—Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, a sister-in-law of the hero of the Philippines, christened today the U. S. S. McCalla, one of two destroyers sent down the ways in a twin ceremony at the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., yards.

The McCalla was preceded into the waters of the Hackensack River by the U. S. S. Lardner. The ships were launched 20 minutes apart.

Mrs. MacArthur is the widow of Capt. Arthur MacArthur, United States Navy, elder brother of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. She is a resident of Washington.

Other relatives of the distinguished commander of United Nations forces in the southwest Pacific who attended the christening ceremonies included the sponsor's son, Bowman McCalla MacArthur, and his wife.

The McCalla honors the name of Mrs. MacArthur's father, the late Rear Admiral Bowman H. McCalla, United States Navy.

The Lardner was sponsored by Mrs. Sidney F. Tyler, 2d., of Paoli, Pa., a great-granddaughter of the late Rear Admiral James Lawrence Lardner, United States Navy, for whom she named the vessel.

Five Million Women Slated For War Jobs

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Of 15 million workers to be employed in American war industries by next January, about one-third will be women, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins declared yesterday as she admonished girls they must prepare themselves for factory work.

"Probably your greatest service is going to be right on the assembly line," she said, speaking at a conference on war demands for trained personnel at the Mayflower Hotel.

"Where else could the strong, Amazon bodies of American girls be better utilized?" she asked. Her viewpoint differed somewhat from that expressed by other conference experts who talked on opportunities opening up in such select fields as engineering, ship designing and chemistry.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, speaking last night, declared thousands more women are going to be needed in technical and supervisory jobs throughout the whole structure of the country's war work—and said the way to get them is to train them as rapidly as possible.

Programs Under Way

The Air Service Command and the Signal Corps already have training programs under way, he said, with the command expecting women to fill 25 per cent of the jobs at air depots before the end of 1942 and the Signal Corps training hundreds of women in radio apprenticeships. The Ordnance Department and the Chemical Warfare Service also are training women, and the War Department is seeking establishment of a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, where others will be trained to take over noncombatant jobs now performed by soldiers.

Both Secretary Patterson and Miss Perkins declared victory will come to America as a result of the old-fashioned and unconquerable spirit of its people. Secretary Patterson said what is sometimes spoken of as "complacency" in the country today is not that at all—but a consciousness of strength.

Miss Perkins took issue with the "rather well accepted belief" that labor has made no sacrifice in this war. "As a matter of fact, labor has accepted diluting and upgrading from within, admitting thousands of new workers to be trained on the jobs."

Gen. Frank J. McSherry, deputy director for labor supply and training, War Production Board, indicated that before the war is ended the question will no longer be where one wishes to work but where he is needed most. A central hiring agency supervised by the Government already has been considered and probably will be in effect before peace comes, he said.

104 Schools Represented

Representatives from 104 colleges and universities are in attendance at the conference, which is held under auspices of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations and will continue through today. Also present for the first time in the institute's history are representatives from numerous industries—including United States Steel Co., Standard Oil, the B. & O. Railroad, Westinghouse, duPont and American Rolling Mills.

The latter assured the former that women are going to be needed in great numbers in all types of industry, urged curriculum overhaulings to insure a tarined supply, and made a bid for the best graduates.

William L. Batt, director of the materials division of the War Production Board, declared all the Nation's man power, woman power and machine power are going to be needed in the war effort—and paid a tribute to the women of Russia who "are digging in the mines for vital war materials."

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service System, said that draft boards soon would quit ma ing deferments on the basis of dependency and begin making their primary question, "What are you doing?"

"Not for much longer," he predicted, "will we be able to select jobs merely for our individual preference We must shift to jobs which all of us think necessary, and one thing is certain—we must stop using up precious manpower for things that can wait."

He predicted a behind-the-lines mobilization in this country of perhaps 20 persons to each soldier in the field.

Arthur S. Flemming, United States Civil Service Commissioner, told the conference that approximately 500,000 jobs will be filled in Government war agencies during the next four months and that—beginning Monday—they will be recruited under war service regulation which permit elimination of much paper work and red tape.

To Go Outside Lists

"The commission will continue to hold examinations, but will go outside the lists and get better people whenever we see we can do so," he said.

"No more jobs are being filled on a permanent basis. All are for the duration and six months thereafter," he continued, expressing belief that the type of thinking which insists on job security during and after wartime must go.

A recent survey in Government war agencies, he reported, showed that personnel directors have had a marked change of heart about the capabilities of women since draft rulings have been stiffened as to "who is an essential man." Until the rulings, talk about utilization of women had been mostly academic and theoretical, he said, and the agencies said women could fill about 5000 jobs of the 36,000 to be open in 1943 on the administrative, scientific and professional levels.

Dr. Flemming said he was sure this estimate is now too conservative. According to the survey, which he is sure can be scaled upward, the Government in 1943 can take the following trained women: 1000 in administrative jobs, 65 chemists, 642 chemists, 186 engineers, 2800 in the medical services and 65 physicists.

Dr. George Beach, of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc., told a round-table discussion group, "We are very definitely confronted with a widespread participation of women in industry." He declared that when his company realized this a check of the field was made and it was "amazed to discover that among ten of our larger universities, there were scarcely 50 women chemists available."

"Under the spur of necessity," he asserted, "it is probable that a great deal of analytical work can be handled by women if sufficient adequately trained candidates can be developed."

He urged a streamlining of courses which would be given under the United States Office of Education's Engineering, Science and Management Defense Training program.

Director of the ESMDT program, Dean George W. Case, explained its scope and pointed out that more than 5000 courses are going in 178 schools with both men and women eligible for admission. "A lot of women are going into industry," he declared. "There's no place else for industry to recruit."

George W. Bailey, of the Office of Scientific Research and Development, said 25,000 women are going to be needed to serve with the armed forces in radio jobs alone.

Labor-Profits Curb Bill to Be Pressed

crat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate subcommittee, said he planned no investigation. Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman of the Senate Special Defense Committee, indicated there would be none by his group unless it was instructed to proceed by the Appropriations Committee.

Representative Vinson, looking over his third big mail delivery of the day, said it came from widely scattered sections in many States, and "I find no evidence of propaganda." He said telegrams received yesterday were mostly from labor organizations protesting the legislation, while the letters "are from people demanding it."

"Let the members go home and find out whether it is propaganda," suggested Vinson. "After the holidays we may have some more hearings and then the House will get a chance to vote."

Seconded By Oklahomans

Several Oklahoma members, who have received a barrage of mail from their State, made similar proposals. Representative Monroney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said critics of petitions from his State should be invited to go to Oklahoma to investigate. He said his letters came from sincere constituents speaking their own views. Representative Disney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said he would write President Green and ask him to go to Oklahoma personally to see if the letters were sponsored by an organized group.

Undersecretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard earlier appeared before the House Naval Affairs Committee in opposition to the Smith-Vinson bill to limit war profits to 6 per cent of cost, suspend overtime provisions of the 40-hour week and abolish the closed shop on war contracts.

After opposing the legislation in his departmental capacity, Bard said it was his personal opinion that overtime payments should begin after 48 hours instead of after 40 hours, as under present law. But he said "of course there will be difficulties" if this is done.

Clear Policy Urged

Bard urged the need of a war labor policy at the "earliest possible moment" and said that if such a policy cannot be established voluntarily "action by Congress might be necessary."

But like other Administration witnesses, Bard said that double time pay for Sunday or holiday work was "indefensible" except for protection of a man working seven consecutive days. He said the 40-hour week has not limited production "to any great extent," but has a bearing on costs. Men are working 48, 54 and in some cases 60 hours a week, he said. He thought open or closed shop conditions in war industries should be "frozen" for the duration.

Undersecretary of Navy Forrestal testified mainly on profits curbs in the bill. While favoring limitations on war profits, Forrestal doubted practicability of the 6 per cent of costs limit in the bill. He said he never had found a limitation that would work, but he thought the problem could be handled by careful checking on contracts and plant operations as well as through excess profits taxation.

At the request of the committee, Rear Admiral Charles W. Fisher, director of naval shore establishments, estimated that overtime payments to labor on a 56-billion-dollar program would run to about four billion dollars.

As Green and Murray appeared before the Senate Appropriations War Subcommittee to renew labor's "no strike" pledges and oppose legislative curbs on labor, Green made his charges of "an organized attempt to confuse and mislead the American people, to undermine their confidence in the war administration and to create disunity and strife in the ranks of workers and employers."

The A. F. L. chief charged this sprang from "a costly, well-financed and deliberately planned campaign" in Oklahoma, where he charged school children were urged to write letters and to contribute their lunch money and men were recruited by dozens to spread the "prairie fire."

Specifically Green mentioned the Oklahoma Publishing Co., publishers of the Oklahoma City Times and the Daily Oklahoman. He said these two papers launched a campaign beginning the week of March 8 making "a frantic appeal to repeal the 40-hour week and to outlaw strikes."

The Associated Press quoted E. K. Gaylord, president of the company and editor of the two papers, as saying: "We know of no funds which were raised anywhere in the State for the purposes of the campaign, and the campaign was freely joined in by other newspapers of Oklahoma."

Murray told the Senate subcommittee that "labor is sick and tired of the false charge that it is hindering war production," "recriminations" and attempts to "destroy its every right." He said he preferred not to speak of these "but to offer to Congress and to the Nation labor's pledge of cooperation."

C.I.O. Leaders Rally to Fight Labor Curbs

C. I. O. delegates yesterday were ordered to come to Washington Monday for an "urgent" conference to devise a plan to combat anti-labor legislation now before Congress and work out a war production incentive program.

The orders were issued by C. I. O. President Philip Murray, who asked union officials "to set aside all other considerations in order that its membership be properly represented at this meeting."

At the same time, Murray called the C. I. O. executive board into session for Tuesday. The Monday meeting will be held at the National Press Club Auditorium, the Tuesday meeting at Hotel Lafayette.

May Hear Nelson Speech

Meanwhile, the War Production Board diclosed that Chief Donald M. Nelson had been invited to address the C. I. O. group and probably would do so at a time still undetermined last night.

Calling of the special conference of C. I. O. representatives is another indication of labor's widespread concern over Congressional threats to enact restrictive labor legislation along the pattern of the recently introduced Smith-Vinson bill which would outlaw the closed shop and end overtime pay. It is presumed that the many C. I. O. delegates present in Washington will take time out to consult their Representatives and Senators and urge them to vote against all such measures.

WPB Suggestion Accepted

The production incentive aspects of the meetings are regarded as a reply to Nelson's appeal for increased production efforts by both labor and industry. Nelson recently suggested that "incentive pay" and rewards for exceptional performance should be used to increase production.

Informed C. I. O. sources expressed doubt that the conference would examine in detail other questions such as abandonment of double pay for Sunday work as recently suggested by the President or the bill reportedly sent the C. I. O. by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, for a part payment of loans advanced by the U. M. W. However, the C. I. O. executive board may go into these questions, it was said.

George Meyers, president of the Maryland-District C. I. O. Industrial Union Council and Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer, were appointed to represent this area at the conference.

Swiss to Ask British To Relax Blockade is recovered by Government payments on war contracts.

On Tuesday, however, Mr. Roosevelt made the public suggestion that double pay for Sunday work should be eliminated. Yesterday he described as a grand thing the proposal of Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. workers in San Francisco that they work free on Sundays.

Mr. Roosevelt opened his discussion of war labor matters by a reference to the large number of workers incapacitated through industrial accidents.

Amounting to 460 million man days in 1941, this loss was 5 per cent higher than the 1940 figure. In other terms, the 1941 industrial accidents involved 101,500 persons killed and 350,000 permanently disabled.

By contrast, the President recalled that respiratory illnesses had cost the country only 160 million man days in 1941, while strikes had affected 80 million man days.

ministrative assistant who resigned with him, told the committee that on one occasion when "common horse sense" indicated that the Army would need additional nylon for parachute material, and Rice was asked about it, Rice declared that the Air Corps needed only five million pounds to carry through until the middle of 1943.

Admitting that he was making a "serious" statement, Doherty added that Rice had previously told someone else that requirements totaled 15 million pounds.

Nevertheless, Doherty continued, Rice told Guthrie he would make himself "ridiculous" if he attempted to convert the duPont nylon-producing facilities into military grades of nylon.

Guthrie proceeded with the project, however, and received full cooperation from the Du Pont Co., whose entire nylon output is now needed in the Air Corps, it was testified.

Guthrie complained that as the official who was supposed to relay information on military requirements, Rice took the attitude "that everything was a secret between him and the Army. He didn't want to cooperate with me."

Rice had only "brief spasms" of supplying information, Guthrie declared.

The subcommittee, which has completed two days of its investigation of the Guthrie case, plans today to hear Doherty and Marshall Hale, jr., deputy chief of the branch, who also resigned with Guthrie. Other witnesses to be called, it was indicated, are Reed and Rice.

corporation determines such a method would step up war production, that wage differentials in some classifications be established to permit rewards to employes who produce more and better work, that promotions be made on the basis of merit, ability and performance, and that the number of union committeemen to handle complaints be reduced by 50 per cent.

Pointing out that the "incentive pay" was in line with proposals of Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, Wilson went on to take exception to a Nelson suggestion for labor-management plant committees.

"One reason MacArthur did so well at Bataan," Wilson said, "was that he was so surrounded by enemies that no joint committees could get to him to tell him how to manage his campaign. The cry in Washington is for one-man control of war production. Then why have joint control in war productoin plants? Joint committees are usually alibi committees."

Coincident with the start of the negotiations here Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the corporation, said in a statement that average annual earnings of G. M.'s regular hourly rate employes in the United States last year were $2141, compared with $1804 in 1940.

The union last night rejected a corporation proposal that, in view of G. M.'s concentration on war production and the corresponding public interest, the discussions be made public.

Court Denies Bail to Viereck; Hill's Sentence Is Reduced

Found It 'Fun'

Blonde Gets 5-Year Term For Spying

LUCY BOEHMLER

By the Associated Press

New York, March 20.—Lucy Boehmler, blonde 19-year-old high school girl, who said she "found espionage lots of fun," was sentenced today to five years in Federal Women's Reformatory at Alderson, W. Va., by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard.

Judge Goddard also sentenced Carl Herman Schroetter, 48-year-old skipper of a Miami, Fla., fishing boat, to 10 years imprisonment.

Both pleaded guilty to participation in the espionage ring headed by Kurt Frederick Ludwig, master Nazi spy, who was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment recently.

Six other members of the ring were sentenced last week to terms ranging from 12 to 20 years each, including Mrs. Helen Pauline Mayer, 26-year-old housewife, who received a 10 to 15-year sentence.

In sentencing Miss Boehmler, Judge Goddard pointed out that she had cooperated with the Government in testifying at the trial of Ludwig and his agents, but that "it is desirable and necessary for you to be confined at least for the duration of this war for reasons that you can appreciate."

The court, at the suggestion of United States Attorney Mathias Correa, left the term of the court open for the five-year period to take such action as might be necessary."

Miss Boehmler acted as secretary to Ludwig and testified that in the spring of 1941 she accompanied Ludwig on an automobile tour of Atlantic Coast defenses, Army and Navy airports and defense industries.

(She testified they visited Camp Meade and other installations close to Washington.—Editor's Note.)

She testified that data gathered by Ludwig on the tour was sent to Nazi agents in Spain and Portugal, some of the reports going directly to Heinrich Himmler, chief of the German Gestapo.

Five Justices Find No Grounds For Nazi Agent's Bond Before Appeal

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The United States Court of Appeals here yesterday ordered the German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, kept in jail pending review of his conviction under the Foreign Agents Act.

The court's action came less than 24 hours after it was urged by Government counsel, who said they feared the Nazi Government would send a submarine to rescue its agent if he were admitted to bail.

Viereck was found guilty, on March 6, of unregistered propaganda operations. Justice F. Dickinson Letts at once sent him to jail and later sentenced him to 2 to 6 years in the penitentiary.

Without asking for a new trial, Viereck appealed, noting 40 technical objections to the proceedings. He claimed these were "substantial" questions of law and asked to go free on bond while they were considered.

5 Justices Deny Petition

"No sufficient ground" for granting this petition was found yesterday by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner and Justices Harold Stephens, Justin Miller, Fred Vinson and Henry W. Edgerton. In a curt, 50-word order they denied the bail.

Meanwhile Justice F. Dickinson Letts of the District Court granted mercy to the Capitol Hill purchasing agent of the Nazi propaganda machine. This was George Hill, 45-year-old former secretary of Representative Hamilton Fish.

Saying that Hill was "more or less of a dupe" in the scandal that landed him in the penitentiary for perjury, the justice reduced his sentence from 2-to-6 years to 10½-to-31½ months.

"Judge Letts was very considerate," Hill said afterward, "and I am glad that I was able to straighten out my statements before the same judge that heard my trial . . . I am going to pay my penalty like a man and when I am released I will try to start life all over again."

Lied Before Grand Jury

Hill lied before the special grand jury on Axis agents—swearing that he did not know Viereck and that he did not place eight mailbags full of missing evidence in a storeroom used by Fish at the Capitol.

After being convicted of two perjuries Hill took back these lies and was a Government witness against Viereck, testifying that he worked for Viereck after being introduced to him by Representative Fish. Neither Fish nor Viereck denied it. Hill claimed he wanted to tell the truth soon after he was indicted but was dissuaded by his attorney at the time, former Representative John J. O'Connor.

Hill's present counsel, Richard A. Harman, told Justice Letts yesterday that the slender little World War veteran told the true story of his own volition, without suggestion from Harman.

Hill, said Harman, was victimized by bad advice and by "seeming friends who used him for their own purposes."

Justice Letts allowed O'Connor to file a statement joining the plea for mercy for Hill. The justice commented that O'Connor "took occasion" to answer the criticism that had been directed against him.

Both Hill and Viereck were convicted by Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., who is now a Navy officer. Maloney agreed to mercy for Hill, saying that if justice could be perfectly done "the men who told Hill not to tell the truth would take his place in prison."

Arguments Start On Ewing Plea For New Trial

Arguments on a motion seeking a new trial for Orman W. Ewing, former Democratic National Committeeman, convicted last month for the rape of a 19-year-old Government girl, were begun yesterday before Justice James W. Morris.

They are scheduled to continue this morning at 10:15 in a special Saturday court session.

In a two-hour argument, unconcluded at the close of yesterday's session, Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin told the court that Ewing should have a new trial because of improper procedure by the prosecutors and because of newly discovered evidence.

He asserted that the new evidence—affidavits from two men who claimed that they were asked to help "frame" Ewing—provided a missing "motive for this girl to falsely accuse Mr. Ewing of this offense."

80-Cent Fee May Cost Cabbie Job

took the Congressman home and told him the fare was 80 cents, Representative Sheridan "got all excited and told me, 'I'm going to make it tough for you.'"

Strickland says he has been driving a cab for 12 years.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday ordered Chairman Gregory Hankin to ask Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech to prosecute the cab driver to the full penalty of the law. His case was cited to the Board of Review and Revocation for possible loss of his license.

The cab driver also faces a possible $200 fine.

Representative Sheridan, who could not be reached last night for comment, is a member of the House District Committee. Hankin said this connection of the Congressman had "nothing whatsoever" to do with the Commission's decision to prosecute Strickland.

Hankin Set to Be Strict

"We simply can't have cab drivers overcharging their fares," Hankin said. "We have to be strict in that regard."

The corporation counsel also was asked to prosecute Paul E. Wartenbe, driver, or Maxwell Marx, owner, of a Diamond cab for overcharging three or four passengers riding together.

This is the first prosecution ordered under the new taxi regulation promulgated in connection with the pick-up service. Although Wartenbe was not operating this service, he should have prorated the prevailing rate among his riders instead of charging each of them the full fare, the commission ruled.

Wartenbe faces a $200 fine, but there is no intention of revoking his hacker's license. Hankin regards Strickland's offense as the more serious, because he refused to show the Congressman his identification card.

Huge Lottery Ring Smashed by FBI

Since 1931, Hoover said, Louis Cohen and his brothers, Harry, Frank and Charles, had been expanding their lottery business until it "now extends throughout most of the Eastern seaboard area of the United States."

Louis Cohen, described as the "moving figure of this ring," together with Sidney Werner, now dead, originally organized the lottery business in Philadelphia in 1926 Hoover said, adding:

"These two individuals were in business in a small way until 1931, when Sidney Werner died and Louis Cohen took over the entire business. The Cohen brothers obtained complete control of all lottery operations by organizing new lotteries under various names and by purchasing lottery rights from other operators."

Rep. Rogers to Ask Medals for Workers

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, said last night she will introduce a bill Monday asking Congressional medals for laborers in war industries.

Under provisions of the bill, she said, medals could be presented either to individuals or groups.

Coast Guard Order Regulates River Traffic in Capital Area

A drastic order designating areas which boats moving on the Anacostia and Potomac Rivers should avoid, requiring all river craft to secure movement licenses and all operators and crew members to carry identification cards was issued yesterday by Lieut. P. B. Mavor, United States Coast Guard, captain of the port of Washington.

The order was issued with the approval of Rear Admiral George Pettengill, U. S. N., retired, commandant of the Potomac River naval command.

Restricted areas were designated within 100 yards of all Army and Navy activities in the two rivers. Private vessels were forbidden to enter these areas except in emergencies. Vessels also were forbidden to moor, anchor, or hover near any supporting pier of any bridge over the rivers.

Movement licenses and identification cards are to be issued by Mavor, according to the order. All persons on boats, except occasional visitors, must carry identification cards. Applications should be filed at Coast Guard Headquarters, 1020 Maine Avenue Southwest.

Enforcement of the order will become effective in the "near future," Lieut. Mavor said. He said that it had not been determined whether rowboats and canoes would be affected by the order.

The order will not affect the operation of commercial river steamboats which already move on set schedules, with the approval of the Coast Guard.

Aiken Predicts 2-1 Vote Will Seat Langer

Senator Aiken (Republican), of Vermont, one of the mainstays of William Langer in his fight against Senate ouster proceedings, last night predicted that the Senate would vote "two-to-one" against unseating the North Dakota Republican.

Earlier, Aiken's name was associated in Capitol reports with an informal "poll" which was said to have shown 47 Senators in favor of giving Langer his seat, 21 against and 18 undecided.

As Senate debate on the Langer case ran to the end of its second week and gave indications of continuing for the better part of a third week, Aiken declared that "only a miracle" would prevent Langer from attaining full rights as a member of the Senate.

Seated Conditionally

The Senate is debating a 13-to-3 recommendation of its Elections Committee that Langer be "excluded" on grounds that he has been guilty of conduct involving "moral turpitude." He was accused of such conduct in a petition filed with the Senate by North Dakota residents, but was seated conditionally January 3, 1941, pending Senate investigation.

This procedure, which permitted Langer to function as a Senator without clear rights to membership, was questioned during yesterday's debate by Senator Stewart (Democrat), of Tennessee. Stewart, who voted with the majority of the elections committee to "exclude" Langer, declared:

"It is not easy to vote against a man you've rubbed shoulders with a year or two."

"Morals" Probe Assailed

Senator Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, in closing a three-day argument in defense of Langer, contended that the Senate had no right to add a "moral" qualification to Senatorial qualifications set forth in the Constitution. To exclude Langer, he maintained, would be "scuttling the Constitution."

Observing that there was no question about the legality of Langer's election, Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, declared that the Senate lacked authority to examine the moral life of a Senator-elect.

Rationing Plan For Gas, Sugar Still Incomplete

Continuance of present stop-gap rationing of sugar and gasoline is the best that officials of the Office of Price Administration can promise confused consumers for some time to come.

The setting up of rationing machinery is a tremendous job, it was explained, and OPA is reluctant to go ahead until everything is in order. Present status of the two commodities is as follows:

Sugar: Plans to put the Nation's sweet tooth on rations were announced January 24 when the Government Printing Office was ordered to go ahead and print 130 million rationing cards. The cards are now printed and ready for distribution, but no date has been set. The date will be announced shortly, an official said yesterday. He declined to say how many weeks would elapse between the announcement of the date and the actual date.

Since last December, the burden of rationing has fallen upon the Nation's retailers. Sugar deliveries to retailers have been restricted to a percentage of last year's supplies and the dealers have done thir best to spread around their ever-dwindling supplies. As a result, sugar has disappeared from open grocery store shelves and is hidden under counters to be doled out to steady customers.

Gasoline: Last summer, Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes restricted gasoline deliveries amid protests which eventually forced Ickes to withdraw his restriction order. Last Saturday, Donald M. Nelson, production chief, ordered deliveries to retailers on the East Coast, Oregon and Washington curtailed 20 per cent as a preliminary to rationing. Friday, Ickes announced that rationing would begin in about six weeks.

Yesterday OPA officials could shed no further light on the motor fuel situation, stating that such details as "who will get how much" gas are still being worked out.

OPA officials also could not say whether the same rationing machinery to be used for sugar rationing will be used for gasoline. As with sugar, until a system is set up for gasoline, the rationing burden falls on the retailer, who must decide which of his customers will get gas.

Meanwhile, tire rationing boards have been set up throughout the country and have been handling the job of doling out the dribble of tires and new automobiles to limited classes of users who are regarded as essential.

F. A. Claveloux Dies at 90; Rites Set for Monday

Funeral services for Francis A. Claveloux, of 2000 North Capitol Street, who died at his home yesterday, five days before his ninetieth birthday, will be held Monday at 9 a. m. in St. Mark's Church, 1900 North Capitol Street. Burial will follow in St. Joseph's Cemetery, Hanover, Pa.

A native Washingtonian, born here in 1853, Mr. Claveloux served for many years as a mathematical instrument maker in the Signal Corps at Fort Myer. He was later transferred to the Geodetic Coast Survey, which took form under the Department of Agriculture as the U. S. Weather Bureau. In 1926, Mr. Claveloux was retired after 48 years as an instrument maker.

He leaves three daughters, Mrs. Ann Kinslow, of 5101 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest; Mrs. Norris Berkley, of Luxmanor, Md., and Irene Claveloux, of 2000 North Capitol Street, and three sons, Mark Claveloux, of Clifton, Va.; Frank Claveloux, of 1220 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, and Bernard Claveloux, of 1721 Lawrence Street Northeast.

Jones Accused Of Sidetracking Little Business

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, chairman of the Small Business Committee, last night accused Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones of proposing "fatal" changes in the committee's bill for "mobilization" of small manufacturers for war production.

In effect, although his cautiously worded statement made no direct charge, Murray maintained that the aim of the amendments was to keep Jones in control of Federal loans to small business.

The same issue—whether financial aid to bring small industries into war production is to be guided by War Production Board Chairman Donald Nelson or by Jones, the Administration's loan czar—was disclosed at the same time to have split widely the Senate Banking Committee.

The Banking Committee has been conducting hearings on legislation, unanimously supported by Murray's seven-man committee, to create a Smaller Plants Corporation with 100 million dollars capital to be administered by a board of directors to be appointed by Nelson.

Cites Financing Estimates

Jones' amendments, revisions of changes he proposed several days ago, were submitted to the Banking Committee yesterday.

The effect of the amendments, Murray declared, "would be to take away the capital of the corporation, together with its powers of providing equipment and facilities for small plants, and leave the corporation in the position of merely recommending to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans not exceeding $100,000 to finance improvements or supply facilities."

Murray cited estimates Jones submitted to the Banking Committee as indicating that less than 1 per cent of nearly 11 billion dollars loaned for war plant financing has gone to small concerns.

The amendments, Murray maintained, would have the effect of destroying the initiative of the corporation and would compel it to await approval of Jones' RFC before "it could proceed." The result, he added, would be "to restore the old difficulty of requiring a small concern to have a contract before it could get a loan."

"Entirely Inadequate"

Murray declared the $100,000 limitation on loans to any one concern to be "entirely inadequate."

One of Jones' amendments, the Senator pointed out, would designate as the corporation's directors the chairman of the War Production Board, his deputy, and representatives of the Army and Navy and the Jones-dominated RFC. Murray indicated his belief that Jones would dominate the board through its Army, Navy and RFC representatives. Recalling unanimous agreement by his committee that "the amendments proposed would destroy the effectiveness of the legislation," he declared:

"These changes would be fatal to the purpose for which the bill was devised, that of creating an active, aggressive agency directly under the War Production Board . . . to mobilize the 45,000 small manufacturing plants of the country that can be adapted to war production."

Jones vs. Nelson

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, who has presided at hearings on the bill, said last night that the issue of Jones versus Nelson is "close" in the committee. Some committee members, he asserted, feel that the "experience of the RFC" should be used in making small business loans. The Banking Committee is scheduled to take action on the bill Tuesday.

Undersecretary of War Patterson yesterday told the committee that the War and Navy Departments expect soon to be able to guarantee loans to provide subcontractors with necessary capital for war production.

If You Don't Hear Sirens Tuesday, Write—Don't Phone

Thirty-eight air-raid sirens will sound off experimentally Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. If you hear them, don't be alarmed, Defense Coordinator John Russell Young advises, because they won't signify an air raid or even an air-raid drill.

If you don't hear them, that's reason to be concerned, because it will mean that your part of town is not fully covered by the sirens' range. In such case you are requested to write to Capt. Herbert A. Friede, chief of communications, Room 512, Old District Building, giving your name and address and the location of the silent spot.

You are requested not to telephone.

The 38 electrical sirens, whose installation was completed last night, are the subsidiary part of the planned air-raid warning system. The major signals, 43 air and steam horns, have not all been received in the District, and few have been installed.

Clergy Asked to Submit Dates of Special Rites

Clergymen of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish churches were asked last night to furnish the District civilian defense office with dates of all special religious observances, that blackout tests may be scheduled so as not to interfere with them.

In letters to the Rev. William Sweeney, Dr. Worth Tippy and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, all of whom have been designated liaison men between their church associations and his office, Defense Executive Lemuel Bolles also requested that all churches be equipped with blackout facilities and the congregations drilled in case of a real or test raid.

Chinese Merchants Give $200 to Red Cross

The war fund of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross is richer today by $200 contributed by the On Leong Chinese Merchants Association. The Chinese are grateful for the help given to their people in the Far East by the Red Cross and have contributed other checks to the organization.

The Armenian Ladies Church and school aid organization has contributed a check to the Red Cross for $25, which they raised by giving a dance and concert.

Capital Transit to Reclaim 200 Tons of Old Track

Irrespective of the high cost of labor and the scarcity of replacement materials the Capital Transit Co. will reclaim more than 200 gross tons of unused track in Washington in an effort to assist the District "Salvage for Victory" campaign, it was announced yesterday by E. D. Merrill, general manager of the company.

The track to be removed is located principally in Southwest Washington and are parts of old street car routes recently replaced by motor buses. The cost of removal and necessary repaving of affected streets will be more than $11,000, Transit Co. officials stated.

At a conference of a special advisory committee established to cooperate with the Salvage Committee it was disclosed that there are more than 1000 gross tons of such tracks buried within the District. Because of the high costs involved, however, only 200 tons can be removed this year, Merrill stated.

D. C. Citizens Urged To Stock Up on Coal

While the District is enjoying its first warm days, the Commissioners urged citizens last night to get coal against the chilly days of next winter.

In a proclamation prompted by the Bituminous Coal Consumers' Counsel, the Commissioners called attention to the possibility of a coal shortage because of defense needs in fuel and transportation.

Home owners and other coal consumers, such as laundries, stores, apartment houses, churches and clubs were therefore requested to order their next winter's supply as soon after April 1 as possible, to accept immediately as much as they can store, and to use that sparingly.

Auxiliary Police Fully Equipped

All 3800 auxiliary police are now fully equipped and ready for action, Police Inspector Milton D. Smith, in charge of supplies, announced last night.

This has been done in spite of priorities restrictions and other regulations required by the war effort, he said.

Equipment includes 3800 nightsticks, 3500 badges, 3800 raincoats, and 3500 overseas caps. The 300 auxiliary police who lack badges and overseas caps do not need them because they have indoor assignments at various auxiliary police headquarters. They were supplied with batons and raincoats for possible emergency use.

Patricide Admits He Killed 75-Year-Old Grandmother, Too

By the United Press

Los Angeles, March 20.—Courtney Fred Rogers, bearded 24-year-old church organist, who concealed the killing of his parents for months, confessed to authorities today that he also had killed his grandmother with a dose of arsenic six years ago.

All three killings, he said, stemmed from his desire for insurance money with which to further his musical education. He was 18 when he killed Mrs. Sophie Spiegelman, 75, his maternal grandmother, knowing her money and property would go to his mother.

Weeks ago Rogers confessed he chloroformed his mother February 10, 1941, to inherit the family home. Last October 25 he asphyxiated his father with gas and set the house on fire by allowing candles to burn down into oily rags. He collected $1000 insurance on his father's death, and $1600 from insurance on the house.

"I killed my grandmother for her money," he told sheriff's officers, "I knew her property would go to my mother. When the time came I killed my mother, then my father. I wanted the money to continue my musical education."

It was not until he learned that authorities, aroused by his previous confessions, were investigating his grandmother's death and planned to exhume her body for examination, that Rogers confessed to killing her.

The elderly woman died December 6, 1935.

He said he conceived his method while playing at the church organ late at night.

"I can think better when I play like that alone," he said.

Rogers was trapped through investigation of a comparatively minor crime. He spent part of the money from the house insurance for jewels, then reported them stolen and collected $1600 insurance against their theft. An insurance company investigator traced the jewels to a San Diego warehouse and Rogers was arrested.

Schram Urges Gains Tax Be Lowered

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock Exchange told the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday that the time had arrived for the Treasury and Congress to regard the capital gains tax as a "revenue measure" and realize that the present levy has "defeated its own purpose" in that direction.

Schram appeared before the committee in the course of a day of hearings devoted to the capital gains tax in which the majority of witnesses favored the provisions of the Boland bill designed to eliminate the present distinction between long-term and short term capital gains and levy flat rate of 10 per cent against them.

"It seems to me," said Schram, "that those who urge a higher capital tax lose sight of the very fundamental fact that you cannot derive revenue from a capital gains tax unless you have purchases and sales of capital assets. I think it is demonstrable that the high capital gains tax has been an important factor in discouraging people from making capital investments. In addition it has discouraged those with profits from realizing on them.

Benefits of Lower Tax Cited

"I am convinced that the lowering of the capital gains tax will not only help to shift a portion of the financing of the defense effort from Government to private capital, but also to increase the revenue derived from the capital gains tax itself."

The Treasury's proposals for changes in the capital gains tax recently outlined to the committee by Randolph M. Paul, new tax adviser to Henry Morgenthau, jr., secretary of the Treasury, as an alternative for the Boland bill were analyzed adversely by Elisha M. Friedman, New York economist.

He said that the Treasury proposals are not supported by Treasury statistics. For example, the Treasury now proposes a 30 per cent rate. This rate, he said, proved futile in the past, as proved repeatedly by the official statistics of previous years. The Treasury now proposes a five-year carryover. This feature would benefit taxpayers, but destroy all revenue, because Friedman pointed out there was hardly a five-year period in history when capital losses did not exceed capital gains, excluding the year 1925 through 1929, according to figures released by the Treasury on March 18.

Boland Bill Provisions

The Boland bill, said Friedman, proposes to (1) segregate capital gains and losses from regular income; (2) restrict deductions of losses to segregated gains; (3) set a rate to produce maximum revenue; (4) eliminate the holding period, and (5) carry losses forward two or three years.

It should produce 200 million dollars to 600 million dollars of revenue in a year. The present low rates produced an average of 30 million dollars in the last decade and only 12 million dollars in 1940. The present Treasury proposals should produce even less revenue.

Robert B. Dresser, of Providence, R. I., said that tax is "unsound in principle" because it reduces the volume of "venture capital" for business. A rate of 10 per cent, applicable during the war, would produce "very substantial" revenues, he said.

Three witnesses familiar with finances in prewar France, the Netherlands, and Belgium also testified on the capital gains question.

Andre Istel, former financial adviser to the French republic, told the committee that France rejected the capital gains levy on the ground it tends to retard selling when prices are rising and when profits would be the greatest, and increase selling during depression periods.

Albert Andriesse, a former Amsterdam banker, testified that the Netherlands never enacted a capital gains tax because it "not only would have a harmful effect on new enterprise, but it also would spoil the free functioning of security markets."

D. M. Van Buren, former finance professor at the University of Brussels, said that Belgium never applied a capital gains tax to individuals because price fluctuations made it an "uncertain" source of income.

He Was Once a Hitler Youth, But He's in Our Army Now

Staff Sergt. Egon Hanfstaengl

A strapping 21-year-old United States Army sergeant yesterday looked down Pennsylvania Avenue toward the Capitol, thought back to the time when he goosestepped down the Unter den Linden in Berlin at the head of a regiment of the Hitler Youth, and remarked, "It's much more impressive, and then, this uniform suits me better."

Hanfstaengl, son of "Putzi" Hanfstaengl, one-time Nazi press chief, enjoyed himself on his first visit to Washington. He met some of his old gang from Harvard, talked to Patrolman Donald Ney, and received some pointers on running his detachment of military police back at Cochran Field. He finished his day at the movies.

Describing his background, young Hanfstaengl said he was born in this country in 1921, and left soon after with his American mother and German father to live in Germany. His father became a member of the Nazi Party in its beginning, and remained a member until he fell out of Hitler's favor after a disagreement with high party officials. In 1936, the family fled to England, where young Egon attended St. Paul's School. At the outbreak of the war, "Putzi" was interned in Canada, and the son came to this country to attend Harvard.

The 200-pound 6-foot "military cop" reminisced about his days in college:

"I remember the speeches I made denouncing Hitler and predicting his eventual downfall. Well, it's coming sooner than I expected. The Russians may suffer a few reverses but they'll pitch the last strike."

He pushed his white banded cap back, and rubbed his hands. "And wait till we get going——!"

In 1941, young Hanfstaengl left Harvard to enlist in the flying corps. At that time, he told newspapermen:

"This is no time to study. I want to be ready."

He recalled that "after the officers learned to pronounce my name in the roll call—they called me everything from Hoofnagle to Hansdangle—I got along all right."

Asked if he thought the American soldier stacked up favorably with the military man, the "top kick" snapped back in typical top kick terms, "You're —— —— right."

He paused a minute to salute a passing officer and then went on, "The soldiers may not look so trim at first, but after they get into the spirit of the thing and spend a few dollars on their uniforms, we see to that."

After threatening to show the photographer a few of his M. P. jiu-jitsu holds, Hanfstaengl said he had to leave. "I met a Russian taxicab driver and said 'Good morning' to him in Russian. He promised to show me around the city."

The youth plans to return to his outfit in Georgia after a few days sightseeing in the Capital. "Only a couple of days," he said. "Otherwise I'd be a parasite."

Funeral Services Scheduled Today For Mrs. Hughes

Funeral services for Mrs. Carrie E. Hughes, 53, who died Thursday at her home at 6303 Broad Branch Road, Chevy Chase, Md., will be held at 11 a. m. today from her residence with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Hughes was the wife of Fred J. Hughes, retired Montgomery County farmer and sportsman. Born in Washington, she has lived in Montgomery County for 20 years. For a time she and Mr. Hughes lived on a farm near Poolesville, where they raised race horses.

She belonged to the Theta Chi Mothers Club at the University of Maryland, from which her son, Lieut. Fred J. Hughes, jr., of Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., was graduated.

Survivors include two other sons, Francis, of Baltimore, and Robert, of Chevy Chase; a daughter, Miss Doris Hughes; a sister, Mrs. Gertrude Gramlich, both of Chevy Chase, and three brothers, Robert, Arthur and Theodore Morrison, of Washington.

Birth Rate Drops Under Nazi Rule

Copyright by Chicago Sun

London, March 20.—The ministry of economic warfare has just completed an official review of illegitimacy in Germany and has concluded that the campaign of the Nazi chiefs for more babies has failed.

The ministry declared that the Nazi's great reproduction drive was planned on the same scale as the increased wartime production program.

The review stated that "despite their rulers' numerous and persuasive attempts to induce the youth of modern Germany to multiply and be fruitful, the curve of the birth rate has not responded. After a sharp rise in the first quarter of 1940, it has steadily declined."

Church of God to Dedicate National Edifice Tomorrow

Dr. J. A. Morrison To Deliver Address, Also Open Revival

Worshipers from ten States, including several religious leaders, will attend dedication exercises for the Church of God edifice here tomorrow at 3 p. m. at Sixteenth and Taylor Streets Northwest.

The building is the national edifice of the denomination, and is made possible by contributions from Church of God members from all over America. The Rev. Esther M. Boyer is pastor.

The principal dedication address will be delivered by Dr. J. A. Morrison, president of Anderson College and Theological Seminary, who also will conduct a two-week evangelistic series Monday through Easter Sunday, speaking daily at 8 p. m.

Also joining in the dedication ceremonies will be a representative of the Washington Federation of Churches, either the Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., administrative assistant, or the Rev. Francis W. McPeek, social welfare department head, and Dr. Paul Douglass, American University president.

The $65,000 English Gothic-designed edifice is the first unit in the Church of God's building project, with an educational building being planned for construction in 1943. The auditorium's seating capacity is 350.

Striking feature of the interior is a main chancel window—13 feet high and 6 feet wide—its drawing depicting all races and nations of the world gathered under Christ's fold. P. J. Reeves, of Philadelphia, was the artist.

Allen C. Minnix was contractor for the building, and H. M. King, of Louisville, Ky., architect.

The Rev. Mrs. Boyer came here in September, 1937, as pastor of the Church of God, which has been meeting temporarily in the Junior Order of American Mechanics Hall, at 2407 Minnesota Avenue Southeast. She was at one time field secretary for the denomination's board of education. She is among the few women preachers in America.

THE REV. MRS. BOYER

Second Baptist Church To Open Revival

Evangelistic services will commence tomorrow at the Second Baptist Church, Seventeenth and East Capitol Streets, and continue until April 1. The Rev. Wallace R. Rodgers, of Pensacola, Fla., will preach at the 11 o'clock service and each evening except Saturday at 8 o'clock. On Palm Sunday, in addition to preaching during the morning church service, Mr. Rodgers will address the Sunday school as a feature of the Family Day program of the school.

Director of Music G. H. Whitaker is planning special music for each service in the series. These revival meetings follow closely a week of Bible study sponsored by the Baptist Training Union of the church and a junior revival conducted by the pastor, the Rev. J. Ray Garrett.

Noted Religious Group Coming Here April 17

Arrangements were completed this week for the local phase of the United Christian Education Advance, which will bring here a "team" of prominent religious workers for a one-day convention on April 17.

As part of a three-year plan of the International Council of Religious Education, a series of one-day parleys will be held throughout the United States from April 13 to May 2. The council is urging observance of May 3-10 as Christian Family Week, and September 27 to October 4 as Religious Education Week.

More than 40 denominations are taking part in the advance, another feature of which will be leaders' conferences through 1942 and 1943 to prepare workers for more intensive effort.

Members of the "team" coming here will include Dr. William Ralph Hall, assistant to the general secretary and director of summer conferences, the board of Christian education, the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.; Miss Elizabeth Lee, executive secretary of the woman's division of Christian service; board of foreign missions and church extension, the Methodist Church; Dr. J. Quinter Miller, associate general secretary, Federal Council of Churches; Dr. J. Fisher Simpson, of the Methodist board of education, and Dr. N. C. Harner, of Lancaster (Pa.) Theological Seminary.

Dr. Warren D. Bowman, pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren here, and authority on problems of home and marriage in relation to religion, will also be on the "team." The local advance, to be centered at Calvary Baptist Church, will be sponsored by the District of Columbia Sunday School Association, of which Dr. Charles E. Resser is president. Page McK. Etchison and other Bible leaders are cooperating.

Dr. Rustin to Talk At Lenten Rites In Harrisonburg

The Rev. Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church and Federation of Churches vice president, will leave tomorrow afternoon for Harrisonburg, Va., where he will address daily union Lenten services in the coming week.

DR. RUSTIN

Society Plants Tree on 100th Anniversary

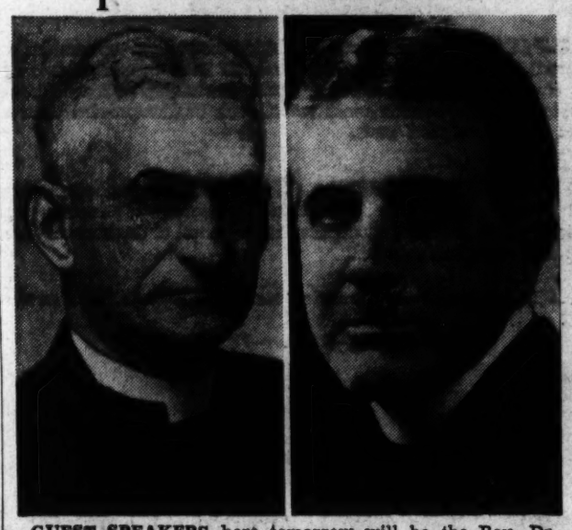
NATIONAL WOMEN'S RELIEF SOCIETY of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on Tuesday marked the 100th anniversary of its founding with special exercises at the Washington Chapel, Sixteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest. Mrs. Elizabeth G. Hales, State president, wields a spade for a tree-planting. Behind her are Mrs. Pearl Goodsell, second counselor, and Mrs. M. B. Cottam, first counselor. Some of the women are garbed in fashions of the 1840's

Speak Here Tomorrow



GUEST SPEAKERS here tomorrow will be the Rev. Dr. Henry B. Washburn (left), dean emeritus of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., who will preach at 11 a. m. at St. John's Episcopal Church, and Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, dean of the Theological Seminary of Drew University, Madison, N. J., who will speak at 11 a. m. at Foundry Methodist Church

Jewish Drive Nets $3200 In First Week

Joseph A. Wilner, chairman of the Washington committee for the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, has reported that in the first week of the campaign $3200 was raised toward the quota of $20,000 assigned for Washington.

The object of this fund is to save as many refugees as possible from the concentration camps of unoccupied France, Portugal and Casablanca, where the death rate reaches about 30 per cent, and to find havens of refuge for them.

Dr. Rudolph Kornblith, campaign director of H. I. A. S., who is in charge of the campaign in Washington, has reported that just last week two boats arrived, the Serpa Pinto and the Nyassa, carrying about 1100 refugees who were destined for the United States, Cuba, Mexico and Santo Domingo. They were all met by H. I. A. S. representatives and dispatched to their relatives or are being sheltered in the H. I. A. S. branches.

Presbyterians Plan New Building Fund

With an expanding ministry and parish program plus a special "forward program" to reduce the church indebtedness and create a "new building" fund, the 11 o'clock service tomorrow at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church has been designated as "A Day of Christian Testing," in the special Lenten "Forward March With the Master" emphasis.

Dr. Peter Marshall, minister, will preach at the morning services, when subscriptions to the church budgets and forward program will be consecrated. All members of the congregation have been urged to be in attendance to volunteer subscriptions and save the need of a personal canvass.

To Conduct Mission

The Rev. Michael Histori, O. M. Cap., will conduct the annual mission at Holy Rosary Church, Third and F Streets Northwest, beginning tomorrow at 8 p. m. and ending on Palm Sunday evening, March 29.

Evangelical Secretary Lauds Chaplains of U. S. Forces

The chaplain was praised as being "one man in a thousand" by Dr. William E. Lampe in a recent letter to chaplains and issued through the office of the general commission on Army and Navy chaplains here.

Dr. Lampe is executive secretary of the Evangelical and Reformed Church in the United States, and was for seven years missionary and educator in Japan.

His letter follows, in part:

"It is my honest conviction that there is no other man in the thousand who means more to the thousand men than does the chaplain. His is the great responsibility of spiritual ministry. Physicians are of tremendous value to save life and to preserve it, but the chaplain deals both with the life that now is and that which is to come.

"You chaplains have behind you the entire support of the Army and Navy Departments, of the Commander in Chief, and of every citizen of our great Republic. The position of the chaplain is regarded more highly than ever before in our history.

"You have the unqualified support of the churches, which are looking to you for your best service. You represent the churches, and are chosen and continue in service because of your relation to and approval by your denominations. The importance of this relationship is being impressed upon you anew, and it will mean more and more to you as the months and years pass.

"The men to whom you are assigned look to you for help and guidance. Some of them are very conscious of this fact and would like you to be a brother to them. Some have only a vague and indefinite desire to counsel with you and to reach higher planes of living. Many are more willing to attend divine worship now than when they were at home. While there are some who will not seek you, every man knows that there is grim business ahead and that the issues of life and death are involved. It is your high privilege to interpret God and the way of life to all of these men."

Petworth Baptists Plan Patriotic Service

In honor of the 33 men who have gone from the Petworth Baptist Church and Sunday School into the armed forces of the United States, Petworth Baptists have planned a special patriotic service for tomorrow at 8 p. m. A memorial service flag will be unveiled and presented to the church, and a star will be placed for each of the service men. A new star will be added to the flag each time another young man goes into the service.

'Matter' to Be Subject Of Lesson-Sermons

"Matter" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday School is at 11 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend the church services including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "But thou, O Lord, shalt endure for ever; and thy remembrance unto all generations." (Psalms 102:12).

Choir to Give Concert

The a Cappella concert choir of First Baptist Church, directed by Harwood Hall, will present a concert Friday at 8:15 p. m. at Fifth Baptist Church, E near Seventh Street Southwest. The group consists of 32 singers especially trained for concert work.

Rev. Burroughs Picks Regeneration as Theme

"Regeneration" will be the theme of the Rev. H. Gordon Burroughs, minister of The Church of Two Worlds, tomorrow evening at the Hotel Continental. Mrs. Helen Frankenfield, trumpeter, will be the soloist. On Wednesday evening there will be a lecture, followed by a message service.

Next Saturday at 8 p. m. in the ballroom of the Hotel Continental, there will be given under the auspices of the Ways and Means Committee a fashion show, "Fashions New and Old," followed by an hour of old-fashioned games.

Clyde L. Garrett, former Texas Congressman, will be guest preacher at sessions of the Vaughn Bible class tomorrow at 9:45 a. m., at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest.

Members of the Burrall class of Calvary will hear Dr. Nelson Blake, of the National Archives Department, speak at 9:45 a. m.

Averett College Chorus To Appear at Fort Myer

The choral and verse-speaking choirs of Averett College, Danville, Va., composed of 48 students, with Dean Madie Lee Walker, vice president of the college, and Mme. Laura Janos Fuessel, director of the choirs, will be at the Fort Myer Chapel, Fort Myer, Va., tomorrow at 11 a. m.

The choral choir, a distinctive organization of the college, has had 15 years of active service, but the verse-speaking choir is a comparatively new organization on the Averett campus, filling the fifth year on tour.

"Verse-speaking" takes its origin from the Greek chorus, which is reflected in the vestments; likewise, it is the revival of a particular form of the old Greek choral adapted to our modern world.

Colbourne to Address Class at All Souls'

Maurice Colbourne, distinguished English playwright, actor and world-traveler, will address the Current Problem Class at All Souls' Unitarian Church tomorrow at 10 a. m. on "The Main Truths About India." At the same hour, Msgr. G. B. O'Toole, former president of Peking University, will speak before the Comparative Religion Class on "Lao Tse and His Modern Disciples."

V. F. W. Units to Hold Victory Service

"A Prayer for Victory" service will be held by National Capital Post No. 127 Veterans of Foreign Wars and National Capital Auxiliary tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Lutheran Church of Atonement, North Capitol Street and Rhode Island Avenue. The guest speaker on the program will be Maj. Gen. Amos Fries, United States Army, retired, during the first World War, head of the chemical warfare service.

A short vesper service will be conducted by the Rev. Howard Snyder, followed by the presentation of the colors of the various patriotic organizations of the District of Columbia. The V. F. W. Honor Guard will be present with Capt. Leonard Bacon in command. Capt. Sullivan, Americanism chairman of National Capital Post, will introduce the distinguished guests, Louise Margullis, commander of the post, will give a speech of welcome.

Businessmen to Vie In Bible Query

The Bible quiz over Station WWDC will feature tonight at 8:05 a contest between two organizations of Christian businessmen when the Gideons International will meet the Washington Laymen's Evangelistic Association.

Representing the Gideons will be Charles S. Piepgrass, Michael Showalter and Harvey C. Prentice, while the Laymen's group will be composed of Floyd Hartman, John Peterson and George Hartshorn. Evangelist Dale Crowley will be in charge.

"The Bible Significance of the Number '7'," will be the subject of the Rev. Mr. Crowley Sunday morning at 10:30 on the Capital Pulpit program over WWDC.

"Bibles for Soldiers," is heard over this station on Thursday evenings at 6:30 o'clock, and is sponsored by the Gideons.

Lutheran Mission Services Planned

The Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society will conduct services tomorrow as follows:

Miss Frances Dysinger and Mrs. F. G. Umhau will teach Bible classes at Gallinger Hospital, and Miss Dysinger also will speak at the District Training School.

The Rev. George Bowers, pastor of St. Stephen's Lutheran Church, will lead a vesper service at Glenn Dale. The Rev. Dr. Henry W. Snyder will speak at the Florence Crittenton Home.

Ryland Guest Preacher

Dr. Horace E. Cromer, superintendent of the Washington Methodist East District, will be guest preacher tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Ryland Methodist Church, Branch near Pennsylvania Avenues Southeast.

"DEAR LORD AND FATHER OF MANKIND" — JOHN G. WHITTIER

Dear Lord and Father of mankind,
Forgive our fev'rish ways!
Reclothe us in our rightful mind;
In purer lives Thy service find,
In deeper rev'rence, praise.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
Whittier loved the simple life ... the freedom of Nature and the great outdoors. "To love God and serve your fellow men," was his philosophy of right-living. In this hymn he emphasizes the service and reverence of purer lives.

Group to Push Fight for Daily Religion Class

The fight for weekday religious education in the District of Columbia will be carried on in spite of the proposal's rejection yesterday by the public schools committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

That assurance came last night in a statement to The Post from the Rev. J. Herbert Garner, pastor of Sixth Presbyterian Church and chairman of the joint Protestant, Catholic and Jewish committee on weekday religious education here.

Mr. Garner represented the committee at a meeting of the public schools committee at the Harrington Hotel, with five members of the Board of Education present. They were Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president; Robert A. Maurer, vice president; Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, C. Melvin Sharpe and Dr. James A. Gannon.

To Continue Fight

"Irrespective of the actions of the public schools committee of the Washington Board of Trade, our committee will continue to endeavor to establish weekday religious education in the District schools," said Mr. Garner.

He pointed out that the weekday religious education program planned is now in effect in 38 States, and such a program here has the backing of the Washington Federation of Churches, the District of Columbia Sunday School Association, the Washington Ministerial Union, the committee on religious life in the Nation's Capital, and many other groups.

Serving on his committee are the Very Rev. Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, rector of St. Patrick's Church; Rabbi Morton Fierman, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, and the Rev. Dr. S. Paul Schilling, pastor of Brookland Baptist Church.

The plan as proposed by the joint committee on weekday religious education contemplates the setting up of regular classes of one hour each week to be taken out of the normal school hours, with instruction given in each classification of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish groups.

Unfavorable Report

Gen. Amos A. Fries, chairman of the subcommittee on curriculum of the public schools committee, reported unfavorably on the measure and a motion was adopted reaffirming a former Board of Trade stand taken in 1940, favoring bringing back a religious atmosphere in schools, but opposing the use of regular school hours and use of school buildings for the purpose.

"The separation of children into religious groups, the raising of the religious question, is contrary to the principles of democratic education," said the general, in part, in his statement at the meeting.

Rev. Rodgers Preaches on Resurrection

The significance of the resurrection was emphasized yesterday by the Rev. James P. Rodgers in a sermon at the Southeast churches' Lenten service at the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania Avenue. He is pastor of the Petworth Baptist Church here.

"The Resurrection signifies the joy of a new life, the inner joy of a man's soul that comes from a belief in immortality," said Mr. Rodgers.

Declaring that "immortality takes the sting out of death," the pastor said:

"A Christ was was merely born and died is not enough; He must complete the proof of His power to give eternal life by His mastery over death."

Services Scheduled

The Right Rev. Granville Gaylord Bennett, D. D., Suffragan Bishop of Rhode Island, will speak at Epiphany Episcopal Church Monday through Friday at 12 o'clock.

During his rectorship of St. Paul's Church, Minneapolis, one of the West's largest churches, from 1914 to 1920, his preaching attracted large congregations. He was active in civic work and helped found the Community Chest there. He served as bishop of the Duluth diocese from 1920 until 1933, when illness caused his resignation. He came to his present position in 1934.

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, Coadjutor Bishop of Maryland and former Dean of Washington, will address Chevy Chase union services Thursday at 8 p. m. at Chevy Chase Baptist Church, Western Avenue near Chevy Chase Circle.

Lutheran Rites Monday

City-wide Lutheran lenten services are scheduled for Monday at 8 p. m. at Augustana Lutheran Church, New Hampshire Avenue and V Streets Northwest.

Speakers for the Southeast churches' services for the coming week are: Monday, the Rev. Elmer A. Wilcher; Tuesday, the Rev. Paul Schearrer; Wednesday, the Rev. George Bennett; Thursday, the Rev. Dr. Seth R. Brooks, and Friday, the Rev. Edward Gabler.

Annual Parish Retreats For Women Announced

The Washington Retreat League announces the annual parish retreats for the women of St. Anthony's, Immaculate Conception and Blessed Sacrament Churches at the Washington Retreat House, 4000 Harewood Road Northeast. The retreat for St. Anthony's will be held tomorrow and March 23; the retreat for Immaculate Conception and Blessed Sacrament will be held on Tuesday.

Miss Emily Jamieson, team captain for St. Anthony's Church, has as her lieutenants Mrs. Matthew Angevine, Mrs. William H. Clawson, Mrs. John Chrest, Miss Kathleen Hurley, Miss Benedicta Heenan, Mrs. Margaret Kilton, Miss Eva McNeil, Mrs. C. J. Poiesz, Mrs. Francis E. Smith, jr., Miss Helena Smith, Mrs. John Murphy, Mrs. John MacDonald, Mrs. Louis Thomas, Miss Ada Woulfe, Miss Gertrude Wolfe, Mrs. William Yates. The retreat master for the two days will be the Rev. A. J. Burgraff, C. S. P., superior of St. Paul's College, Catholic University.

Dr. Marjorie S. Stuart, of Immaculate Conception parish, has Mrs. James J. Dailey, Mrs. William Dieter, Miss Bernadine Happy and Mrs. Clay Latta as her committee.

Mrs. James J. Leonard, of Blessed Sacrament, has the chairmen of the Sanctuary Society assisting her.

The Rev. Lawrence McGlone, assistant pastor of Nativity, will be the retreat master for Immaculate Conception and Blessed Sacrament parishes.

MISS PAYNE

MR. MacMILLAN

The Rev. Walton L. MacMillan, pastor of Grace Baptist Church, Ninth Street and South Carolina Avenue Southeast, and Miss Gertrude Winston Payne, choir singer of Metropolitan Baptist Church, will be married on April 18 at 6 p. m. at the latter place, Sixth and A Streets Northeast. The Rev. Dr. John Compton Ball, Metropolitan pastor, will officiate.

The couple has extended a blanket invitation to members of both congregations to attend the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. Gerald F. Payne, and is at present employed by the Acacia Insurance Co. She was educated at Eastern High School here and Carson-Newman College, Jefferson City, Tenn., and has been attending Metropolitan Church practically all her life. She is vice president of the Baptist Young People's Union there.

Mr. MacMillan is the son of Mrs. Alice R. MacMillan and the late Mr. MacMillan, of Pleasantville, N. J. He was educated at Moody Bible Institute, Chicago; Wheaton (Illinois) College; Dallas (Texas) Theological Seminary, and Eastern Baptist Seminary, Philadelphia, Pa.

He came here on February 4, 1940, as assistant pastor of Grace Church, and upon the retirement of the Rev. Dr. Frederick W. Johnson on January 1, 1942, he was elevated to pastor.

The romance of the pastor and choir singer was the culmination of mutual interest in Baptist young people's work. Both took an active part in both individual church and city-wide Baptist youth work, and helped promote the Columbia Federation of Baptist young people's rally last summer at Western Maryland College, Westminster.

Billings Aids Move to Free Earl Browder

"The antilabor forces which put Tom Mooney in jail—imprisoned Earl Browder, are at work today to split the United States for the benefit of the Axis," Warren K. Billings, once codefendant with Mooney in the San Francisco Preparedness Day dynamiting in 1916, declared last night.

Billings, now an active unionist, spoke at a meeting of 700 members of the Washington Citizens Committee to Free Browder at the National Press Auditorium last night. Saying that Browder was singled out for "cruel and inhuman" punishment merely because he was a member of an unpopular political party, Billings urged the committee members:

"To deluge President Roosevelt with cards, telegrams, letters and every other type of message, insisting upon the immediate release of Earl Browder."

National Conference Set

Billings, who is touring the country urging Browder's release, announced a national conference to be held in New York on March 28-29, at which "a united appeal from all trade unions will be made to President Roosevelt for a commutation of Browder's sentence. In making the announcement he said:

"Like Mooney before him, Browder is symbolic of the spirit necessary, if America will be successful in its defense against the Axis."

Before Billings spoke, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, labor leader and former associate of Browder, told committee members that three million members of national trade unions and more than 2000 union leaders have agreed to support the fight for Browder's liberty.

"Regardless of their political beliefs these three million union members are protesting against the petty, discriminatory legal technicality upon which Browder was imprisoned," she declared.

Charges Are Reviewed

She reviewed the charges of which Browder was convicted and told the committee that the passports Browder had were not used illegally—that he had used them to enter China—and that he had been instrumental in securing Chinese assistance which "today is presenting a formidable force in the preservation of democratic principles against fascism."

Following the two talks, the committee adopted resolutions "to pay last tribute to Tom Mooney, great son of labor," and to do their share to insure success in the fight to free Browder.

Women Eligible For Churches' Annual Award

Women will now be considered for the annual plaque award of the Federation of Churches to the layman making the greatest contribution to the city's religious life during the year, federation officials have announced.

The award will be made at the annual federation meeting on April 14 at Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol Street. The meeting also will launch the $33,000 financial drive of the federation.

Previous recipients of the award have been Wilbur J. LaRoe, chairman of the federation's civic affairs committee; Justice Bolitha J. Laws, teacher of the A. B. Pugh Bible class at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church; former Supt. of Metropolitan Police Ernest W. Brown and Coleman Jennings, president of the Washington Community Chest.

Vital Tools Declared Idle At NYA Camps

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 20.—The Sun in a copyright story today reported that "nearly 10,000 new machine and metal-working production tools, are scattered throughout the country in 125 of the National Youth Administration's latest model training centers some of which are not yet complete."

More than half of these tools are on the "critical" and "very critical" priority lists of the War Production Board, the Sun said.

The Sun quoted Aubrey Williams, NYA administrator, as saying the tools largely were taken "from backyard junk piles and reconditioned" for use.

"A survey of the new-type NYA centers in four Eastern States," the Sun story continued, "revealed that in some of them delivery of new machinery still is being awaited. In some, new machinery of various types still is stored in the original delivery crates, while other units, although uncrated, have not been set up for operation nor connected to power lines.

"For instance, at the newly built center at Beltsville, Md., the machine-tool equipment lay in crates for more than six months, having been set up in the long-idle shop building only in the second week of this month."

The Sun said the figure of nearly 10,000 tools does "not include 271 other machine and metal-working shops in the NYA's more than 4000 work-experience projects.

"NYA headquarters in Washington estimates the cost of these new machine and metal-working tools in the 125 newly established centers at five million dollars, but estimates their present worth at ten million dollars on the basis of scarcity and price increases since they were ordered.

"Officials of the War Production Board—both those concerned with stepping up the Nation's output of war materiel and those in control of priorities in the distribution of production equipment—have no data on the vast machine-tool pool of the NYA, they report."

Judge Refuses To Review Ouster Of 2 Policemen

A legal battle by two former District police officers to have District Court set aside their dismissal from the force ended in defeat yesterday when their petition was denied by Justice Matthew F. McGuire.

The two officers, Detective Sergts. Hubert E. Brodie and Leo Murray, were ousted in 1940 after a trial board hearing in which they were accused of accepting a bribe from a bookmaker and numbers operator.

The justice, in denying their request that he review the case, pointed out that the District Commissioners had affirmed the men's dismissal, and that the law provides that the Commissioners' decision shall be "final and conclusive."

Mrs. Bradford To Give Concert At Wesley Church

Mrs. Willie Bradford, 1842 California Street Northwest, dramatic and coloratura soprano soloist of the Cathedral Choir of John Wesley African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, will be featured in a recital sponsored by the Most Worshipful Acacia Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons at the church on March 27. She will be supported by the choir directed by Prof. Scott Mayo.

Although she received her early training in music under Prof. C. Amos, former chorister of John Wesley Church, as a member of the senior choir, she has sung as soloist of the Temple Choral Society, directed by Dr. Mayo, for a number of years and was president of the Excelsior Dramatic Club for some time. This is her debut as a concert soloist. However, the program has been arranged around her by Dr. Mayo because of the popular demand led by Mrs. Royal W. Bailey. Charles D. Freeman is secretary and Clifford O. Smith is chairman of the activities committee.

Stores May Adopt 2-Night Shopping Periods Weekly

Possibility that once-a-week night shopping, begun here Thursday, may be extended to two nights a week was seen here yesterday following glowing reports from merchants on the first shopping session in the plan.

The attitude of the merchants, said C. W. Turner, vice president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, is to continue for a few weeks, staying open each Thursday night, then, if all goes well, add another night.

Crowds reminiscent of Christmas-rush periods were reported by some merchants Thursday night, when the stores stayed open until 9 o'clock.

Dr. Merriam, Famed Natural Scientist, Dies

Dr. C. Hart Merriam, founder of the United States Biological Survey and one of the world's leading natural scientists, died at his home in Berkeley, Calif., Thursday night, it was announced last night. He was 86 years old.

Dr. Merriam, a native of New York, was educated at Yale and Columbia Universities, and founded the United States Biological Survey here in 1885 and became its first chief. He resigned in 1910 to conduct ethnological and biological investigations under a special trust fund established by Mrs. E. H. Harriman. He carried out explorations in various parts of the world and was author of many books on natural history. He was a charter member of the National Geographical Society, the London Zoological Society, American Society of Naturalists, American Society of Mammalogists and the Cosmos Club.

Dr. Merriam was a resident here for 50 years, living at 1919 Sixteenth Street Northwest. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Henry D. Abbot, of Washington, and Mrs. M. W. Talbot, of Berkeley, Calif., and a sister, Mrs. Florence M. Bailey, of Washington.

Best Boundary

Senator McCarran is taking a realistic view of the District-Virginia boundary dispute when he calls for the return of all Arlington County to the Capital. To draw a line at the water's edge at a time when Federal establishments south of the Potomac are rapidly multiplying would be shortsighted in the extreme. Even a line including the Washington National Airport within the District, and excluding the new War Department Building and other Federal property adjacent to the river, would be unsatisfactory. This is not an issue that can be properly settled by piecemeal adjustments. The boundary should be fixed where George Washington placed it, so as to permit reasonable growth of the Capital on both sides of the river now and in the indefinite future.

We hope that the President will find time to give the matter some attention. Surely the Administration will not consent to any bill that would cut a slice from the District's limited territory and preclude all possibility of extending exclusive Federal control over the National Airport, the new War Department Building and Arlington Cemetery. It follows, then, that the Administration should take the lead in sponsoring the more constructive solution of the dilemma resulting from obliteration of the boundary. Let Congress and the President repeal the Retrocession Act of 1846, and ask Virginia to return Arlington as part of the seat of national government. Virginia could scarcely refuse to comply with such a request. For the 30 square miles in question were returned to the Old Dominion in 1846 on the assumption that they would never be needed as part of the Capital, and the constitutionality of that recession is open to doubt.

Meanwhile it is to be hoped that Senator McCarran will not be content to push his retrocession bill. The only real argument against restoration of the 10-mile square is the misgovernment of the District now under exclusive Federal control. It seems improbable that the Senator would ask Arlington residents to come back to the voteless status now inflicted upon Washingtonians. An invitation to our neighbor must be accompanied by a good deal of housecleaning on this side of the river. Fortunately, Mr. McCarran, as chairman of the Senate District Committee, is in an excellent position to take the leadership in this movement, too.

Theatrical Squall

After two and a half years of war, the fighting tactics of the Nazis are pretty well known. But hitherto much of the experience with those tactics in the richest theater of all—namely, Russia—has been hidden from view by Russian refusal to allow military observers and newspaper correspondents to go to the fronts. Now the Russians have done the next best service by publishing their own experience. In a volume called "The Voice of Fighting Russia" they have given the world a mass of data from the eyewitness accounts of their officers and men. The volume answers the question "How do the Hitlerites operate?" with a clarity and a wealth of detail which will be of great value to the fighting men of the United Nations.

Of most interest is the technique of the Blitzkrieg. On the sector marked out for the break-through, the Nazis throw in a detachment of motor cyclists. They are all boys of 18 or 19, wild and ready for any hazard, though their daring is stimulated by alcohol. Driving at a furious speed, they keep up a continuous rain of machine-gun fire. The din is terrific, but, as a Soviet observer dryly comments, "There is not much sense to it." For at such speeds the motor cyclist can see little, while his use of the machine gun is destined to make a noise rather than to kill. With such a technique, it will be recalled, the Nazis created confusion in France, and succeeded beyond their fondest hopes.

The answer to such a lunge is to stay your ground and take aim. This is what the Russians did, and an officer reports, "We have been adroit in picking them off their machines with accuracy, and, what is even more important, with calmness. It is a remarkable business. Such a seemingly terrific offensive, and yet it is only necessary for about a dozen of the vanguardists to fall, and then the lightning troops turn back with lightning rapidity, stepping on the gas with all their speed." The writer laconically winds up, "Note this just in case: It is even easier to catch them with an automatic as they turn."

Much the same tactic as the motorcycle thrust is pursued by the Nazi infantry. The idea seems to be to apply moral as much as physical pressure in the hope that panic will be created by the impression that a huge tempestuous force backed by great firing power is on the loose. Such methods, however, did not frighten the Russians. The warrior writers in "The Voice of Fighting Russia" call the exhibition contemptuously "a theatrical squall." One of them adds "your own precise shot is worth hundreds of such bullets." The entire volume amounts to a veritable fighting manual for all soldiers who may one day have to meet Hitler's hordes.

Mr. Casey To Cairo

In the final analysis, of course, we owe to the Japanese the tie that binds this country to Australia, that sixth continent of which till recently most Americans had only the vaguest knowledge. Yet we were not entirely unprepared for the realization of our kinship. Part, and a good part, of the credit for this situation—so fortunate in our relations with Australia—must go to Australia's first Minister to Washington, Mr. Richard G. Casey.

Mr. Casey has been his country's representative in the Capital for only a matter of two and a half years. Yet in that time he has built up Australia in the consciousness of the American people. This he has done unobtrusively but nonetheless effectively—taking advantage of every public opportunity to speak about Australia, and cultivating private associations to the same end. He has, in fact, been a one-man university faculty. As for his official mission, Mr. Casey had not been in our midst more than a few months before the persons with whom he had to deal officially found in him a like-mindedness that smoothed all his intercourse.

It is therefore with a sense of personal as well as official loss that the Capital read yesterday of Mr. Casey's new appointment. He is to become Britain's new Minister of State in the Middle East, succeeding Oliver Lyttleton, who is the new Minister of Production. The appointment is without precedent. For the Australian Mr. Casey from now on will represent Great Britain, and the post puts him automatically in the British Cabinet. Thus the transfer is primarily in the nature of a personal tribute to Mr. Casey.

Mr. Churchill during his visit to Washington doubtless observed the warmth of the regard in which American officialdom held Mr. Casey. Perhaps he came to share it. Coupled with Mr. Casey's Australian birth and the knowledge of Britain which he gained from his Oxford education, this link with official America made him ideally fitted for the senior British diplomatic post in an area in which the security of the three countries is vitally involved.

However, just as the loss to this Capital is severe, so is Australia's. That this is felt at Canberra is shown in the reaction of Premier Curtin, who speaks of the "difficult embarrassment" in which Mr. Casey's removal places Australia. For Washington is of more consequence to Canberra than is Cairo. Ever since the early post-World War I years, when Premier Hughes used to hail every battleship built in America, the Australians have been anxious to promote the relation with America which the Japanese have now forced. Now they wish to consolidate it, as we do, since the security of the one has come to be realized as the security of the other. In this common task, as important in the postwar world as in beating the Axis, Mr. Casey would have been an invaluable asset.

Differences of opinion between Mr. Casey and members of his home government may have been the final inducement to Mr. Casey to accept Mr. Churchill's offer. This, at any rate, is hinted at in Australian newspapers. Still, whatever truth there is in such a statement, the severance of his Australian connection must have been difficult for Mr. Casey. From now on, presumably, he will stay in Britain's service. The overriding satisfaction is that at Cairo he will be serving a cause which transcends nationality, namely, the cause of freedom. And we in Washington know the worth of that service wherever the course of Mr. Casey's future lies.

Justice At Riom

On the eve of the Riom trials it was assumed in this country, and no doubt in France itself, that the world was about to be treated to another such farce as the propaganda trials at Moscow or the trials which followed the Reichstag fire in Berlin. In was assumed that something like the methods of Fouquier-Tinville would be employed to convict the defendants. The idea was that having, at the evil instigation of the British, forced war upon the peace-loving leaders of Nazi Germany, the defendants had treacherously brought ruin to France. This is undoubtedly what Hitler had demanded and probably what the Vichy politicians had agreed to.

That the trials, instead, have aroused rage in Hitler and consternation at Vichy is an eloquent testimony to the unforeseen courage and integrity of the judges. In conducting this trial in the traditional spirit of French justice—indeed, merely by permitting the defendants to offer a defense—the judges have made it possible for the whole case to recoil upon its authors. Thus in the main question of responsibility for the present plight of France, it is now Daladier, Blum, La-Chambre, and the other collaborationists who are the accused. Even the witnesses at Riom have shown a curious independence and objectivity. Their testimony has revolved not on the question of why France went to war with Germany but on that of why she was beaten by Germany. None has forfeited his honor and patriotism to the extent of accepting Hitler's cynical version of history and representing the Third Republic as the aggressor.

It is no wonder, then, that Ferdinand de Brinon, representative of Vichy in Paris, now asks that the trial be dropped. He says it is being conducted in a way "detrimental to the interests of France, particularly to the interests of the occupied zone." What he means is that the Riom trial is—to the great and enduring honor of the French judiciary—being conducted openly, honestly and according to the juridical principles of a civilized people.

Who Pays?

So long as the General Motors Corporation was manufacturing automobiles chiefly for civilian use, the terms of the wage contract with its employes were properly matters for private negotiation. Then, if the company acceded to demands for higher rates of wages, the resultant increase in production costs had to come out of company profits or out of the pockets of buyers of automobiles, in the form of higher prices. The additional labor costs certainly could not be shifted to the shoulders of the general public.

Today, however, all is changed. General Motors is no longer producing automobiles for sale to those who wish to buy. As the president of the company states, it is "now engaged almost entirely in the production of airplanes, tanks, guns and ammunition required to win the war." Every taxpayer in the United States, every buyer of defense bonds, is helping to pay for this equipment under the terms of the contracts which the Government is negotiating with private industry. To be specific: if the United Automobile Workers should succeed in securing a dollar a day more for each worker in G. M. employment, thereby adding many millions to the company's wages bill, the additional outlays would not be taken out of the profits of G. M. Nor would the dividends of G. M. stockholders be directly affected. The pay rise would simply increase the size of the appropriation bills voted by Congress for war purposes, and thus increase the burdens of the country's taxpayers.

These are the awkward facts which the president of General Motors was trying to drive home when he called upon union leaders to conduct wage negotiations with the company in public. But for obvious reasons the United Automobile Workers are unwilling to concede that these current wage negotiations have acquired a public character. They much prefer to believe that the war has not changed their relationship to the privately owned companies that are still their nominal employers. By clinging to this outmoded assumption the unions find it easier to exploit the national emergency to their own advantage.

So the General Motors management has swept away the pretense that it is doing private business as usual. But it has failed to realize the full implication of its own admission. This is that the terms of employment in war industries should not be left to the determination of privately employed company heads and representatives of the unions. The demands of the United Automobile Workers, for example, for wage increases and for maintenance of the union shop involve major issues that concern everybody. Such demands should, therefore, be dealt with in accordance with official declarations of national policy laid down for the guidance of company management and unions.

If uncontrollable inflation is to be avoided, wages, as we have repeatedly said, must be kept under stern control. If our man power is to be used to best advantage to produce war materials, the opportunity to work must be open to union and nonunion labor alike. In short, it is "up to" the Government not only to assure peaceful settlement of labor disputes, but also to make sure that the terms of settlements peaceably arrived at are fair to all the people who are paying the cost and bearing the sacrifices of this war.

Letters To The Editor

Labor Legislation

I quote from a recent message sent by Mme. Eve Curie from China:

"Today 3000 women are at work there on 25,000 spindles. The factory is being kept busy day and night with two shifts. Women, girls and children are all dressed in uniform long, tight blue cotton gowns. They work 11 hours a day, six days a week. When I wandered from one building to another, I could see the traces of destruction caused by 150 bombs that fell on the factory area during the last 'bombing season.'"

I wish every Congressman and every "40-hour-a-week" union leader might read this message. How long do these gentry imagine our Allies are going to continue to sacrifice themselves, whilst we bask ourselves in the sun from 1:30 p. m. for the rest of the day—on our present schedule of 40 hours per week?

Laborers are equally as patriotic as the rest of the Nation, they could not be otherwise—their sons are in the Army and Navy; but their hands are tied, they are nothing more than pawns in the grip of their own irresponsible union leaders.

With the connivance of some of the highest public officials in the land and acquiesence on the part of all but a handful of spineless Congressmen, a small group of union leaders has taken over the national control of production. To meet the most appalling task that this country has ever faced, a handful of union leaders is exacting exorbitant initiation fees, fantastic wages and a 40-hour week with time and a half or double pay for work in excess of this schedule. This program can only lead to a colossal national defeat.

Voters in order to preserve their families and their country must tear this insane, inhibitory legislation to pieces and permit the Nation to save itself. Labor realizes the necessity for this step—the present union leaders never will.

Compulsory Saving

Another amateur economist. Why can't the problem of whether to tax or have inflation be decided along the following lines: A part of everyone's salary and all promotions also that are given to people above $2000 a year be paid in either stamps or bonds, according to the size of the salary. These bonds or stamps should be different from those bought voluntarily and could be cashed only or used for tender six months after Congress voluntarily declares the war over. That would free a lot of cash at a time when spending would be necessary to give jobs to returning fighters and would also prevent buying and staggering taxation, and people wouldn't feel cheated, either, if all were forced under the same law. Why not?

Siren Confusion

Would any of us in case of an air raid in Washington be aware of it until a bomb actually exploded? It would seem that to the average citizen the sirens might merely be interpreted as the tenth fire that day. Has it not occurred to the proper officials to cut out sirens completely except in case of an air raid? That would save our nerves and put an end to the air-raid-siren confusion.

Bells prove to be adequate warning for fire engines and ambulances in New York City, and what an improvement it has been!

No Hate

A short time ago, I was surprised to hear one of our popular radio commentators speak of America's need of a great wave of hate, if she hoped to win the war. He had been interviewing some of our starry-eyed aviators; so young, so clean-cut, so eager, to be up and at the Japs. We are all wild with enthusiasm for these heroes. They are heroes from the minute they sign up. There are few of us who do not have someone dear among them, God forbid that hate be a motive for their sacrifices to win a better world. Hate is a corrosive. It eats away strength, power. It renders impotent our weapons.

We are a Christian nation. How can we hate those who die bravely for any faith? It is their primitive efforts toward God. Let us hate the sin but not the sinner. It is because they hate that the Nazis, the Japs, can never hope to win this war. Never! In the name of Christ, no hate, America!

Point Of Definition

On the editorial page this morning, under the caption, "Amateur Strategists," the following appears:

"But surely Mr. Roosevelt is not quarreling with that provision of the Constitution which stipulates that the supreme command of the Army and Navy must be vested in an amateur." (Emphasis supplied.)

Where is this "provision"? Has the writer ever heard of Generals Washington, Jackson, William Henry Harrison, Taylor, Grant, to say nothing of Garfield, B. Harrison, McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt? Or is Washington to be classed as an "amateur" compared to Horatio Gates and Benedict Arnold?

Equally "odious" comparisons will come to mind. As far as the Constitution is concerned, the President might be a graduate of both the Naval Academy and West Point, so doubly and on both counts a professional. It is my impression that Washington, during the Revolution, was in supreme command of both the military and naval forces. Of course a general is an "amateur" at sea, as an admiral is on land. We nearly had one of the latter in Admiral Dewey. But neither a general nor an admiral becomes an "amateur" in his former career by being elected President.

HENRY M. WARD.
Washington, March 19.

Editor's note: Article II, section 2, of the Constitution makes the President commander in chief of the Army and Navy. Section 4 of the same article identifies him as a "civil officer" (i. e., in distinction to a military or ecclesiastical officer). The rest of our correspondent's objection turns on a point of definition. If "amateur" is understood simply as equivalent to "nonprofessional," the Presidents he has cited were "amateurs" at the time of their incumbency. It might also be noted that only one of these former soldiers, McKinley, was President during wartime.

Pennies For Planes

It has come to my attention that persons who would like to contribute financially and voluntarily to the war effort have been having trouble doing so. Many of these persons, such as children, do not have enough money at any one time to buy a defense stamp. Others who would be glad to contribute their spare and odd pennies, if a receptacle were handy, in the absence of such place of deposit, spend them rather than save them.

Therefore, several of the other attorneys in my office and myself think the following plan might raise considerable money: Each person agreeing to participate in the plan would contribute, if financially able, a penny for each American plane announced destroyed by enemy action that day. The money thus collected would be turned over to the proper authorities to purchase a plane or planes to replace those destroyed. Such pennies for planes could be collected in milk bottles and other similar receptacles, properly marked, and capped.

They could be placed in all public places, such as restaurants, theaters, postoffices, hotels, drug and grocery stores, cigar stores, churches and schools. The program might be particularly attractive to school children and youth organizations such as the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., religious organizations of young people, etc.

The information as to the number of planes destroyed could be obtained in each community from the number announced destroyed by some well-recognized newspaper, such as The Washington Post in this community, and posted on each collection bottle by the person in charge. The number of planes shot down would only be a rough guide as to the amount contributed, as it might be too much for some, or too little for others. But the main purpose of the plan would be to provide a way for, and stimulate, giving every day for everybody to help win the war. All sorts of local clubs might be formed to further the plan. Our soldiers would certainly be enheartened to know that even children are directly contributing every day for weapons, and it should be discouraging to the enemy.

M. REYNOLDS SANDS.

Reduce Public Criticism

Our soldiers, sailors and airmen are facing fearful odds in the service of our country.

Most of the rest of us are asking what we can do individually to help win the war. Teamwork rightly directed will go far, for "united we stand—divided——" let us not say it or think it. How shall we overcome our appalling lack of union? How better than to reduce public criticism? Public criticism gives consolation to our enemies and may, by suggestion, even be of help to them.

No one can gainsay the fact that when mistakes are being made it is the duty of each citizen who is sure he knows the right remedy to suggest that remedy or have it suggested to the person or persons responsible for the mistake. How to accomplish this without publicity, and even children are not publicly reproved by wise parents, requires tact and often much perseverance. The first effort may not succeed, but if the suggested remedy is right, teamwork will eventually bring success.

What group of citizens is best qualified and what has the greatest opportunity to carry on this work? The National Press, splendidly equipped for scouting in the best sense and so well organized as to be able to prevent a "rush in where angels fear to tread," may furnish many a solution to our country's problems.

The Post Impressionist

The "L" Incident

Some of the more experienced rememberers of this class may recall "the Morris incident"—way back in January, 1906. This was during the days of the first Roosevelt era, and, indeed, it involved the first Roosevelt very deeply at the time.

An abortive Russian revolution of that day was relegated to the back pages of the newspapers, as were many other weighty matters of importance at that particular moment, by "the Morris incident."

Under a Washington date line the New York Times of January 10, 1906, carried a lengthy front-page story about "the Morris incident." The first paragraph was as follows:

"Mrs. Minor Morris, who on Thursday was dragged from the White House, is tonight in a critical condition."

Mark Twain was at that time dictating his autobiography, and it is to him that I owe my familiarity with this unfortunate affair.

Mrs. Morris, reputedly a woman of refinement and position, called at the White House to endeavor to see President Theodore Roosevelt and to enlist his aid in having her husband reinstated in the Government service.

The lady soon struck an impasse in the person of Mr. Barnes, an assistant secretary, who refused her admittance to the President. After a good deal of parleying in which some will was displayed on both sides, Mr. Barnes signaled to some police officers, who seized Mrs. Morris. She screamed, and the officers dragged her unceremoniously from the building and off to the station house. Mrs. Morris was charged by Mr. Barnes with being insane, and she was fined $5. For some time thereafter she lay in a prominent Washington hotel, suffering from collapse and "congestive chills."

The whole thing was a sorry and sordid affair, and is better forgotten. I should not mention it now, but reading it served to emphasize two things for me. One was a recent piece in the letter columns, by—if I remember rightly — "Disgusted." This writer had been frequently stalemated by officious or overzealous private secretaries, and he thought something out to be done about it. I must have sympathized with him, for his letter seems to have made a dent on my subconscious.

The other thing we shall call "the 'L' incident." It concerns the time I was evicted from the White House. Pull up a chair.

This affair occurred in the second Roosevelt era, about three years ago, right at the dawn of that year. The matter didn't crowd any important doings from the front pages. In fact, this is the first time it appears in the paper.

It was a gray Sunday morning, and after breakfast I decided on a stroll. Leisurely I ambled up the Avenue and shortly found myself abreast the residence of the Roosevelts, who are practically neighbors of mine.

The gates were ajar and inviting, and so I sauntered up the curving walk to the portico in front of which stood an impressive uniformed officer. The officer looked at me, and I thought he saw me. Though I'm not exactly impressive myself, you can usually see me if you look at me. The officer didn't give me good-morning, nor did he stay me.

Presently I found myself on the wide porch, peering through the screen doors, which were also, in a manner of speaking, ajar. Again none stayed me, and I entered the great hall.

It was very still in there, and I was none too sure of my ground in the first place. The whole thing was close to the eerie. There should, I thought, be more or less officious guards all over the premises. When I didn't see them I got to feeling that they were lurking in ambush to make a concerted attack on me.

But nothing happened immediately, and I ventured a little farther in. I couldn't even hear myself walking in that vast place. Then I stood looking up in rapt bemusement at the grand, sparkling chandelier.

It was while I was doing this that I was espied. "What do you want, Cap?" asked a brass-buttoned fellow carrying a white linen napkin in his hand, who rushed out at me from some far corner.

Lots of people call me Cap on first seeing me. I don't know quite why this is, but it is a circumstance I don't wholly approve.

Long a bookshop haunter, I had my answer to his question right on tap. "Just looking," I said.

Well, sir, before you could say Henry Agard Wallace I was out the front door of the White House and down the front steps and listening to the wrath of the burly outside officer before mentioned. He was apparently finding it difficult to digest a piece of the brass-buttoned officer's mind.

In leaving the outside officer, I regret to say that his warm remarks did not include an invitation to call again.

There, you see, it is comparatively easy to create a White House incident even in these times.

But if Mrs. Roosevelt is in attendance this morning, I want her to know that I feel no animosity over my White House incident. After all, it has furnished me with some literary copy, and nothing that does that arouses any resentment in me. As a fellow writer, Mrs. Roosevelt will understand that.

And, finally, if the First Lady is ever over my way I hope she will feel free to drop in for a chat. But she'd better mind the front gate; it has broken its hinges and is just about as unwieldy as a White House guard whose digestion has been interfered with.

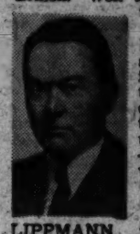
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Our Hidden Allies

HITLER WOULD now like to stop the trial at Riom, and so also would his French agent, M. de Brinon. Well they might. For the plot which they engineered has backfired. Despite the terrorism and the treachery which envelops them, the principal figures in the trial—the judges as well as the accused—have shown that they are unconquered Frenchmen.



LIPPMANN

Hitler and his agents may have realized that M. Daladier, M. Blum, and M. Guy LaChambre were, whatever their weaknesses and failings as officials, men of honor and of personal courage. What has surprised Hitler is the degree to which the court itself has shown itself willing to maintain the honor of France. The court is not trying M. Daladier (M. Blum was not in office at the time) for having kept faith with Poland, France's ally. Whereas Hitler would like the Riom court to try M. Daladier for the "crime" of honoring the pledges of France and of resisting Nazi aggression, the Riom court is in fact trying him and the other defendants for not having defeated Hitler. Obviously it is a disconcerting disclosure that a French court, set up by the Vichy government, would have no charges to make against the men if they had soundly defeated the Nazis with whom Vichy professes to be eager to collaborate in founding a new order to last 1000 years.

THUS IT is only too evident that the French nation still consists of Frenchmen, who simply because they are French are waiting, praying, and preparing for their liberation. We must not forget that. For one of the great elements of the war is the fact that behind the enemy's lines we have as our allies all the conquered and all the neutral nations of Europe. There is not one of them which, if the people could choose freely, would fail to say that it desires our victory. When we enter Europe, the civilian population will in the overwhelming majority welcome us as liberators.

This is one of our very greatest resources, as we can readily see from Malaya and from Burma where the position was in reverse and we had no support and the Japanese have had much support from the people of the invaded territory. It should remind us how vitally important it is not to neglect our hidden allies, how inconceivably stupid it will be if we do not take full advantage of the fact that to them America is more than ever the land of promise.

NO ONE knows this better than the President, and indeed no one has a greater hold upon our hidden allies than he has. It is, therefore, useful, I believe, to point out that the President's subordinates are failing him lamentably in grasping the opportunity and in making his leadership effectvie.

There are many branches and agencies of the Government concerned with this great matter—primarily the Department of Justice, the State Department, the Donovan organization, and in lesser though important degree the Treasury, lend-lease, the War Department through the selective service machinery, the Office of Civilian Defense, and the Red Cross. There is however no such thing as a policy—though in the President's mind there is certainly the intention to have a policy. There is no policy because no one who understands the matter has sufficient authority, and those who have some authority have not sufficiently understood the problem.

CONSIDER what happened when the question arose of making the Pacific Coast secure against the Fifth Column Mr. Biddle, with the best intentions in the world, based his first position on two legalistic and unworkable principles: one was that in policing the combat zone, the distinction between the alien and the citizen must be preserved; the second was that no one should be disturbed unless evidence, almost good enough to convict him in a court, had been unearthed by the official investigation. Mr. Biddle, who remembers much more vividly what he disliked in the other war than he realizes what has to be done in this war, was producing a situation on the Pacific Coast which by the end of January had become deplorable. He was failing to make this threatened area secure, and what is no less important, he was failing to make the military authorities and the people feel secure. Thus there was a double danger—the danger of the Fifth Column itself and the danger of a popular vigilante movement to deal with it.

His policy had to be scrapped, and replaced by a kind of martial law which is now being administered without preparations made in advance to deal effectively and humanely with the evacuated people. A problem which might profitably have been studied and dealt with by the Office of Civilian Defense is being dealt with by improvisation. What is more, because it has so many far-reaching implications, the security measures are based on the wrong principle: instead of evacuating the areas on the principle of military security which is applicable alike to all citizens and all aliens, Mr. Biddle had no principle when his earlier principles failed him. We are evacuating Japanese, regardless of their citizenship, whereas if the matter had been properly conceived—as a measure of military security—this unfortunate stigma need not in principle have been brought into the matter. The legal fiction, which in a matter of this sort is profoundly important, could have been preserved that we were evacuating individuals and not a racial group.

THE FUMBLING of this aspect of the problem arose from the fact that nowhere in the Government is there anyone in authority who has been able to transcend legalism and bureaucracy in the formulation of a general policy in respect to aliens. This week, for example, the Selective Service announced a classification of aliens. Who prepared that classification? Those coming from "France and possessions" are classified as "neutral" in spite of the fact that French Equatorial Africa and New Caledonia in the Pacific are fighting on our side, in spite of the fact that Free French warships have been repaired in United States navy yards, and Free French merchant ships carry our war supplies.

Austria, the first of Hitler's victims, is not classified at all. Though our Government has never recognized Hitler's seizure of Austria, all Austrians are for the purpose of the draft classified automatically as Hitler's men, that is as "enemy aliens." On the other hand, Nazis from the Sudetenland and from Danzig are classified as "cobelligerents" because they come from Czecho-Slovakia and Polish territory.

IS IT not evident that no one is seriously putting his mind on the question of how to distinguish our friends from our enemies, and that the effect of these fumbles and these paradoxes, of this wooden legalism and dull routine, is to give aid and comfort to our enemies, to bring sorrow and disillusionment to our friends?

Certainly the President cannot take charge of the whole thing himself. But is it not high time that he placed the problem of the aliens here and of their relatives—our hidden allies abroad—in the hands of a man of the first quality, that he installed this statesman in a prominent place in the State Department, and that he directed him to make the actions of the Government conform to the realities of the war and to our peculiar American opportunity in the conduct of the war?

Former Philadelphia Publisher Is Bankrupt

Philadelphia, March 20 (AP).—John C. Martin, former publisher of the defunct Evening Ledger and son-in-law of the late Cyrus H. K. Curtis, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy today, listing liabilities of $3,502,920.06 and assets of $14,848.77.

Since the petition was voluntary, the United States District Court adjudicated him a bankrupt and assigned a referee to conduct further proceedings.

Japanese Espionage

By Col. Stanley Washburn

Exact And Efficient Technique

NO COUNTRY in history has developed the technique of what we now call the Fifth Column with such exactness and efficiency as have the Japanese. It is incredible that the Military and Naval Intelligence Services and the Secret Services of all the powers have been utterly unaware of the Japanese ability to know everything about every country on which they may have designs. To understand how the Japanese knew every detail about the Hawaiian Islands, and Pearl Harbor, every landing place and strategic point in the Philippines, every road and trail throughout Malaya, and now vividly manifest their equal knowledge of Sumatra, Java and apparently again today their familiarity with the terrain of New Guinea, it is necessary to study what they have been doing all over the world since 1895. Apparently the world has only seen the results and never taken cognizance of what has been going on every year for decades.

It is the purpose of this article to try and explain the Japanese system which has been in effective operation for nearly 40 years. This writer was attached to the Japanese navy with official permission from the Japanese naval general staff to operate a dispatch boat during the summer of 1904. He was later attached to the Third Imperial Japanese army, first at Port Arthur and then in Northern Manchuria until peace was made in September, 1905. What he writes, therefore, is not merely hearsay.

At the termination of the war with China in 1895, in which conflict Japan captured Port Arthur which they were obliged shortly afterward to return to Russia, it was determined in Japan that they would fight Russia as soon as they were able so to do. Scores of Japanese officers were assigned to what they call "special duty." Their families were notified and these men simply disappeared from home and had no contacts whatever with any members of their families. When war was declared against Russia, it developed that in Vladivostok there was a colonel of the Japanese army who had been there for nine years during which time he had grown pigtails and learned both the Chinese and Russian language, and for four years had been employed as a barber in the Russian Officers' Club.

IN A SIMILAR way, a Japanese major was pulling a rickshaw in Vladivostok, and there was nothing stirring in that town which did not sooner or later reach these men who promptly reported to Japan. The same condition applied in Port Arthur. It was well known to the Japanese in February, 1904, that the Russians were having a circus on shore on the night of the 8th of February. The Japanese knew to a certainty that the bulk of the officers and a large proportion of the noncommissioned men and sailors of the navy would be ashore attending this entertainment. The harbor was not blacked out and the ships all showed their riding lights. Based on their intimate knowledge of conditions in Port Arthur and taking advantage of a blizzard in the Yellow Sea and the Straits of Pechili, Japanese destroyers entered the harbor and torpedoed a half dozen Russian ships which were so badly damaged that they were not able to come out for a fleet action until the following August. In the meantime the Japanese with their control of the sea, had been able to land three armies; one in Korea and two in Manchuria. In other words, the Russo-Japanese War was potentially won on that night of February 8, 1904.

There seems very little doubt that the Japanese had the same intimate information in the Hawaiian Islands and probably have had for ten years.

In the summer of 1905, when this writer was with the Third Imperial army in Northern Manchuria, it became clear to him that the Japanese possessed more intimate knowledge of the Russian army, the psychology of the commanding officers and of the Russian troops than the Russian commanders themselves ever possessed. One afternoon in August, Maj. Yasahari, the intelligence officer of the third army, came to the compound where this writer was living in an abandoned bean mill. He was accompanied by one of the most repulsive looking specimens of what the writer took to be a Chinese coolie. His feet were bound in rags, he was filthy dirty, was covered with sores and had a long pigtail. I had supposed that he, Maj. Yasahari, had brought this man to show me the conditions of the Chinese in the vicinity of our town (Fakumen, the headquarters of Gen. Nogi, commanding the army). The first impression I gained was that the unfortunate man was a leper, and I was more than amazed when the Japanese major turned to me and said, "It is my privilege to present to you Col. Tsunoda (if I recall the name correctly), a colonel in the Imperial Guards Division from Tokyo who has been on special duty in Manchuria for ten years."

TO ANYONE familiar with foreign armies, it is well known that officers of the guards, whether they were Prussian, British, or Russian, were always drawn from the ranks of the aristocracy. Those in the Imperial Guards of Japan were nearly all of the old Samurai class. That there were scores of such officers throughout Manchuria and Siberia who had volunteered to leave their homes, lose all contacts with their families, and live under every condition of squalor and menial work on the chance that in 10 years there would be a war in which they could serve their country as spies, I doubt not. Any officer who served with the American Asiatic Fleet during the years preceding and after the Russo-Japanese war is, no doubt, now aware that many of the Chinese servants employed on our war ships were really officers in the Japanese Secret Service.

In April, 1904, when this writer was in command of the Chicago Daily News dispatch boat, the Fawan, he was captured at Niewchang, and due to his stupidity of having two Japanese orderlies among his crew of 30, his ship was at once seized by the Russian authorities, the two Japanese removed, and he himself placed under arrest. The next day he was informed that one was a captain in the Japanese Navy and the other was a lieutenant. On both were found sketches of the islands past which the "Fawan" had traveled on her way to the port then held by the Russians. Due to the intercession of authorities from Petrograd and the direct orders of the Emperor, coupled with the fact that the Russians could not prove that either had any connection with the Japanese Navy or Secret Service, all were released, much to the regret of the Russian authorities who had proposed shooting the two Japanese and sending the writer to Siberia.

There is no country in the world where the complete devotion to the Emperor and the country has produced such cases of complete self-sacrifice for the good of the cause. One wonders if any graduate from West Point, Sandhurst in England, St. Cyr in France, or the Corps de Page in Petrograd would volunteer for such service which is so universal among the Japanese.

That their counter-espionage was equally effective in many instances came to the personal attention of this writer, directly or indirectly. In August, 1904, the Japanese were sending out 20 heavy siege guns (20 28 cc Howitzers) to be used at the siege of Port Arthur. For several weeks the two transports were lying at Moji on the Inland Sea. There were only 13 persons in all of Japan who knew the zero hour at which these ships were to sail for Dalny, the base for the Port Arthur operations, yet when in the early morning they put to sea, two Russian cruisers were waiting for them and both were sunk within a few minutes, carrying the priceless guns to the bottom with them. Of the 13 who knew when the ships were scheduled to depart, ten were executed within 48 hours and one was reported to be the chief of police of Tokyo. As one Japanese remarked to the writer, "We are not exactly sure who gave away the information, but we are certainly sure that we got the right one." The only ones who apparently escaped the penalty were the chief of the naval staff, the minister of marine, and a ranking admiral. It is hardly necessary to emphasize the fact that in Japan a secret is a secret!

In the summer of 1905, the seventh division of the third army drove the Russians out of the town of Fakumen which had long been the headquarters of Mischenko's Cavalry, and obviously many of the Chinese had been working with and for the Russians for the first year of the war. With their usual thoroughness, the Japanese began to round up any of the native population who might have been or were in Russian pay. All the evidence required to convict a man of espionage was to find Russian rubles on his person. Many were so discovered and promptly executed. This was within the personal knowledge of the writer as most of these executions took place behind the house in which he lived. As there were nearly all decapitations and correspondingly messy and all in public, the writer finally made a mild protest and thereafter they were all conducted in private.

IN DISCUSSING this with one of the officers of the Japanese army and explaining to him that one of them was a convert of the local Presbyterian minister, he replied with the usual Japanese courtesy, "We are very sorry, it was a mistake." I asked him if he were sure they were all guilty to which he promptly replied with his accustomed certainty, "We cannot be sure that all are spies, but we are convinced that if there were one among them, we certainly removed him." When I asked him if he thought it quite fair to the innocent, he thought the matter over and between puffs of a cigarette replied, with a smile, "One man can give away a military secret which might cost our army the loss of 10,000 casualties, and that chance we cannot take. Anyway, have you not remarked that the Chinese do not mind much?" The latter remark might even have been true for in all the executions this writer witnessed, he never saw a flicker of an eye or a change in the expressions of the Chinese waiting their turn for decapitation. It seems incredible that the Western world, which has been dealing with the Japanese for 40 years, was not aware of the way in which they conduct a war and the danger of espionage from all classes of the Japanese, from bankers to coolies, and officers to enlisted men.

Though what I have written is of Japanese methods more than 30 years ago, it applied equally to the present war. It is exactly what happened in Hawaii, the Philippines, Malaya, and now Java. According to the press reports from Batavia, one Japanese plane was brought down and the pilot thereof was identified as having been an official in a Japanese bank in Batavia two years before. Americans must realize that this is the kind of foe, we face, not only in the Pacific, but wherever at home or abroad we deal with the Japanese. It is futile to abuse the Japanese simply because we do not like them, but it is very important to realize their strength, more so than to criticize them for their wanton and unscrupulous methods of war. Every regiment, every ship is in reality a suicide corps that prefer death to defeat.

Americans must learn that by individual sacrifice and effort throughout this country, we must not only match our iron with the Japanese but our unity in the same measure that they are united. If this country and our system of Government are to survive, there must be an elimination of groups and blocs and our parties and factions united in a common cause.

R. A. F. Sinks German Naval Patrol Boat

London, March 20 (AP).—A flying boat of the R. A. F. coastal command destroyed a German naval patrol boat in the Bay of Biscay today, the air ministry announced tonight.

Only this week the admiralty declared the Bay of Biscay dangerous to shipping in a move to plug a blockade leak through which goods have been reaching Germany by way of France.

The German patrol boat was "left sinking and was abandoned by its crew," the air ministry stated.

The Gallup Poll . . .

By Dr. George Gallup

Views of Farmers

Princeton, N. J., March 20.—The success of the farm bloc in pushing through the House of Representatives a provision forbidding the Government to sell Government-held farm surpluses under parity prices and thus depriving the Administration of an important inflation-control lever is another indication of a gap between public opinion and Congressional action.

Attachment of the provision to the regular agricultural appropriation bill provides evidence of the zeal and strength of the farm bloc, but it also poses the question of whether the farm bloc and other such special groups operating in the Nation's Capitol really speak for the rank and file whom they claim to represent.

Surveys of public opinion have, as a matter of fact, demonstrated that the farm bloc quite frequently does not speak for the farmers, that it has opposed legislation which the farmers have shown themselves willing to accept in the public's interest. Similarly, although the National War Labor Board is confronted with increasing demands from union leaders for wage increases, the rank and file of labor has been willing to accept strict wage regulations at present levels.

The recent provision which will prevent the Commodity Credit Corporation from using its surpluses to control inflation was urged not only in the face of Presidential opposition, but also in face of the fact that farmers are willing to submit to strict governmental regulation for the duration of the emergency.

Farmers Favor Controls

In a Nation-wide survey conducted just before Pearl Harbor farmers and labor along with the rest of the public approved rigid wage and price controls similar to those now operating in Canada. The farmers questioned in this poll, by a vote of almost two to one, favored the Canadian plan which includes the fixing of prices of farm products.

The public's vote at that time showed 63 per cent approving wage-price legislation, 28 per cent opposed, and 9 per cent undecided. The farmers as a group voted 59 per cent in favor, 31 per cent opposed, 10 per cent undecided.

By 2 to 1 Majority

Again shortly after the United States entered the war, the farmers placed their stamp of approval upon the Government's right to impose rigid crop and price controls upon them in the interest of a more stable and efficient war economy, and again labor also approved such regulations, including wage control.

In this second poll, the farmers were asked, "In time of war shall the Government have the right to tell farmers what corps they must raise and what prices they are to get?" The results again showed the farmers approving by an almost two to one majority, although once again their approval ran slightly below that of other groups.

Transport Problem

By Frank Henius

Latin Trade, A War Necessity

WE NOW KNOW that the sister republics can supply us with the strategic and critical materials we need so badly, in great quantities and infinite varieties. We not only can and must import their iron, copper, chrome and many rarer metals and minerals, but also quartz crystals, industrial diamonds and ores of many varieties. We must not only have new sources of rubber, but also additional supplies of oils and fats, herbs and plants, waxes and fibers. The mines and forests, the fields and the beaches must yield their products if we are to carry on. But to get these products means transportation of all kinds, in and from the countries which can supply us with them in the quantities which we shall need.

We can only make use of the existing systems of carrying and shipping goods both inside the Latin republics as well as from them to us, at this time. If these were normal times and our desire to get goods from Central and South America as great and urgent as it is now, we would probably start vast financial and engineering enterprises. These might be privately supported or built with monies given by our own Government, which is now giving millions for many projects of various kinds to Latin American governments and individual enterprises and corporations. But today, we cannot supply any longer the materials necessary for building new railways, steamers, or ports, we cannot spare the men whom we would otherwise be happy to lend to plan, construct, supervise and complete such new services. Therefore, we can only equip railroads which exist, provide better port facilities where they are already built so they can handle larger cargoes more efficiently. But we can enlarge existing airports and build new ones; we can also help to extend existing highways and roads, and help to build new inland arteries to connect the producing with the shipping centers. And all this, to keep it running, to maintain and assure its efficiency, will also need the necessary machine shops, the spare parts, and last but not least, the one great new medium of transportation of men and materials which will have to come to our rescue: Airplanes and all their operation and maintenance means.

AND AT SEA we need ships. We know it. Our good neighbors know it. Not only do we need more and more ships, but we need adequate protection for them to assure their safe voyage from and to the Central and South American to our own North American ports. We have to build ships, equip ships, but we also have to clear the sea routes of enemy submarines who are sneaking no doubt from some hidden caches either along the Mexican coast or on some of the Central or South American islands, which in centuries past were the lair of pirates, sea robbers and murderers. The constant torpedoing of our own and our friends' ships, along our own coast, near Cuba and as a matter of fact anywhere along the sea lanes of this hemisphere must be halted. Enemy caches of oil, repair parts and provisions must be destroyed and their operations stopped forever.

That this is a very necessary and indeed most vital problem for our Navy and Air Force is not only shown by the ever increasing number of ships which we are losing on our own coast and very close to our southern sea borders, but the great danger which this means to our whole war effort. It is not only a question of losing tonnage, even of losing men, though every trained seaman or engineer is a great loss to any country at any time. But the fact that such piratical encroachment on our supply lines exists is also detrimental to the entire system of strategic material production in the Latin countries. Producers might not wish to further entrust the cargoes thus loaded for our benefit in their own bottoms for fear of sustaining irreparable losses. No one can blame them for this, and when the President of Brazil recently issued a decree, calling all ships flying the Brazilian flag back to port, we began to realize this new and grave danger to our production. For all the energy and all the sacrifices at this end would be useless if some of the most vital products and materials, which since the fall of Singapore and Java must come to us from Latin America, do not reach their U. S. A. destination.

Transportation therefore is one of the greatest needs and a very necessary part of our war production and our successful waging of the war. And its elementary military necessity is recognized when we realize that such transportation, just like our military effort, must be carried through successfully on land, at sea and in the air.

And this is one instance where we have not been too late, nor have we done too little. For every dollar, and therefore the millions of dollars, which we agreed to lend or have lent already to any of the Good Neighbors for the improvement of their transportation is a means to this end. For without this transportation we would spend all the other millions as well as our energy and theirs in vain. The increase of existing resources, whether in mines, forests, pastures or elsewhere, or the new development of resources or products and materials, would all be more or less useless if we cannot first transport them from the source of their production or gathering to the shipping point or port in their country of origin, and, secondly, from there to our own shores and into our own factories and warehouses.

But we have apparently been foresighted in this respect, and if we were not, we certainly were lucky to contribute and cooperate in the creating or improving of new and existing transportation facilities. Apart from the new air bases which we are building in some of our neighbor countries, our payments and commitments, as far as they have been disclosed by the Export-Import Bank which handles such payments, are indeed striking. For one of the important classifications in this series of loans and works is allotments for road building, construction material, equipment and services, as well as for railroads. To take the latter first, we have granted, for example, to Argentina $250,000 for Westinghouse air brakes; Chile received an allotment of $2,200,000 for Baldwin and American locomotives for the Chilean state railways; Mexico $500,000 for American Car and Foundry cars, for its nationally owned railroad; Brazil, for cars from the same firm, received 7 million dollars, which also includes American and Baldwin locomotives as well as Pullman car purchases, all for its Central Railways. The Brazilian Sorocabana Railway received $4,632,000 for U. S. A.-made locomotives and other equipment. Rails to the amount of $1,575,000 were ordered from the Inland Steel Co. for the railroad which runs through the Rio Grande do Sul and bears its name. Also $1,312,500 was granted for U. S. A.-made locomotives to the Banco do Brasil and $1,060,000 for Pullman and American Car and Foundry cars to the Brazilian government railways. Surely, a good example or prevision and, if all the sums allotted have been applied to purchases, and if all these purchases have and will be shipped, this constitutes a great improvement of the existing systems, to the benefit of their shippers as well as our own. Of course steamers, too, have not been overlooked in this program, and precisely Brazil, who thus far has been the heavy sufferer from torpedo attacks, received $2,275,000, via its Lloyd Brasileiro Line, for the purchase of Moore-McCormack steamers.

But besides the railroads and the boats, road building and all it implies was not overlooked. For this purpose, including all necessary construction material, equipment and services, 12 million dollars went to Colombia, $4,600,000 to Costa Rica, 25 million dollars to Cuba, 3 million dollars to the Dominican Republic, $30,000 only to Ecuador, $575,000 only to Brazil, but 6 million dollars to Haiti, 4 million dollars to Nicaragua, $2,500,000 to Panama, 3 million dollars to Paraguay. This, in addition to the many airport construction projects, surely will ameliorate and probably in many cases complete the transportation systems which the countries in which they are built or improved need just as much as we do to take advantage of any increases of production or demand by us. And these allotments or payments were all made up to last June, for the Import-Export Bank no longer publishes details of the applications of its loans or commitments, though we may be sure that many other large amounts have been granted for similar purposes.

And, of course, not only each individual republic and we ourselves benefit by such development, but it is greatly in the interest of all republics of the Americas, a truly inter-American improvement and the means of better trade, better communication and even better understanding. This is easily understood when we remember that apart from our own cooperation, the Latin republics are themselves improving their railroads and highways. Thus, for example, Peru and Bolivia, in accordance with the protocol they signed at the last Lima conference, are setting up a mixed commission to study and report to the two governments on the construction of a paved highway connecting La Paz, the capital of Bolivia, with Peru's border on Lake Titicaca. Thus it would contact the Peruvian road system and become an important link in the central South American alternate route of the Pan-American Highway. It will further enable all-year traffic between the countries south of Peru. Further, last month, a loan of 20 million dollars to five Central American republics (to speed work on their portions of the Pan-American Highway—our land life line to the Panama Canal) was approved by our own Public Works Administration. Of the loan, Costa Rica will receive 8 million dollars and the bulk of the remaining 12 million dollars will be spent in Nicaragua. The rest is to be used to improve difficult and rough spots in the other three republics, of which El Salvador and Honduras already possess all-weather highways over which supplies and troops could pass to Panama without much difficulty.

Birthday Greetings Sent To General's Daughter, 21

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his Chief of Staff, Maj. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, lost their iron-hard thoughts of war for at least one fleeting moment this week to wish by cablegram a "happy twenty-first birthday" to Maj. Gen. Sutherland's daughter in Washington.

It was the first word Mrs. Sutherland and daughter, Natalie Sutherland, of the Kennedy-Warren Hotel, had heard directly from Gen. Sutherland since Christmas. It was the first word the Sutherlands here had had from Gen. MacArthur since Mrs. Sutherland departed from the Philippines last May. Gen. Sutherland, they knew from press accounts, had gone on the speedboat off the islands to the waiting plane and to Australia with his beloved chieftain.

Hessler Studio

A complete description of that wild, wave-tossed exodus to the newer, larger fighting fields isn't known in detail to the officer's family here, nor to anyone else now. Mrs. Sutherland wants to hear her husband tell about it some day. It was in his character to love such an experience, she knows.

The daughter, turned 21 on Thursday, is a student at the Corcoran Art School here. They lived as neighbors with the MacArthurs in the Philippines and witnessed the general driving himself and subordinates in preparation for what did come in the islands. But for nearly three months they had been dropped from all contacts with husband, father and fighting-man friends.

Then this week, their minds flashing back home, MacArthur and Sutherland thought of the birthday. They cabled:

Happy twenty-first birthday for Natalie and love for both of you. Dick and MacArthur.

The cable was sent by Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett. It was filed at 1:38 p. m., March 19, Australia time.

In the islands, Mrs. MacArthur had seen MacArthur as a neighbor sees a man, she recalled yesterday, and he was reading, working, studying constantly. With her husband, she went to the Philippines from Tientsin, China, soon after the Japanese began their invasion. Mrs. Sutherland loved the Chinese, their ways and culture, and didn't want to leave. Gen. Sutherland was glad to whet his sword in work with MacArthur. Mrs. Sutherland, leaving, watched China plodding into its long troubles.

Chinese around her were looking at the American flag as the symbol and reality of protection. The Japanese then were respecting it. Once she saw some Chinese drive a herd of cattle into Tientsin. Each trudging beast wore on each horn a small American flag. It was a moment whe she alternately thrilled and was filled with forebodings.

Gen. Sutherland became MacArthur's Chief of Staff within six months of his arrival in the Philippines. He found little time for the type of golfing he once played to win the Army's championship. But, it was remembered yesterday, he was in the environment where were his best chances of being—in the extremest tests—what he always had wanted to be—a soldier.

Gen. Sutherland, from the first day he could think, had wanted to attend West Point. His father, a West Virginia Senator, sent him to Yale. Sutherland left there in 1916 with the Yale Battery for service on the Mexican border. He never left the Army. Transferred to duty in Chattanooga, Tenn., he was married on October 1, 1919. Mrs. Sutherland has lived the Army life with him in two hemispheres. She remembers France, China and some of the oppressive heat, the pleasant big houses one lived in in the Philippines, and the Moros there who doted on Life Magazine and would give up their fishing and diving to sprawl in groups on the ground around the magazine.

When she was compelled to return home last June, Mrs. MacArthur went to the big liner Washington to see her off. Mrs. Sutherland left, remembering Mrs. MacArthur as one of the most charming women who ever lived out there. And Gen. MacArthur doesn't call her "Ma'am," as many reports would have it. Take it from an old neighbor.

He calls her Jean.

Lily Pons Tells Her Technique For Looking Tall

SMALL women 5 feet or over, who long to appear ta'l and willowy, might take a tip on dressing from petite Lily Pons, popular singing star. Miss Pons, who is appearing at Constitution Hall tonight with her conductor-husband, Andre Kostelanetz, and the National Symphony Orchestra, has long been a model in dress for the "little woman."

According to Miss Pons, there are certain tricks to looking grand and regal with only 5 feet to go on, and she has always found her lack of height an asset rather than a liability.

"Never wear a dress with an exaggerated waistline," is her first rule. "It will make you look cut in two and emphasize your shortness. Concentrate on shoulder and hemline treatment and avoid wide, ornamental belts, no matter what the fashion is. Of course, a dress with a vertical stripe is ideal for creating the illusion of height. Rounded shoulders and slim skirts—all fashionable—are perfect for the short woman."

Hats that attract attention and give the illusion of height are advised for the short girl by Prima Donna Lily Pons, who is appearing at Constitution Hall tonight. Miss Pon's heightening chapeau, above, is white lace with roses.

"Flowers in Your Hair"

For evening wear, avoid the slinky, the glamorous, the draped silhouette with the slashed skirt, says Miss Pons. This prima donna of concert stage, films and radio believes off-the-shoulder necklines, wide swirling skirts and soft back fulness are more becoming. "And wear flowers in your hair," she advises. A cluster of blooms atop the head works wonders for height creation, she finds, and is a device to which only small girls can resort with grace and effect.

Accessories are most important in creating an effect of height, Miss Pons has found. "One little wrong detail can ruin an entire costume," she says. For example, she advises that the small woman should never carry a large purse. A large "overnight" type of bag may be an excellent carrier for one's innumerable odds and ends, she agrees, but it is also a drastic height reducer.

In millinery Miss Pons favors extreme hats with high crowns. "My friends say I wear crazy hats," she says, "and I am afraid they are right. I do like strange, unusual hats. But they must always be high off the head. Pancake hats, pill-boxes and toques make one look squat. Extreme hats are all right, but they must be small and high. They should have all their trimming at the back—otherwise they will be too heavy looking."

Never wear low-waisted dresses, and ignore the long-torso mode, says the singer. She knows from experience that they decrease the length of the leg. She adds that the two-tone dress slashed with color in the skirt tends to pull the eye away from the straight up and down effect short women should try to achieve.

Smartest Are Simplest

In many ways, Miss Pons believes, the short woman has an advantage over the tall woman. The feather hair cut and up-swept hair comb, so popular these days, are flattering to the little woman, whereas they are often unbecoming on a tall girl. Short cropped hair adds a distinction of grace to the tiny woman.

"The small woman should remember," Miss Pons adds, "that the smartest clothes are inevitably the simplest. Tailored clothes are always appropriate and in good taste. Although they sometimes lend a masculine air to tall women, they enchance the feminity of small women. There is something in the contrast between severity and petiteness which brings out every ounce of youthful charm in the small woman." J. D.

Wed Nine Years, to Girl 4 Years His Senior, Whose Attitude Toward Marriage Is, 'I Want—,' Man Is Frustrated Husband and Worried Father

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Nine years ago, when I was 22, I married a girl then 26. We were much in love at the time and expected great things of life together. During our first year of marriage, a son was born to us prematurely, who died. After that, I redoubled my efforts to make my wife happy. I showered her constantly with little surprises of flowers and candy and even dresses (of my selecting), which delighted her.

During the second year of marriage, just as we were established in our own apartment, nejoly furnished out of our joint earnings (which were small), she became pregnant again. This was contrary to plan, but since it happened, I was delighted. However, she had to be coaxed for four months to have the child. She argued that we needed more fun before settling down; but I felt that a young family, devoted and loving, was fun in itself. Anyway, a daughter was born to us,—whom she idolized. I managed to meet the bills by working 19 hours a day for nearly 18 months. I am not a good money manager and neither is she; but the emergency was well met.

It was then, however, that I noticed the beginning of the trouble that swamps us today. She was selfish, impatient and had no initiative. She waited for me to think all thoughts and to execute all plans, with no help or encouragement. With her, it was always, "I want—." She never tried to do anything well. Just to do it seemed enough for her. Our home was never thoroughly cleaned, unless I did it. The baby was never regularly trained or fed. There was no routine regarding infant care. This irked me very much. The baby was 18 months old when I finally enforced certain procedure, which I had previously suggested, to stop the child from nightly bed wetting.

Gradually I lost interest in my wife and home and found interests outside. My wife was always too tired and "head-achey" for affection, although I had always treated her with the greatest tenderness. We became more like relatives than husband and wife. Then, ironically, she became pregnant again in 1937, following the only expression of love we had shared in a year. We had to go through the whole course of debate and persuasion as before. Again, a girl was born. My wife promised to be a better mother to this child in its infancy; and I promised to be more the husband I had been at first. Our promises reciprocally expired.

Our daughters are now 7 and 4. They are very apt and likeable youngsters, who desperately need guidance. Neither one obeys her. She has recently been appointed to a good position (only heaven knows how she got it),—and when she is home, there is constant confusion, bickering, crying and shouting between her and the children. When the children and I are alone, they are as angels. It is not from fear, either, for I seldom must punish them. I play with them; help the older girl with her lessons; and, as often as possible, help them prepare for supper, take their nightly bath and get to bed. They really go to sleep with laughter. However, my work is such that I can be home of nights only one week in three, although I spend some part of every day there.

My wife has, I think, encouraged by neglect my philandering (if such it is) interest in others. I have strayed so far in the last four years that she no longer believes I can completely return to her—any more than I believe she could become the wife to me, and mother to our children, that I would want.

My problem is this: We both love our children. She loves them in terms of what she wants them to be. I love them in terms of being willing to try to help them develop as intelligent, well-trained, cultivated persons. She can't do anything with them. I can. I have suggested to her that we separate, letting me keep the children, simply for their benefit. I will guarantee her (legally, if necessary) that she can always have access to the children; that it is not my intention to deprive her of them. She can afford her own place. Yet she doesn't consent. Nor does she propose any alternative plan—except her keeping the children. Can you offer me a plan? (The foregoing account of our situation is exact, to the best of my ability to state facts in words.) Sincerely, A. B. H.

Must Suffer Wife For Children's Sake

DEAR A. B. H.: Since you consider your fatherly companionship, care and training to be indispensable to your children's normal development, and are determined that they shall receive full benefit of what you have to give, I believe you must face (and adapt to) the fact that you are "stuck" with their mother. Since she is unwilling to live apart from them, letting their custody go by default to you, I should say that you are helpless to take them away from her, regardless of her slipshod incompetence as a parent.

Two considerations arise to block your plan. On the one hand, society traditionally favors the mother as the (shall we say?) essential parent, from the viewpoint of the child's emotional needs,—if a choice between parents, as sole custodian, must be made. The weight of sentiment being on her side, ordinarily a mother can be legally divested of her children's custody only if it has been formally established that she is of wantonly vicious or irresponsible character,—in such ways as being mentally unbalanced, a chronic alcoholic, or sexually promiscuous. In such event, she may be adjudged unfit to exert a guardian's influence upon minor-age persons. But it seems plain that this type of charge does not apply to your wife.

On the other hand, your record of marital infidelity, if brought to issue, would automatically disqualify you for the role of principal guardian in the affairs of small children. The law takes a literal, not philosophic, view of human behavior; and the possibility that you were the distrait victim of circumstance would hardly be taken into account as a mitigating factor, if the import of your "philandering" were being weighed in court.

Some might think that your wife, having found matehood and motherhood equally distasteful, will one day abandon the situation,—and the three of you,—of her own accord. But if any should hold out that hope, don't build on it. In all probability, she is fairly well content with the existing arrangement,—now that she has not only disciplined you to shift for yourself in matters emotional, but saddled you with most of the character-building chores of parenthood, as well. She is the sort of woman,—of whom there are many,—who take a husband for purely selfish and social reasons. She looked to you for coddling and material care. Unconsciously, she planned on going through life being a little girl, enjoying your benevolent protectorate. She is a "taker from" a relationship; not a "bringer to." As you say, her attitude toward marriage, from the beginning, was, "I want—." Aptly and unawarely, you give her measure.

Too immature to sense the value of sexual reciprocity in marriage, and too selfish to invest herself fully in motherhood, she has contrived, over a period of nine years, to shape her relationship with you to a mold that most comfortably accommodates her sterile nature. And I imagine, therefore, that she will cling to the arrangement with true parasitical tenacity—not only because, on the human or emo- discommoding to change, but, also because, an the human or emotional side, it suits her (so she thinks) about as well as the next situation might.

Facing the fact that you must suffer her for the children's sake, you may ask: "But how can a man adapt to this situation?" And the answer to that question lies within yourself; and you can only arrive at it by diligent soul searching. It must take shape from your resources of courage and intelligence. Nobody can hand the answer to you, ready made. I believe, however, that you can (a) best take stock of your personal resources and (b) get a perspective on life that will enable you to chart a tolerable compromise course, by (c) thoroughly reviewing the "case history" of your marriage, and all its implications, with a trained analyst of human behavior. Once you get an objective slant on all factors involved in the impasse, the road ahead for you will begin to "come clear." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Simple Course In Diets Will Keep You Fit

By Ida Jean Kain

HOW would you like to take a "nutrition refresher course" right along with your dietitian? The recent developments in this science are so significant that to be sure we don't miss a thing I am back at Columbia University for a brief round-up of the research now in progress as well as a review. I'll pass along the highlights.

This short special course is being given for the home economics women in business and is directed by Dr. Grace MacLeod and Dr. Clara Taylor.

When it comes to driving home the fact that we are what we eat, there is nothing so convincing as a glimpse of the effect of a diet on experimental animals. There is the most astonishing contrast between the animals that are kept on a diet considered good enough—and one that is a lot better than many people follow—and those placed in a superior diet for a similar length of time.

Nutrition Heritage

It has been proved beyond any question that a heritage of good nutrition, and particularly with reference to plenty of milk, promotes a longer prime of life and a higher level of health. If you, your parents and your grandparents, all got enough milk to drink, you stand a better chance of living to an active old age.

One experiment of this kind has been going on through 50 generations of white rats—about 1500 years, as we reckon time. The object throughout has been to establish the advantage of an optimum diet over one that is adequate just by including more milk. One diet consists of five-sixths of ground whole wheat to one-sixth dried whole milk; the other of two-thirds ground whole wheat to one-third dried whole milk.

The diet supplying the greater portion of milk has proved superior in every respect. Although the first generation of the rats showed little effect, there was a marked change in the second generation, and this change has become more pronounced with each succeeding generation. On the increased milk diet there has been less infant mortality, the rats have stronger bones, they reproduce more quickly and over a longer period, and they stay young and live longer.

Calcium Deficiency

For some reason adults seem to fancy milk is only for children and nursing mothers, and as a consequence the average diet results in nervousness, irritability and easily broken bones. No matter what your age, calcium is necessary to steady nerves and good bone structure. On the low calcium diets even the animals are jumpy and nasty tempered—just like some people!

And do you doubt that calcium affects your bones? Well, I wish you could have seen the difference between the leg bones of two rats (deceased, of course!) which had been kept on high and low calcium diets.

Easter Beige Ensemble

QUERY: I would like to know what color hat, gloves and purse to select for a beige suit. My suit has elbow length sleeves, high button neckline and brown buttons. A blouse is not necessary under the jacket. My hair is dark brown—almost black. I already have beige shoes.

ANSWER: If you must be practical about your accessories, select a large brown straw hat, brown fabric gloves and a brown calf purse, all matching the brown buttons on your suit. These will offer a contrast to your suit and shoes and yet be appropriate for wear with other costumes. If, however, you wish to be more gay for Easter, choose a hat of rich, deep, forest green (a South American color of green rather than Kelly green) with fabric gloves to match. (Matching hat and gloves are very smart for spring.) The handbag might then be beige to match your shoes.

Bermuda Outfit

QUERY: I am going to Bermuda to be in government work for the duration. Most of my wardrobe is tailored, with the exception of a couple of dainty hats, frilly blouses and dress-up dresses for informal affairs. Since I am familiar with the Washington shops, I would like to make the necessary "fill-ins" before I leave. Are washable cottons and white shoes suitable to wear?

ANSWER: As it is summer all year around in Bermuda, nothing but sport clothes and strictly summer wear washable cottons are worn. It gets slightly cooler in the winter months of January and February, but even then lightweight woolens in pastel or light colors are seen.

Dark outfits of any type are seldom worn. White accessories are generally the rule. The present trend for bright colors, which is predicted to continue for summer wear in Washington, will probably permeate to Bermuda in high style fashions. Since most shops sold British imported clothes before the war, both British, as well as American-made frocks, are likely to be scarce.

Informality is the rule when it comes to biking—shorts being perfectly acceptable. There will be less formality in evening dress, however. A long, dinner dress type of frock in cotton would probably suffice for most occasions.

Your washable cottons and white shoes will be very suitable. You are advised not to take any of your dark clothes, dark accessories or other winter garb such as a fur coat. None of these items will be needed. Their place will be filled by the need for sport clothes, sport shoes and possibly one or two sheers for occasional dress-up wear.

Casual Coat

QUERY: What color and type of coat would you suggest for all-year-around casual wear to go with anything. I don't want black or navy blue.

ANSWER: A natural color soft fleece type of coat in box or wrap-around style makes a smart, casual coat for wear any time of year. Coats with loopover belts, made like a military coat, are available now and would give a more dress-up appearance than a boxy boy's type of coat.

Learn Facts About U.S. Navy

IN 1775, Congress appropriated $100,000 for an American Navy. In 1942, we have appropriated at one stroke more than $26,000,000,000.

These figures tell a mighty rise in naval power, in ships and personnel, that's fascinating to read about—whether you're a homebound civilian or thinking of joining up.

Navy spirit today is that of our John Paul Jones who, as his ship Bon Homme Richard was sinking beneath him, cried "I have not yet begun to fight!"—and then forced the enemy to surrender.

But modern Navy equipment and our prowess in naval invention would astonish that doughty sea hero!

What you may not know is that the dreaded dive bomber was developed by our own Navy and the first practical submarine was designed by an American.

So many complex jobs must be done and done well in the Navy today that each sailor is a specialist. You may have seen sailor's insignia for a torpedoman. Did you know that the torpedo itself is a "small ship" with a rudder? Modern torpedoes carry up to 6,000 pounds of high explosives?

Chances for good men in the Navy are many. Our 40-page booklet on the Navy tells Navy requirements for officers and men; training pay and chances for promotion. Describes ships, naval aviation; how our fleets are organized and commanded. Gives a brief history of the Navy with many little-known facts; has pictures of naval insignia, photographs of fighting ships, planes and personnel.

Send 15c (plus one cent to cover cost of mailing) for our booklet, "Our Fighting Navy," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Ambassador of Paraguay Arrives in Washington

No Legations and Ministers Left In Latin-American Contingent

By Carolyn Bell

Now that the Ambassador of Paraguay has arrived there isn't a South American legation left. Thanks to the good neighbor policy, they are all full-fledged Embassies, headed of course by Ambassadors.

Arriving at 11 a. m. yesterday, the new professor-diplomat, Dr. Celso Velazquez, was accompanied by quite an entourage. And there wasn't an English-speaking person in the carload. But its dollars to doughnuts that they will all be using American slang before many months are out.

Accompanying her husband was Senora de Velazquez with their three children. Also in the group was Senorita Velazquez, sister of the new Ambassador. Completing the party was the envoy's secretary, Nestor Campos Rosin. They made the trip from Asuncion to Miami by plane—but completed the journey by train. They were met by Stanley Woodward and Philip Bonsal of the State Department.

S. A. Legations Change Status

In a few short years Washington has seen tiny legations (often with only the Minister comprising the stage) mushroom to embassies complete with counselors and first to third, and even fourth, secretaries. And Paraguay completes the group. Uruguay—"the Denmark of South America"—formerly was represented by a lone Minister—who resided at the Carlton. Now the stage of eight (including naval and military attaches) is headed by Juan Carlos Blanco, an Ambassador.

Keeping the records straight is just a bit difficult—even for George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol of the State Department. One of the busiest desks in the department is that known as "R. A." According to Mr. Summerlin it should be D. A. R. (department of American Republics), "but they didn't want to become confused with that worthy women's organization," he laughed. Hence the switch to "R. A."

Although he has not yet presented his credentials, Dr. Luis Fernando Guachalla has been named Ambassador of Bolivia. Having served here since 1936 as Minister, Dr. Guachalla is familiar with Capital routine. Another "old-timer" who only recently had his title changed is Ambassador Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro, of Ecuador. For the past two years he has had the somewhat ambiguous status of Ambassador as well as Minister. However, with the settling of the Peruvian-Ecuadorian boundary dispute at the Rio conference, he has now been made a full-fledged Ambassador.

Former Head Of University

But to return to the arrival of the Velazquez family: Although this is his first fling at diplomacy, the new envoy is well known—on this side of the Rio Grande, as well as his own. One of the foremost educators and philosophers of his country, he has been rector of the University of Paraguay for the past five years. A lawyer by profession, he has led a singularly retiring life.

Stocky, with blue eyes, round face and slightly graying hair, the new diplomat is in his middle forties. At one time he served as undersecretary of the treasury. He also served as judge of the primary courts of the Court of Appeals and in military tribunals when a major in the Paraguay army.

Dr. Velazquez has been following in the footsteps of the famous Latin educator, Dr. Cecilio Baez, who was rector of the University of Paraguay when the present diplomat was dean of the law school. Temporarily, at least, Dr. and Senora de Velazquez will make their home at the Wardman Park Hotel. Senora de Velazquez, before her marriage, was Senorita Maria Antonio Fernandez Guanes and is a native of Asuncion, where the Ambassador also was born.

Elizabeth Gatchell To Be Bride of Lieut. Seneff

Col. Oscar James Gatchell, professor of mechanics at the United States Military Academy, and Mrs. Gatchell, announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Victoria, to Lieut. George Philip Seneff, jr., U. S. A., son of Col. George P. Seneff, U. S. A., and Mrs. Casey H. Hayes, Honolulu, T. H.

Miss Gatchell attended the Lee School, Boston, Mass., the National Cathedral School, Washington, D. C., and was graduated from St. Mary's School, Peekskill, N. Y.

Lieut. Seneff attended the University of Illinois and was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1941. He is a member of the Psi Upsilon Fraternity. He is now stationed with the Fourth Armored Division at Pine Camp, N. Y.

The wedding will take place in April.

Notables Attend Christening of Smathers' Baby

If little Fairfax Virginia Smathers doesn't grow up to be a Senator, it won't be for lack of Senatorial influence at her christening. With a Senator for a father (William H. Smathers, of New Jersey), the president of the Senate (Vice President Wallace) for a godfather, and the chaplain of the Senate (Dean ZeBarney Phillips, of Washington Cathedral) performing the christening Thursday afternoon, it doesn't seem as though wee Fairfax could miss. Born New Year's Eve, she owes her name to the fact that Senator and Mrs. Smathers were married in Fairfax County, Va.

The christening took place in the Children's Chapel of the Cathedral, and Fairfax is the first baby to be baptized in the chapel's new font. Besides the Vice President, the baby's godparents are Mrs. Hugo Black and Mrs. Lister Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Graeme Allen (Mrs. Allen is Mrs. Smathers' sister) came from their home in Winter Haven, Fla., for the ceremony and to spend a few days with the Smathers in their Mayflower apartment. Another house guest is Mrs. Smathers' mother, Mrs. James W. Foley, also of Winter Haven.

After the christening, the party returned to the Mayflower, had cocktails in the hosts' apartment, and then proceeded to the Presidential dining room for dinner. In addition to the family and the godparents, guests included Mrs. Wallace, Associate Justice Black, Senator Alben Barkley, Senator Hill, Senator A. B. ("Happy") Chandler, Dean and Mrs. Phillips, Representative Edward J. Hart, of New Jersey, and Commissioner of Public Buildings W. E. Reynolds.

Senator and Mrs. Smathers, Mrs. Foley, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Allen are leaving for Atlantic City today to spend the weekend.

Mrs. Delos Emmons Gives Dinner

Mrs. Delos Emmons, wife of Lieut. Gen. Emmons, entertained at dinner last night in her apartment at the Wyoming. Gen. Emmons is in Hawaii in command of the Air Force there.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Parker, Mr. and Mrs. William McCracken, Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Capt. Tinsley Garnett, Hugh D. Auchincloss, and Capt. and Mrs. Karl Wessel.

Mrs. Willett Is Married to Lieut. Moore

Lieut. Comdr. Robert Moore and Mrs. Knox Fitz Willett, formerly of Jacksonville, Ala., were quietly married at 12:30 o'clock yesterday in St. Andrew's Chapel of the Church of the Covenant.

The Rev. Albert McCartney officiated. The ceremony was witnessed only by the bride's young son, Joseph Jackson Willett 3d, and her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Dunwoody, of Roanoke, Va. Afterward they celebrated the event together at a small breakfast before Commander and Mrs. Moore left in the afternoon for their honeymoon in the South. When they return to Washington, they will live at 2151 California Street for the duration of his assignment at the Navy Department.

The bride, a member of a well-known Alabama family, is the daughter of Mrs. Henry Benton Fitz and the late Mr. Fitz, of Jacksonville, Ala. She was graduated some years ago from the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore and has done extensive concert and radio work. She was formerly married to Joseph Jackson Willett, jr., of Anniston, Ala., from whom she was divorced in 1934.

Commander Moore is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moore, of New Orleans. He attended Yale, graduating in 1919 after returning from service in the first World War. He has been engaged in the banking and cotton brokerage business in New Orleans and New York, from which he returned to active duty in the Navy several years ago and is now on duty at the Navy Department. In 1924 he married Miss Maude Fox, of New Orleans. They were divorced in 1935.

Commander Moore is a member of the Boston Club and Southern Yacht Club, of New Orleans; the Yale Club, of New York, and the Army-Navy Club, of Washington.

Mrs. Marsh Joins Husband at Camp Wheeler

To follow or not to follow Army husbands—that dilemma faced by more and more wives nowadays—was solved a few days ago by Mrs. William A. Marsh, who left Washington last night to join Col. Marsh at Camp Wheeler, Ga.

Col. Marsh was stationed in Washington until last December, when he was transferred to the Southern post. Before going on to Georgia, Mrs. Marsh will spend a few days with her son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. Bascom S. Owen, in Virginia.

Egyptian Envoy To Be Speaker At Luncheon

The Egyptian Minister, Mahmoud Hassan Bey, will be the guest of honor at the Egyptian day luncheon today at Hotel 2400.

He will speak on his country's contribution to the Allied war effort through food supply and the strengthening of the Suez Canal defenses, and will outline the necessary factors in a real peace that will insure the permanent freedom of all peoples.

Among those at the head table will be Mme. Hassan, Anis Azer, commercial counselor of the legation, Ali Foad Toulba, the First Secretary, and Mme Toulba, Dr. Harry A. Garfield, son of the former President of the United States, and President Emeritus of Williams College, and Mrs. Garfield, Dr. Pierre Crabites, Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Britten, William Blum, jr., assistant to the chairman of the war fund drive of the District Red Cross, and Hampson Gray, former United States Minister to Egypt and to Switzerland, now solicitor of the Export-Import Bank of Washington.

Senator's Wife Guest of Honor

Mrs. William C. Harllee, wife of Col. Harllee, entertained at luncheon yesterday in honor of Mrs. Ellison D. Smith, wife of Senator Smith, of South Carolina.

The fete, which is one of a series, took place at the University Women's Club. About 30 guests were invited. Spring flowers decorated the table.

Party Today To Be Fete For Newlyweds

Meeting a tall, dark and quite new bride will be the "order of business" at a small party Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling will give this afternoon. They have asked just a few family friends in between 5 and 7 for cocktails and tea to honor their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, jr., who have just returned from their wedding trip.

An added incentive for the fete is the arrival just last night of Miss Peggy Houghteling from her junior year studies at Vassar College. She will have a little over a week's vacation to spend here.

The junior Mr. and Mrs. Houghteling are staying with his parents just now but expect to be able to move into an apartment at the Clifton Terrace sometime next week. Mrs. Houghteling, who was Miss Flora Mariotti until her marriage earlier this month, is not exactly "new" in Washington, however. She has been here about a year now and met Mr. Houghteling this fall when they were both taking a training course in government with the National Institute of Public Affairs.

Wedding Date Set

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Decatur Reed announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Mary Jane Reed, to Richard Etter Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Lester Green, of Chevy Chase. The wedding will take place in the Michigan Park home of the bride's parents on April 2.

Sylvan Colemans Here From New York 'for the Duration'

By Martha McLean

Mrs. Sylvan Coleman was disappointed. "Oh, I thought maybe you were the slip cover people," she said via telephone.

Such disappointment is understandable from a bride of about five months, who was just in the throes of moving from the Wardman Park yesterday to Georgetown. Mr. and Mrs. Coleman came here from New York about two weeks ago. There he was a partner in the E. F. Hutton firm; here he is assisting Frank Folsom in the office of procurement and material of the Navy. She is the former Pamela Plunkett.

They didn't find the house in Georgetown they'd been hoping for—it would have been fun to remodel it to fit their antiques. But they didn't find things as difficult as the terror tales they'd heard in New York about Capital Town had led them to believe, either.

"An ant hill' is what the big new apartment building they'll be living in from today on reminds Mrs. Coleman of, but atop it they have "a penthouse terrace apartment." That's what Mrs. Coleman—it must be the New Yorker in her—likes to call it, although she admitted it wasn't as wonderful as it sounds. Anyway, it's at the Carlyn, to which a number of newcomers have moved recently.

They've already dubbed the terrace "kennel run" for it is just about big enough for a dog, "a very small dog," Mrs. Coleman amended. But this "strange sort of apartment" has its points, too. It has an unusually large living room, which will make it nice for friends and parties. That will have to come later, for just now paramount questions darting and dashing through Mrs. Coleman's mind are of more prosaic nature. "Where am I going to put this piece or that and about those slip covers?"

Mrs. Coleman plans to run up to New York, the town she knows best, to get some of the things she'll need, so everything won't be really "settled" when she and Mr. Coleman settle down for their first evening in Georgetown tonight.

But they've found a place to live—and that was supposed to have been impossible. And they've found a maid—and that was supposed to have been impossible. Just goes to show it can still be done anyway. Success story!

New Zealand Envoy To Attend Luncheon

Representative Charles A. Eaton of New Jersey will entertain at a small luncheon today at Hotel 2400. Purpose of the luncheon is to give the host's niece, Mrs. Mary Eaton, of Baltimore, Md., a chance to meet the Minister of New Zealand and Mrs. Walter Nash.

Before coming to this country, where she is now head of the dietetic department of Johns Hopkins University, Mrs. Eaton was a citizen of New Zealand. Her father-in-law, Representative Eaton's brother, was in the shipbuilding business there for many years.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The new United States Ambassador to Cuba, Spruille Braden, and Mrs. Braden will be guests of honor at a dinner to be given Wednesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Walter N. Walmsley.

Lieut. and Mrs. Leonard Firestone, who recently came to Washington have moved into Mrs. Frederick Atherton's home on Massachusetts Avenue. Lieut. Firestone has been assigned to duty in the Navy Department.

Mrs. Benjamin Thaw left yesterday for her home near Old Lyme, Conn. She expects to be there for several weeks.

Lady Gainsborough, who has been visiting her sister in Aiken, N. C., left yesterday for New York for a few days' stay.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Dennis have returned from Delray Beach, Fla., where they spent the winter. They were joined there by their daughter, Mrs. Charles Riker, and her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith will spend the weekend at Quantico, Va., as the guests of their son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, jr. They will attend a dance at the Officers' Club this evening and a cocktail party will be given in their honor tomorrow afternoon.

Honored at Small Dinner

Mrs. John Gardner Ladd, of 2819 Garfield Street, entertained last evening at dinner in honor of her daughter, Miss Annette Ladd.

Maj. Ladd, who has just come from duty at Fort Benning, Ga., is now stationed at Fort Meade, Md.

Work in War Plants Presents Great Opportunities For Women, Connecticut Leader Declares

IN THE immediate future college-trained girls will work side by side with high school graduates in factories and war plants. There will be no distinguishing between professional and non-professional women—at least for the duration. This is the prediction of Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse, Secretary of the State of Connecticut and director Institute of Women's Professional Relations.

Interviewed yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel, Mrs. Woodhouse, who is presiding over the Conference on War Demands for Trained Personnel, sponsored by the Institute of Women's Professional Relations, pointed out that the training girls get in factory work now would be excellent basic experience for later jobs.

Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse

"This work in the factory is good," she said, "for it increases war production and at the same time provides a chance for girls to get a first-hand view of industry." The insight into the workings of industry, she explained, is invaluable training for personnel and administrative work.

In discussing the type of wartime jobs opening up for college-trained girls, Mrs. Woodhouse said, "When mothers go into war plants some center must be provided to take care of their children. College girls with specific training in that line are the ones needed and best equipped to handle those jobs."

Here she added, "I disapprove heartily of undisciplined volunteering for jobs. Women ought to do war work in the lines in which they are equipped and trained—not jump into a popular activity."

At present the greatest need for college trained women is in the scientific fields, such as chemistry, physics, nutrition, nursing and pharmacists; even women meteorologists are needed, according to Mrs. Woodhouse.

"Two years ago," she said, "I foresaw the shortage of women scientists and called a conference to study and correct the dearth, but at that time, the Institute of Women's Professional Relations couldn't get any encouragement from industry."

Queried as to what would happen to women's jobs after the war, the alert institute director promptly answered: "No one can tell definitely, but I personally see no reason why if we use our heads and think through the problem of converting back industry from war to peace, there shouldn't be jobs for both men and women. With foresight, we can avert a major postwar depression."

To do this, she warned, "we must face realities and not fall back on the tradition of ousting women from jobs when business is slack."

"The first big aim is to win the war," declared Mrs. Woodhouse. "But in so doing," she said, "keep back a little bit of energy to be good citizens. Don't rely on Washington to do everything. See that you do a good job in your city and State government." Otherwise, she warned, "we may lose the very things we are fighting to retain."

Doings of the Day

Bolton of Ohio is guest speaker at OHIO GIRLS' CLUB sixteenth annual banquet, 6:30 p. m. at Eastern Star Home, 2600 Sixteenth Street Northwest. The Ohio Girls' Club, organized in 1917 (present membership 200), has the unique distinction of being the only State girls' organization of its kind now in existence. Miss Anna Park of Columbus is chairman of the banquet committee . . . GUNSTON HALL holds annual charity bazaar, 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. at school. Stunts and skits form a continuous stage show. Climax of day is a style show, "Spring-time Fashions," modeled by seniors in the junior college and high school classes . . . Constitution chapter, D. A. R. features musical program at 2 o'clock meeting at Chapter House. Guest artists participating in program are Miss Margaret Haag, Lewis Worthrop and Miss Mollie Worthrop.

Off to New York are delegates to the thirty-eighth annual convention of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society, convening at the Hotel Astor today. A delegation of 40 Washington women, headed by Mrs. Maurice L. Bernstein, Mrs. Morris Gill, Mrs. William Kirsch and Mrs. Martin Mendelsohn, will be among the 4000 delegates and representatives attending the five-day session. Also, a group of 14 young members of the Washington chapter, Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society, headed by Mrs. Lester Goldberg and Miss Goldstein, will be present for all the society's activities.

Writers Wait Banquet

PLANS for the annual banquet of the Writers' League of Washington to be held Tuesday evening at the Fairfax Hotel were completed last night. Mrs. D. W. Thayer is in charge of reservations.

Community Garden Club To Seek Prizes

THE COMMUNITY Garden Club of Rockville, Md., which last year won a prize at the Flower Mart for its arrangement of potted plants, evergreen and flowering shrubs again will try for honors at the fourth annual Flower Mart to be held on Friday, May 1, on the Pilgrim Steps of Washington Cathedral, according to an announcement made by Mrs. George A. Garrett, general chairman of the committee. Mrs. Phillip A. Frear, in charge of the display last spring, again represents the Rockville club on the Flower Mart committee.

Nine clubs from the District and nearby vicinity already have made plans to enter displays in the mart which has become one of the most attractive spring events of its kind in the Capital.

Mrs. Edward Howrey and Mrs. Frederick Richardson will be in charge of the Garden Club of Fairfax booth. Other garden clubs taking part will be the Garden Club of Georgetown with Miss Sue Thomas in charge, the Garden Club of Chevy Chase, Mrs. Eli Swavely; the Difficult Run Garden Club, Mrs. Richard Shands, and the Trowel Club of Wesley Heights with Mrs. Walter Wyatt and Mrs. R. M. Hinckley in charge.

Much interest is being shown in the exhibits being planned by the American Women Volunteer Service in charge of Mrs. Chase Donaldson.

To Hold Supper

The Canadian Club of Washington, D. C., will hold a buffet supper and get-together tomorrow at the Washington Club, 1010 Seventeenth Street.

Colored motion pictures of Canadian beauty spots will be a feature of the program.

Save-Child Federation Plans Parties

THE WASHINGTON Committee, Save the Children Federation, will begin a series of parties next week for the benefit of children in the United States.

At these parties child-welfare work will be presented by each of the hostesses. The plan in brief: Each person is asked to attend a tea, dinner or meeting and contribute a minimum of 25 cents (amount to be set by each hostess). In turn the person acts as hostess at a similar affair the following week if possible. Also, within two days the hostess reports the names and addresses of those attending to the chairman and delivers the contributions to the treasurer.

Here's how the plan works: The original hostess invites at least seven friends to her home for tea, luncheon, dinner or meeting, asking each person to bring 25 cents or more. Whenever possible the guests are asked to bring either new or used children's clothing.

Among those who will participate in launching the drive are: Mrs. Irene B. Caldwell, who is a national sponsor of the organization and will serve as chairman in the Capitol area; Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Leon Henderson, Mrs. Robert Jackson, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Richard Sutherland, wife of Gen. MacArthur's chief of staff now in Australia; Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Albert Atwood who is giving a large tea on Thursday, March 26—asking each of her guests to bring three friends; Mrs. Philip Eaton who will give a bridge tea on March 25, including Mrs. William Borah, Mrs. Thomas Rolph, Mrs. James Gawne, Mrs. Tolman Chalker, Mrs. Emerson Howe, Mrs. James Souby, Mrs. J. H. Berry, Mrs. Craig W. Muckle, Mrs. Mark Foote and Mrs. Robert Sherrod, who will give a large cocktail party for press and Gridiron people on March 25.

Nancy Squire Is Bride of C. J. Hitch

The Lincoln Memorial Chapter of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday morning of Miss Nancy Winslow Squire, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edmund Squire, of Milwaukee, Wis., and New York, and Charles Johnston Hitch, son of Col. and Mrs. A. N. Hitch, of Boonville, Mo. The Rev. Peter Marshall officiated at the 9:30 o'clock ceremony.

The bride was attended by Mrs. William Van Precht, of New York, and Thomas K. Hitch, of Arlington, Va., served his brother as best man.

After April 6 the newlyweds will return from a flying honeymoon in New Orleans, Truxton, Ariz., and Boonville, Mo., and will make their home at 2369 Twenty-eighth Street.

The bride attended Bryn Mawr and was graduated from Northwestern University, where she was a member of Alpha Chi Omega Sorority. She also attended the College Sevigne in Paris, France. Her husband attended the University of Arizona, Harvard University and was a Rhodes scholar at Oxford University, England. A member of Delta Chi fraternity, he was a professor at Queen's College, Oxford, from 1935 until June, 1941, when he became attached to the office of W. Averill Harriman, our Minister to London. He returned to this country in January to discuss matters covering the United Nations with Government officials. He is now working at the War Production Board.

200 to Move In Maritime Board Shift

Decentralization Of Construction Division Activities Ordered by April 1

Decentralization of the United States Maritime Commission's construction activities into four regions on April 1, requiring removal of some 200 employes from Washington, was announced officially yesterday by Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, commission vice chairman.

Vickery told employes gathered in the Commerce Department auditorium that some of them must move by April 1 to regional headquarters at San Francisco, New Orleans, Chicago and Baltimore as part of a plan to spur the greatest shipbuilding program in world history.

"Whether all (of the approximately 200) will be required to move by that time we do not know," he said when a low whistle from the assembled employes greeted the announcement.

Employes affected, Vickery said, will be notified today where they are to go and when.

List Not Yet Completed

The list of those to be transferred has not been completed but Vickery said it would include probably 40 in the construction division, 50 in the technical division's plan approval section and an unestimated number in the financial division.

"I know it disrupts everybody's life," Vickery told the meeting, "but it is necessary for the proper functioning of Government and proper carrying out of the commission's war duties."

S. D. Schell, executive director of the commission, assured the employes that everything was being done to prevent unnecessary hardship in the transfers. A committee will aid in arrangements for quarters and the commission is making plans for transportation, he said.

Explaining reasons for the reorganization, Admiral Vickery said supervision of shipbuilding work must be decentralized because of the volume of correspondence and decisions which are "bottlenecking" Washington.

To Relieve "Bottleneck"

This condition will be abolished, he said, by establishment of regional construction directors having "complete authority" to make decisions in most matters concerning shipbuilding in the four respective regions—the West Coast, the Great Lakes Area, the East Coast and the Gulf Coast.

The approximately 200 employes to be moved will be divided more or less equally among the regional headquarters. Supplemented by personnel already in the field, each headquarters will have a staff of about 400, Vickery reported.

The decentralization, the commissioner said, is in no way caused by the shortage of office space in Washington. In fact, he said, the transfers will be balanced by prospective enlargement of the commission's central procurement facilities here in an effort to expedite procurement of shipbuilding materials.

Vickery told the commission employes he was "sorry" but those chosen to move to the new regional headquarters would not be given clearance to join other Federal agencies here.

U. S. Workers Parody Housing Shortage

The housing shortage, increased cost of living and other problems facing the Government employe were brought home to some 600 C. I. O. United Federal Workers last night in comical skits and serious talks at a rally in the auditorium of the South Interior Building.

Original songs like "A Dollar Ain't a Dollar Any More" and such skits as one showing a landlady renting a telephone booth for $15 a week illustrated speakers' demands for action.

Henry Rhine, president of the District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, called on the workers to use all influence toward obtaining passage of legislation for war housing in Washington, declaring: "We need action, we need homes."

Rhine also called for reduction of overtime without extra pay as a necessity for maintenance of morale among Federal employes.

The Federal workers have their obligations, too, Rhine said—to help in the war effort by doing their best work, buying defense bonds and stamps, donating blood to the Red Cross and participating in civilian defense activities.

So far they have adequately fulfilled these duties, he reported. But he urged an even greater effort.

Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, and Miss Eleanor Nelson, national secretary-treasurer of the United Federal Workers, were other speakers.

Select Teachers More Carefully, Dr. Martin Urges

More careful selection of teachers, rather than more courses in religious instruction, was suggested as the best procedure for improving character education work in the public schools by Dr. T. D. Martin, of the National Education Association, in a talk last night before the District Public School Association, meeting in the District Building.

"Let us be willing to pay salaries high enough to secure as teachers the finest and best of each new generation," Dr. Martin said.

Bible Buddy Borrowed and Lost In '17 Returned to Md. Man

Here's a tale of a Testament that went to war to return 23 years later to the man who had given it to a marine and to leave him wondering what had happened in front of "Mount Sec," France, in August, 1918.

The chronology, as Walter F. Raymond, of 6800 Exfair Road, Edgemoor, Md., reflected on it yesterday, was like this:

On April 14, 1917, in the first week of the World War, he enlisted in the Marine Corps at Boston, Mass. Sent to Parris Island, S. C., for training. Raymond almost at once received a Testament from his church, the West Somerville Congregational, located in a Boston suburb. He had, meanwhile, been given another Testament.

Another marine, finding Raymond with the two Testaments, asked him for one and Raymond handed over the one sent him by the West Somerville church. The church people had inscribed "To Walter F. Raymond from the West Somerville Congregational Church, July 22, 1917."

That was the last Raymond thought about it until yesterday, when the Testament came back.

The sender was Mrs. N. G. Vansant, of Palisades, Calif. Also inscribed in the Testament was:

"Found by N. G. Vansant in August, 1918, at Mandres, France, back of the trenches facing Mt. Sec."

An explanatory letter from Mrs. Vansant said her husband was in France during the World War in Y. M. C. A. work and that, following his death, she had found the Testament, carrying Raymond's name, among his papers. She wrote the church in Boston as the only clew to his whereabouts and there Mrs. Robert Rehm, a relative of Raymond's, supplied her with his Maryland address.

Raymond, now 47, employed as an accountant at Griffith Consumers, prodded his recollection yesterday for the name of the marine, for a recapturing of his features—but 23 years had passed.

History puts the Marines where the Testament was found in August, 1918. Up from the Belleau Wood fighting and attached to the Second Division, the Marines were aiding in reducing the St. Mihiel Salient, effected on September 14, 1918, and as one finally surmounted obstacle in their way was Mount Sec, the highest hill on the salient's south side.

There the Testament was lying on the ground. Maybe the marine was reading it, a bombardment suddenly came and he was hurried off . . . maybe he was blown to pieces and the book was struck from him . . . maybe he just lost it. Raymond is left wondering, and praising the Testament.

Fun and Frolic Wait Service Men on Leave in Capital

More than 30 different events, including sightseeing tours, dinners, dances and movies, have been arranged for the entertainment of service men visiting Washington over this weekend. The amusement program is being sponsored by churches and civic associations.

9-12 p. m.—Dance, hostesses, Y. M. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest.

The entertainment scheduled for tomorrow features a free dinner for more than 200 service men at the National Catholic Community Service Club, 918 Tenth Street Northwest, from 2 to 6 p. m. The dinner is being given by St. Stephen's Parish and since it is being run on a "first-come-first-served" basis the service men are urged to be at the club as early as possible.

Other events scheduled for tomorrow follow:

9:30 a. m.—Service Men's breakfast, Y. M. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest.

10 a. m.—Sightseeing trip of Washington, Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, 1015 L Street Northwest.

2 p. m.—Professional show Washington Hebrew Congregation, Eighth and I Streets Northwest.

3-6 p. m.—Open house and refreshments, Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, 1015 L Street Northwest.

3 p. m.—Dancing, hostesses and refreshments, Jewish Welfare Board, Eighth and I Streets Northwest.

3-7 p. m.—Open house, Service Men's Club No. 1, 306 Ninth Street Northwest.

4-6:30 p. m.—Movies, buffet suppet, Y. M. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest.

4-10 p. m.—Buffet supper, games, Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

Federal Worker Suicide by Gas

A 27-year-old Government employe last night committed suicide by inhaling gas fumes in the kitchen of his home, 1634 C Street Northeast. He was pronounced dead by a Casualty Hospital physician.

The youth, William H. White, had printed a sign on the door of the kitchen saying: "Do not turn on light or strike matches. Beware of gas."

The jets of the stove were open. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Arlington Dormitory Trial Urged

Use of Experimental Farm Barracks Is Urged Before Mall By Planning Body

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Before building bomb-target, hot-spot dormitories in the Mall, the dormitory scheme should be given an experimental tryout by utilizing abandoned Army barracks on the old Arlington Experimental Farm, it was proposed yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, as its members, including Chairman Frederic A. Delano, assailed President Roosevelt's idea of Mall housing for war workers.

Led by J. C. Nichols, of Kansas City, commission member and $1-a-year man in the Government, the planners heartily favored immediate conversion of the vacant barracks into dormitories for single Federal employes. The location, just the other side of Arlington Memorial Bridge, is particularly convenient to the new Navy Building at Columbia Pike and Arlington Ridge Road and the huge War Building which will be ready for occupancy soon, they said.

According to Thomas S. Settle, commission secretary, the barracks can accommodate 1000 men or women. They were used by the Twelfth Infantry before its transfer to Fort Myer.

Offers List of 40 Sites

Nichols said he has compiled a list of 40 sites in and near the District, including the Arlington cantonment area, which are suitable for housing or offices, or both. Some of these, he asserted, are already in Government ownership.

Those which he named included the Federal tract at Suitland, Md., on part of which a new office building is rising: Soldiers Home, National Training School for Boys and Gallaudet College.

On the other hand, the Mall, whose open space reaches from the Capitol to Washington Monument, would be unsuitable for the following reasons, said Nichols, with concurrence of the commission:

1. No more than 10 acres would be usable, not enough to justify elimination of the monumental vista.

2. The inflammable dormitories, of temporary construction, would offer a serious hazard in event of bombing.

3. Treeless and exposed, the Mall is one of the hottest spots in the city during the summer.

Chairman Delano and Nichols are expected to present these arguments to John Blandford, head of the National Housing Agency, said Seattle.

Annexation Plan Approved

Before winding up their two-day monthly meeting the planners paved the way to temporary annexation of a strip of Anacostia Park to Washington Navy Yard.

By giving their assent to the Navy's taking over about 35 acres of the park downstream from Anacostia Bridge, the planning agency members put the issue up to Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes. As titular head of the Office of National Capital Parks, local field unit of the National Park Service, Ickes may or may not issue a revokable permit for conversion of the 35-acre tract into a training center for Navy Yard enlisted men.

Originally 70 acres had been asked for the center. This was opposed by the planning body on the grounds it might force abandonment of the District and United States Botanic Garden greenhouses upstream from the Naval Air Station.

Under the compromise plan, the annexed area would be cut 50 per cent in size and instead of being transferred outright from Interior to Navy it would be used on a permit basis for the duration.

Now Recreation Camp

If Ickes issues the permit, it means a new site will have to be found for the recreational camp for Negro soldiers which now occupies a considerable part of the acreage.

Rear Admiral George Pettengill, commander of Washington Navy Yard, appeared before the commission yesterday to justify the temporary annexation, which would relieve congestion in the yard proper.

Tackling less controversial problems yesterday, the commission approved plans for expansion of Fort Reno reservoir, new details relative to extension westward of Independence Avenue and plans for construction of a radio mast at Fort Hunt.

Rooming-House Keepers Warned Against Imposter

Keepers of rooming houses were warned last night by District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell to watch out for an imposter who has been trying to gain access to the upper stories of houses by posing as an inspector for the Rent Administration.

The man, who has been operating in the boarding house areas of the Third, Thirteenth and Tenth precincts, has been described as being about 32 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighing 190 pounds. He is blond, shabbily dressed and wears no hat.

Cogswell advised that anyone approached by a man purporting to be an inspector should ask for credentials, which authorized inspectors carry with them at all times.

Maryland Acreage Sold

Leonard Snider, La Plata, Md., broker, announces sale through his office of Drumcliffs, a 242-acre Maryland property with two miles frontage on the Patuxent River and St. Thomas Creek, to John E. Capps, of Washington, D. C., for Dr. Louis F. Beecher, of Dayton, Ohio.

Closed Shop On Building Here Assailed

Employers' Council Says U. S. Is Forced To Pay Premiums Up to $1 an Hour

Operation of the closed shop on Washington defense housing construction has resulted in the Government paying wage premiums ranging from 30 cents to $1 an hour, James C. Wilkes, attorney for the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, charged yesterday.

Wilkes made his charges in a supplementary brief filed with Ben Grodsky, Labor Department referee, who is studying wage data preparatory to making a determination of what is "prevailing" wages on Government defense housing projects.

Two stormy hearings were held on the question. Labor leaders testified at the hearings that union scale rates are actually "prevailing" in the District. Wilkes and a number of District builders asserted that considerably lower wage scales, either those paid certain low-scale unions or nonunion workmen, were "prevaling."

May Make Report Monday

Grodsky has been reviewing the data gathered at the hearings for several days and hopes to have a final report with recommendations prepared by Monday. A Department of Labor reviewer and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins must pass on Grodsky's findings.

Wilkes also accused the union officials of endeavoring to "capitalize" on an anticipated increase in prevailing wages made possible by increased Government construction. Union officials had contended at the hearing that it would be impossible to obtain a sufficient supply of labor to do the jobs on schedule at less than the union rates.

To this Wilkes countered that the law merely required the set "prevailing" wages to be minimum wages, and that contractors were at liberty to pay more, but not less than set.

Suggests Balancing Plan

Wilkes said that private builders should have the privilege of bringing in nonunion workmen from other areas to work on private projects. He indicated that these importations would counter-balance importations of highly paid skilled union workmen by union officials.

"The "prevailing" wage determination must be made under terms of the Davis-Bacon Act, which requires the Department of Labor to set wage rates for Government construction. Alley Dwelling Authority projects have been built at the full union scale under a previous determination.

Film Portrays Enemy Bombing Attack on U. S.

Motion pictures showing how enemy bombers might try to penetrate our coast defenses and attack key cities and factories were shown in an illustrated lecture last night to members of the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall.

Filmed in color by Canfield Cook, writer and lecturer on aviation, the bomber assault was staged by the United States Army Air Corps during training maneuvers from an East Coast field. The "attack," as it progressed, showed spotter posts charting the approach of the "invader" planes, and squadrons of fighters climbing into the sky to intercept them.

"I believe that United States planes," Cook said, "in combination with those of our allies, will immobilize our enemies' air forces, armies, and source of production. With the development of the third dimension in warfare, represented by conquest of the air, the earth has so shrunk in time-size that dangers wherever they may be are no longer remote. We've got to protect our own lands by carrying the air war to the enemy."

Cook has been a pilot since 1916, when he joined the British Royal Flying Corps."

Detective Foils Holdup, Thugs Flee Bullets

Four shots were fired at three footpads last night by a detective when they refused to obey a command to halt during an attempted holdup.

Detective Sergt. Rubin Nichols was cruising in a scout car with two auxiliary policemen when he saw the men accosting another at Fourth and I Streets Northwest. Nichols jumped from the car and the thugs ran. When they refused to stop, Nichols fired four shots at them. He believes he struck one of them.

The man accosted was Theodore R. Roy, Negro, of 727 Fourth Street Northwest.

Soldier Pleads Innocent in Taxi Driver's Slaying

Wearing his Army uniform that bears the insignia of the Air Force General Headquarters detachment, 20-year-old Johnny Rathbun yesterday pleaded innocent to the first degree murder charge against him when arraigned before Justice F. Dickinson Letts.

Rathbun is accused of having shot to death Conrad L. Steele, local taxi driver, after trying to hold him up with a pilfered service automatic pistol at Eleventh and East Capitol Streets on February 3.

Police have asserted that the young private admitted shooting Steele but maintained that he was drunk at the time.

Spring Dance Season Begins

"MARYLAND DAY" CELEBRANTS—The Maryland Society of Washington last night celebrated "Maryland Day" with a dance and reception at the Kennedy-Warren. Byron Bird arrived with Gladys Stevenson (left) on one arm and Virginia Bean on the other. A Congressional delegation from the Free State attended as guests of honor

CAROLINA SOCIETY FETE—Members of the North Carolina Society danced at the Shoreham last night as the spring dance season was ushered in. Mrs. Aubrey D. McFayden (left), society secretary, and Mrs. Herman Sigman chat with Private Lawrence Collins, from Fort Belvoir, Va., one of the service men who were guests. Ten per cent of the proceeds from the N. C. S. dance will be turned over to the Children's Hospital blood bank

Registration April 27 to List 80,000 in D. C.

More than 80,000 Washington men between the ages of 45 and 64, inclusive, will be enrolled in the fourth Selective Service registration set for April 27, District Selective Service officials estimated last night.

With the exception of the registration system used for transients, the same enrolling organization used in the three previous registrations will be used. Plans for the registration of transients will not be completed, officials stated, until a transient registration office can be set up to replace the old National Guard Armory which Selective Service headquarters will vacate before April 27.

Although the approximate 13 million men involved in the fourth enrollment will not be liable for compulsory military service under the Selective Service Act, Congress is expected to enact legislation giving the Government power to draft them for civilian defense duties, employment in the war industries, or home guard duties, officials said.

The questionnaires to be filled out by the registrants will give complete details on occupations, experience, aptitudes and dependents.

The April registration will be the first to affect top-ranking Government officials. Although he is technically exempt from registering, as commander in chief of the armed forces, President Roosevelt said yesterday that he would waive his exemption and register anyway.

Draft officials said that the lottery to determine the order in which the new registrants will be called probably will not be held until Congress determines the functions they will perform.

Meanwhile Director William E. Leahy, director of the District Selective Service, announced another group of registrants who will be inducted into the armed forces today at Camp Lee, Virginia. They are:

Local Board No. 10—Thomas Leeper Anglin, George Donnell Axford, Louis Albert Calder, William Joseph Collins, Clarence Glenwood Crist, Lyle Crawford Farmer, Ralph Byron Fones, John Elvin Hean, Lawrence Jay Holder, Albert Noble McCarney, James Henry Magee, John Thomas Nangle, Ralph Peter Nelson, Ronald William Oram, Marvin Cornelius Parsons, John Logan Rollins, Donald Wesley Rush, George Mason Smith, Anthony Paul Smith, Ben Stephens.

Local Board No. 13—John Richard Anderson, Harry Daniel Barham, Kenneth Everett Brown, Ralph Donald Cole, Carlton Harry Doner, Joseph Lee Hudson, Sam John Keperis, Christian Kopf, Stephen Peter McLean, Theodore Albert Remes, Mattheos Stavrou.

Transferred out of town for induction—Roy Davies Campbell, Arkansas.

Transferred for induction—Charles Wharton Warlick, jr., North Carolina.

Enlisted—John Dual Croft, Coast Guard, and John B. Prebilich.

Rep. Satterfield Would Convert OGR's Center

Representative Satterfield (Democrat), of Virginia, last night declared he would support any Congressional move to turn the Office of Government Reports information center over to an "essential" war program agency if the building's erection were not stopped.

He is the sponsor of a resolution to withhold $600,000 in Public Buildings Administration funds from the OGR that is now under consideration by the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

In the meantime, construction of the information center at Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest has continued night and day.

Representative Satterfield said:

"The important aspect of the matter is that the purpose for which the building is being constructed is not essential.

"Today more than ever before we must face this question squarely: What can we do without? To my mind and in the minds of many others the OGR information center is one thing the war program can do without.

"If it is completed, it should be given to some other agency more essential to the war program."

Representative Satterfield said he was "impressed" by how effectively three or four men handle the problem of supplying information from a small booth of about 200 square feet at Union Station.

He pointed out that the 60,000 square feet of space to be employed at the information center seems "out of proportion" for the task in hand.

A final decision by the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee on the Virginia Congressman's resolution is expected early next week.

D. C. Profits Tax Stirs Opposition

House Committee May Ask Repeal Of Levy on Firms From Out of Town

A House District Subcommittee last night appeared ready to recommend repeal of a provision of the District income tax requiring out-of-town manufacturers to pay a 5 per cent tax on net profits they earn in Washington.

Although Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, the subcommittee chairman, would not indicate what will be his recommendation on the matter following a hearing yesterday, Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, the other subcommittee member, flatly stated he favors repeal of the provision.

Furniture manufacturers told the subcommittee yesterday that local householders may face a rise in the cost of furnishings unless the provision is repealed.

Difficulty Filling Orders

Louis Rothschild, attorney for the National Retail Furniture Association, declared that furniture dealers are having difficulty in filling all their orders throughout the rest of the country.

"The practical effect of this provision of the law is that Washington merchants will have trouble in getting merchandise," he said. "There is no reason why manufacturers should sell to the District."

The present income tax has been in effect since 1939. Last month an amendment was adopted providing that all corporations must pay an annual $10 license fee was passed.

Revenue Is Large

Glenn Simmons declared that furniture manufacturers have been the only group to protest the law. Between one and two million dollars of the District's annual four-million-dollar income from corporate taxes have been coming from foreign sources since the law was enacted, he added.

J. V. Morgan, of the District Board of Tax Appeals, asserted that tax laws comparable to the local legislation in question exist in many of the States.

M. L. Nee, a local furniture dealer, told the subcommittee:

"I fear we local dealers won't be able to get furniture unless this provision is repealed. If there's a decrease in the supply of furniture here there will naturally be an increase in prices."

Representatives Mulroney, of Oklahoma; Doughton, of North Carolina; Satterfield, of Virginia, and Burch, of Virginia, all Democrats, appeared and urged repeal of the tax provision.

Navy Relief Drive Leader Is Optimistic

"Most favorable response" to appeals for funds to aid widows and families of Navy men was reported yesterday by George A. Garrett, chairman of the Washington Citizens Committee directing the local drive for $75,000.

Although no compilation has been made of collections since the campaign started last Monday, Garrett said solicitation unit chairmen at a luncheon meeting yesterday expressed optimism over prospects of attaining the goal.

First official reports on the campaign are expected to be totaled early next week, and Garrett expressed hope the Washington quota could be reached by the end of April.

Throughout the Nation, citizens committees are working to raise a total of five million dollars for families of Navy men.

'Dangerously They Live' Lags That Way at Earle

Well-Acted Espionage Film Dallies With Psychiatry in Slow Beginning; Hawaiian Revue and Short-Reels Click

"DANGEROUSLY THEY LIVE." Warner Brothers picturization of an original screen play by Marion Parsonnet, costarring John Garfield, Raymond Massey and Nancy Coleman, with Moroni Olsen, Lee Patrick, Christian Rub, Roland Drew, Frank Reicher, Esther Dale, Arthur Aylesworth, John Harmon and others. Directed by Robert Florey. At the Earle Theater.

WARTIME ESPIONAGE moves onto a slightly higher intellectual plane than usual on the screen at the Earle Theater this week.

While the formula for circumventing the deep-laid plots of the enemy agents, operating in New York, continues to place its chief reliance in the moral and physical courage of the operatives working on our side, their valiance, this time, is demonstrated in a war of wits between a young girl serving the British Intelligence Office and the youthful hospital interne who champions her, and a man of seemingly great wealth and a noted psychiatrist, master minds of the alien conspirators scheming the destruction of a giant convoy about to steam off for England. The girl, commissioned to carry vital warnings to Halifax, becomes the victim of amnesia through a motor car crash on her way to Grand Central and is rushed to the hospital. There she is immediately visited by a solicitous "father," who calls in a celebrated neurologist to take charge of the case. To make it a bit more complicated, this Dr. Ingersoll happens to be the renowned specialist under whom Dr. Michael Lewis received his most valuable tutelage. Thus the action at once is pitched into the rarefied atmosphere of psychosis and opulent Westchester estates, instead of the waterfronts and the grog shops.

There is a generous dash of viciousness and brutality within the walls of the fabulous estate to which Jane Graystone is aducted as the ostensible daughter of the rich Mr. Goodwin, but the overtones of the drama are largely those of medical science in a game of battledore and shuttlecock. This is the only variation Scenarist Marion Parsonnet has worked on a familiar theme—and it is not quite enough.

In point of fact, the lengthy process of setting the psychological stage, despite the occasional interjection of exciting incident, has tediously delayed the major business of the plot. It is a tremendously long time getting around to the point, which is that the girl is not going to tell what she knows—amnesia victim or not, mostly not—but, instead, with Dr. Lewis' help, is going to write her name down on the list of the war's heroines. Once that engrossing revelation gets going, along late in the film, the picture perks up a bit. Just how she brings this triumph of fortitude to bear on the international situation had best not be divulged, if future audiences are to derive any appreciable wallop from the picture's belated climax. It is to be doubted, even so, that the Navy Department will find a complete solution of its difficulties in the disclosures made available to it by this latest adventure in naval strategy.

Cast More Than Ordinarily Competent

The chief claim of "Dangerously They Live" to respectful attention rests in the excellence of the better-than-usual cast that has been engaged to interpret it. John Garfield, when he does not go coy on us, may not be quite so utter a fulfillment of the popular conception of a young scientist as he is of a resourceful battler it would be better to have on your side, but he does afford Nancy Coleman reasonable justification for falling in love. Miss Coleman, newly recruited to the cinema from the stage, portrays the character of the intrepid British agent with fine intelligence and vigor, managing at the same time to appear as harrowingly helpless in the grip of superior forces as the circumstances seem to demand. The best performance of all is contributed by Raymond Massey, as Dr. Ingersoll, although he is closely seconded by Moroni Olsen, the grim dissembler, who can be a very tough spy when he is not being that gentle and solicitous "father." Mr. Massey gives a quick impression of scholarly attainment and mouths the polysyllabic jargon of mental science as if it might really be the language of his profession. Furthermore, he looks and acts the part to the life. Among the most helpful of the prominent supporting players are Lee Patrick, Esther Dale, John Ridegely, Christian Rub and Frank Reicher. They move about among ample and picturesque settings under the laggardly direction of Robert Florey.

It is an equally familiar, but gayer, diversion that occupies the stage at the Earle this week. Ray Kinney and His Hawaiian Orchestra return to the Thirteenth Street rostrum to repeat the unfailing success always scored on previous visits. Mr. Kinney still sings his native ballads and war songs better than anyone else, and his instrumentalists continue to lend plaintive charm to the music of the Islands. Then, of course, there are "Dione" and Meyme Holt, in their undulating rhythms and "Helo Hattie" for a comparably rhythmic bit of comedy. Seeming not too much out of place in the act, the Carr Brothers offer some tip-top acrobatics as two drolly comic sailors. The "Aloha Maids" are worth the risk of at least one eye, too.

The short screen subjects are genuinely noteworthy, consisting, as they do, of Johnny Downs in "Groom and Bored," a two-reel comedy; a particularly funny Merrie Melodie cartoon, "Crazy Cruise;" a Popular Science release, in Technicolor, and the newsreel, making depressingly clear the extent of the Japanese conquests in the Pacific.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

The Lost Is Found

Hollywood, March 20 (INS). The story back of Deanna Durbin's kiss-and-make-up movie with Universal sounds like fiction, it is so romantic and unusual. Just about the time Deanna started having her troubles with "U," Derek Bolton, an R. A. F. flier, sent in a scenario titled "Three Smart Girls Join Up." Although Bolton is an Englishman, his heroine is an American girl. It was, of course, unthinkable that any actress but the little Durbin could play in a "three smart girls" opus. But with baby on a strike, there was nothing for the studio to do but let the idea chill.

But Bruce Manning had a hunch all along that the feud wouldn't be permanent, so he filed the story away. When the happy day came and Deanna agreed to return to work everything was perfect—except they couldn't find the young author. He had been transferred and it took practically the whole R. A. F. to find him. After two months, he was located (exact spot censored) and his story was bought. Now Paul Jarrico and Richard Collins have been put to work on it. Manning, who will produce, says it has a defense plant setting—and that's all he'll say.

So much has been said about Paul Muni coming back to Hollywood I am very glad to be able to give the authentic story. Paul has signed for two pictures with Lester Cowan—Columbia release, of course. The first release is "Commandos Come at Dawn," and actual shots will be taken along the Norwegian coast.

The story, by Capt. C. S. Forester, of "Captain Horatio Hornblower" fame, will appear as a magazine serial. Muni, who has already signed for "Yesterday's Magic" for the Theater Guild, has worked out an arrangement whereby he will merely do a try-out of the stage play and then check it until after he finishes his movie assignment.

Constance Moore has asked for her release from Paramount and it was given. That gives her a chance she has been waiting for—to go to New York for a musical comedy. She is so attractive and has such a good singing voice she will probably be a hit on Broadway. She has been given the lead in "Warrior's Husband," a Dwight Deere Wiman production. Rodgers and Hart are writing the music.

Hey, You're Hurting Her Wrist!

RAYMOND MASSEY AND NANCY COLEMAN costarred with John Garfield in the Warner Brothers production of "Dangerously They Live," another adventure in espionage, now on the screen at the Earle Theater. Lee Patrick, Moroni Olsen, Esther Dale and Frank Reicher are among numerous others of note who appear in supporting roles of importance

HEDDA HOPPER

An Honored Guest

Hollywood, Calif., March 20.—I had the privilege of escorting the widow of Capt. Colin Kelly on her first visit to a motion picture studio, and on her twenty-fifth birthday, too. Strangely enough, the first scene we watched showed Joan Crawford and Nydia Westman talking about the perfect marriage. Nydia, describing hers, said she'd wake up in the middle of the night to listen to her husband's breathing, and would send up a little prayer, "Oh God, if one of us has to be taken, please let it be me."

JOAN CRAWFORD

Joan's certainly doing more than her bit—donating her whole salary for this picture; and I happen to know that two other people who are vitally concerned in it refused to do the same thing. She's giving the money for her next two broadcasts, and has pledged a third. And she hasn't had a salary for three months.

We called on Ronnie Colman and Jean Arthur on "Three's a Crowd," and Ronnie's hand kept automatically going toward that beard, which gets very itchy around 5 p. m. I asked Jean Arthur for her diet. "Diet?" said she, "I eat everything." And at that moment she was handed a banana split. Her hat, sitting on the back of her head, was screwier than mine.

Comedian George Watts, who was brought out from New York for "Tillie the Toiler" and has a face like Joe Miller's Joke Book, got a laugh every time he opened his mouth.

I asked Director George Stevens what he was going to do about "The American Way," which was pretty much of a pageant on the stage. "Now, Hedda, you know me. Let me finish this before I start thinking about that."

Last year we sent three plane loads of stars to Mexico City on a goodwill tour. On March 22, we're sending 40 more stars to Ensenada, Mex., to entertain Mexican soldiers, but this time they'll go by train to San Diego, from there by bus.

If it's true that Errol Flynn is becoming an American citizen so he can duplicate those heroic deeds he's done on the screen in our Army, Navy, or Marines, then I'll go see each and every one of his pictures.

You women have a champion in Red Skelton. He says, "This is the time every woman should wear screwy hats." And to prove his point, he buys all his wife's and she wears 'em.

Donna Reed, who came from a farm, has a bet on with Lionel Barrymore that she can milk a cow—and he's offered one of his cows.

Ben Hecht says it's heaven to work in a studio without fear of having a knife stuck in your back or having to play politics two-thirds of your time. He's so happy at Twentieth Century-Fox. Ben had a word, too, about David Selznick: "He's a wonderful guy. Trouble is, he's got to run everything. Once when I had to see him, he couldn't be found. Where do you think he was? In the kitchen, making up the menus for the day!"

No actress could get a greater build-up than on the Bob Hope show. Look what it's done for Madeleine Carroll! And since being on that, Betty Hutton has become a national figure. Why, when Paramount previewed "The Fleet's In," the audience cheered Betty. So I'm wondering if the company hasn't made a mistake in taking her off the Hope show. Incidentally, "The Fleet's In" was Vic Schertzinger's last picture. His widow can be mighty proud of it.

Broadway Glossary

New York, March 20.

SUCCESS: John Steinbeck was in New Orleans visiting Roark Bradford, the author of "John Henry" and "Green Pastures." They talked of the theater and the movies, of plays and Mickey Rooney. "Now there's an actor with real talent, that Rooney," said Steinbeck . . . "Yes, and I'll let you in on a secret," said Bradford. "I'm responsible for Mickey Rooney's success" . . . "Really?" asked Steinbeck! "How?" . . . "Well, about 15 years ago I saw Mickey Rooney and his father doing a vaudeville act," Bradford explained,—"and I didn't shoot him."

MICKEY ROONEY

MISTAKE: When Kurt Ludwig, the Nazi spy, was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment last week, the Moscow papers made an error in reporting it. They associated the name "Ludwig" with Emil, and announced that the renowned historian, Emil Ludwig, had been convicted as a Nazi spy. A broadcast of this story was heard in Switzerland. Ludwig's friends heard it there, and cabled inquiries . . . Emil Ludwig, who lives in California, where he is continuing to write the anti-Nazi articles which resulted in his banishment from Germany, asked Ambassador Litvinov to intervene . . . 24 hours later the correction was broadcast.

REVENGE: AT Wednesday's court session concerning the burlesque ban, some crime statistics were introduced in behalf of the license commissioner. These statistics, compiled by Police Commissioner Valentine, showed the number of arrests made in the Forty-Second Street area—in which the burlesque houses are located . . . Counsel for the burlesque operators does not believe that the arrests made in the vicinity have any relation to the shows. As a counter measure he now is compiling his own statistics—the number of arrests made in the vicinity of Mayor LaGuardia's home.

ENTERPRISE: On the train from New York to Hollywood, Francis Faragoh, the screen-writer, gave some of his mother's Hungarian cookies to Bill Goetz and Walter Morosco, the Twentieth Century-Fox officials. He then argued with them about whether the earth outside was covered with snow or alkali . . . The next morning Faragoh decided it would be expedient to admit that his potential employers were right. "It wasn't alkali," he admitted to them, "but snow" . . . The following week Faragoh was hired by Twentieth Century-Fox. He wrote to Goetz, thanking him, and added: "It feels good to realize I mustn't tell a producer that snow is alkali" . . . "That didn't get you the job," Goetz wrote in reply. "It was your mother's cookies."

YOUTH: Shortly after the birth of Peter Steffens, his father, the late Lincoln Steffens, told Clarence Darrow: "If my boy gets into jail, see that it's the best one. No matter where it is, I'd like him to have the best" . . . Peter Steffens hasn't gone to jail. Instead, he's a student at swanky Exeter . . . And this week he was tapped for the most exclusive fraternity there.

CHATTER: "Red Storm," the movie about Russian guerilla fighters, has just been sent here by the Soviet Union . . . 31 unions, combined, are waiting for the Ringling Bros. circus to come to town—and will descend upon it . . . Jerry Rosen, the B'way tailor, isn't retiring. His night club activities will be merely a sideline . . . Danny Kaye, who went to Macy's to sell defense stamps, decided that his booth wasn't attracting sufficient buyers. He drew enough customers to sell $500 worth of stamps by shouting: "Stop that thief!"—and when the crowds rushed to him, Kaye added: "Stop that thief Hitler—buy these stamps."

MISSION: Dyke Raese, coach of West Virginia's basketball team, came to New York this week for two reasons. His team was entered in the National Basketball Tournament. Monday night and his men defeated the favorite, L. I. U. . . . The second reason for his trip involved Jean Sutherland, the lady to whom Tommy Manville had announced his engagement. Jean and Raese are from the same town, and Jean's mother had entrusted the coach with the job of bringing her home. He'll do that next week . . . And then Dyke Raese will quit his job, and be commissioned as a naval lieutenant.

MEASURES: Anton Mussert, Holland's Quisling, announced that he would speak in Amsterdam's Concert gebouw, and that his speech would be broadcast for 15 minutes, throughout the Netherlands. Five thousand loyal Netherlanders managed to secure tickets of admission. They were silent during the preliminary speeches. But when Mussert began the broadcast, they leaped to their feet and screamed: "Heil, Mussert! Heil, Mussert!"—for the entire 15 minutes which otherwise would have been devoted to a propaganda speech, which thus was interrupted in a manner to which guards could not object.

Metropolitan

Morrie Ryskind's bright joke on dirty politics in Louisiana and Irving Berlin's equally bright music—though not enough of it—obviously have more twin souls in Washington than they could have anywhere else. So yesterday the film version of "Louisiana Purchase" slipped onto the Metropolitan screen direct from two weeks at the Earle.

So prettily frank are the opening sequences of this political satire that many a Washingtonian probably looks under his bed after seeing it. Bob Hope has the lead, a role this is different in concept from the one William Gaxton played so winnngly on the stage. Now he's the innocent victim of his political associates rather than their blithe ringleader. But it's a Hope role and he's a funny fellow.

Nearly stealing the picture is Victor Moore as Senator Oliver P. Loganberry, the part he created on the stage, that quaint innocent who is far brighter than he seems. Vera Zorina and Irene Bordoni also have their original parts. Only a couple of Mr. Berlin's tuneful songs are sung, but the background music includes snatches from most of the original numbers. Top of the score comes at the beginning of the film when we have the chorus arguing with legal phrases that if there is such a state as their mythical Louisiana, they've certainly never heard of it. It's delightful wit and a novel fashion of getting a film under way.

Filmed in Technicolor, the Delta City is splendidly vivid at Mardi Gras time, lavish setting for a comedy that's one of the season's better efforts.

RKO-Keith's

Evidently the Disney public is a patient one. Over half a year elapsed between local engagements, but "Fantasia's" first week at Keith's drew houses that surprised even that theater where three-week runs are getting to be the rule. Naturally, "Fantasia" remains a second week.

With a few exceptions, this is virtually the "Fantasia" which caused so much controversy at its opening, which caused Dorothy Thompson to see hints of fascism in it—a remark that has gotten cloudier with time. The Bach Toccata and Fugue, which Disney's artists illustrated with an interesting succession of cubes, squares and circles in varying shades of color, is the only portion of the original that is missing. However, there is considerably less of the silver-tressed Stokowski, less comment from Deems Taylor and no intermission.

Everyone has his favorites in the line-up, which runs from Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony to Stravinski's "Rites of Spring." Mickey Mouse becomes "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," there's humor at the expense of the ballet in Ponchielli's "Dance of the Hours" and fantastic going on in "Night on Bald Mountain."

Also continuing at Keith's are the "March of Time's," Far East Command" and an "Information Please," with Louis Bromfield.

Shaughnessy to Become Maryland Coach

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Miami Beach, Fla., March 20.—Wanna know how to play third base?

Well, then, cup an ear to the old master of the sizzling sack, Ossie Bluege, who can still take a fancy turn at third basing after 21 years in the big leagues. Mr. Bluege now takes over this pillar of type, stating:

POVICH

For three years the Cleveland club has been getting the best third base job in the American League. Ken Keltner's skill may not be generally appreciated, but every man who ever played third knows that Keltner is a swell performer. The test is in the plays he makes and nobody else in the league is close to him.

Keltner makes whatever kind of a throw is needed to get his man. When it's an easy play, he takes his time. If he has to hurry the throw, it doesn't bother him because he has a strong, true arm. He throws from on balance, off balance, underhand or with a wrist-flip on bunts. The third baseman who can't do all of these things can't be called a good third baseman.

One of the reasons Keltner is a fine third baseman is because he probably plays a closer third base than any other man in the league. Only a good third baseman can play close. I've always reasoned it this way: The vulnerable territory for a hit past a third baseman is cone-shpe, starting from home plate and widening toward left field. By playing close in, a third baseman cuts down the size of that vulnerable territory. Farther back, he has more ground to cover.

The shoemaker third baseman can't play close in, because he's got to have a faster break on the ball. But the fellow who can break well, and has a good pair of hands, can cut off hits in close. He makes it easier for himself, too, because the throw is shorter. And if he only knocks the ball down, he's still got a chance for a play that the man playing back doesn't have, on account of the distance.

Some Powerful Throwers Not Good

There are third basemen in the league with powerful throwing arms that the fans go for, but I don't like 'em. You'll notice that one of 'em has to take a full wind-up before he throws, and if that's being a good third baseman I'll eat him. There's another fellow with one of those powerful arms who pleases the crowd with his powerful throwing, but you'll notice that he has to stop and get a certain kind of grip on the ball before he cuts loose. That takes time, and there are too many plays when that loss of time hurts.

I never tried to throw a runner out by 10 feet. He's just as much out if you get him by a half a step. A third baseman has got just so many of those hard throws in his arm and he's a dunce to waste 'em. The easy deliberate throw is a help to the first baseman, too. There's no sense giving a first baseman a tough chance. When he was playing shortstop for us years ago, Roger Peckinpaugh never threw a runner out by more than a step or two.

There are third basemen who try to be too fancy, or maybe it's just plain over-ambition. Any way, they go diving after ground balls for no reason at all. To dive for a line drive is okay, of course, because you might spear it, but even if you stop a ground ball with a dive you can't get anybody out. And you may deflect it for extra bases. Don't trifle with the balls you can't make a play on. You're liable to mess it up all around.

I always saved myself a lot of trouble by giving a thought to the hitter on every play. If he was a fast man, I knew I had to waste no time in a play on him. If he was a slow man, there was no sense taking a chance hurrying the play. The fast men always give you the most trouble when you're playing third.

Third Baseman Should Anticipate Plays

Being on your toes out there doesn't mean only getting a quick break on a batted ball. It means, also, knowing what the pitcher is going to throw. The third baseman who doesn't watch the catcher's signal is trusting too much to luck. If I know it's going to be a curve ball to a right-handed hitter who pulls I can anticipate a play in my direction. If it's a fast ball, I shade him more toward shortstop. The third baseman who doesn't know what's being pitched is going to be caught out of position too many times.

When I was pointing out the advantages of playing in close, I should have mentioned that it was a means of cutting off cheap hits. One of the tough plays a third baseman has to make is that slow roller by a big fellow who takes a full swing and trickles the ball onto the diamond, the swinging bunt. The fellow playing far back hasn't got a chance to throw that batter out, but in close you can cut off that kind of a hit.

The bunt is, after all, the hardest play a third baseman has to make. They'll find you out pretty quickly if you can't handle a bunt. If you can't get a ball over to first base with that one-handed, underhanded flip, you're not much of a third baseman and there are some in our league who can't. There's no time to get the grip on the ball that you want. If you're that kind of a third baseman they'll make a bum out of you.

There have been cases of fellows who were slowing up and moved from second base or shortstop to third base to prolong their big league careers, on the theory that third was an easier job. Rogers Hornsby once said a third baseman ought to pay his way into the park. That's rot. If it's such an easy job, why is Keltner the only good third baseman in the league?

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, March 20.—The second and third highest scoring basketball players in the country, Stutz Modzelewski, of Rhode Island State and Bob Gerber, of Toledo, battled it out on Ned Irish's yellow pine court Thursday night while the country's No. 1 man, Price Brookfield, of West Texas State, sat on the sidelines, eliminated, and coldly considered the two steaming challengers for his title.

CONSIDINE

It was all very fitting. This 1942 national invitation tournament is tops in every department . . . crowds, class and records broken. It is strictly all-star stuff, basketball at its peak, and it will have them standing in the Garden until the thing ends next Wednesday night.

Brookfield, a big, tough, boot-wearing Texan who is in the Naval Reserve, scored 520 points this season, before he ran out of games Tuesday night when Creighton surprisingly eliminated the towering Texans from the tournament. He rammed home 44 points in one game, against Texas Mines. His mark of 520 topped record 509, set by Modzelewski last season—which in turn sent Stutz past Luisetti's four-year scoring mark of 1715 points.

Gerber Believed Better Player

"Can't really tell which is the best of those two fellows playing out there," Brookfield allowed laconically, nodding at the court on which Gerber and Modzelewski were playing. "But of tonight's game, I'd say Gerber. He's better under the basket. Handles that ball better, too. Modzool . . . Medlooz . . . Mudwew, you know, sure has a nice touch on those one-handers, but Gerber's something extra."

He certainly was. The gaunt, 6-foot-4 player, who affects a black mustache and plays in special shatterproof glasses, broke the all-time Garden record for scoring with 37 points . . . Which is more than the average team scored only a few years ago. He flung in 17 field goals and three fouls. His brilliance and cool generalship prodded his Toledo team, which has two of the fastest colored players in the game, to a record Garden score of 82 points. Toledo beat Modzelewski's "two points a minute" Rhode Island team, 82-71.

Gerber is almost certain to set a scoring mark that may endure for years. His 37 points boosted his season's mark to 504—16 points behind Brookfield. He has two more games to play. Even if Toledo is eliminated when it plays West Virginia on Monday night, it will still play again next Wednesday night, when—as a side feature to the tourney finals—the defeated semifinalists will play for a consolation prize. He can't miss . . . in more ways than one.

Learned Shooting With Tennis Ball

This kid Modzelewski is interesting. He's a Pole, fair, with big cowish eyes and slightly bowed legs than can carry him like sixty. There is something indescribably delicate about the way he handles and shoots a basketball.

Dodzelewski's first lesson in goal-shooting was with a tennis ball. His basket was a tin can, nailed on a post on the family's back porch in Worcester. It apparently gave him something of an eye, and a nicety of touch that was to come in handy in latter years.

He scored only 16 points in his toe-to-toe battle with Gerber, and got run out of the game with fouls by the semi-apopletic Pat Kennedy, the referee whose blood vessels also are setting new records for pressure during the tournament. His 16 points amount to 470 for the completed season—but no one can touch him for the four-year college span.

Navy Riflemen Face Two U. Md. Teams

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., March 20.—Midshipman sports fans face one of their leanest weekends tomorrow when only two rifle matches and a practice lacrosse game dot the home athletic program.

While the fencing team competes in an eastern intercollegiate meet at New York, the Middies' varsity and plebe riflemen oppose University of Maryland teams.

Navy varsity crackshots have won five of eight matches this year while the plebes haven't lost in three starts.

The Middie stickmen, coached by Dinty Moore, play the Baltimore Athletic Club in an informal game at 2:30 p. m.

'Miracle Man' Will Resign Stanford Job

Announcement Is Due Here Today; Offer From Maryland Said To Be Around $9000

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, March 20.—The Examiner said that "barring a last minute unexpected switch in plans," Clark Shaughnessy would resign as Stanford University's football coach tomorrow to become athletic director and football coach at the University of Maryland.

Jim Lawson, present assistant football coach at Stanford, will succeed Shaughnessy, the newspaper added.

"This is not official," wrote Curley Grieve, Examiner sports writer, "but it probably will be shortly after 10 a. m. Saturday when the Stanford board of athletic control holds an emergency meeting."

President Ray Lyman Wilbur, of Stanford said Lawson would be appointed to the job if Shaughnessy left.

Although offering no contract, the newspaper said, Maryland has promised Shaughnessy security as a member of the regular faculty.

This made the strongest appeal to the Stanford coach, who has been dubious about the future of football on the West Coast during the war, the paper said.

Maryland's salary offer was understood to equal Shaughnessy's present pay—$9000 a year.

Dr. Byrd to Make Statement Today

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of Maryland U., declined late last night to make any comment, but told The Post reporter to call him at 3 p. m. today for an "important statement."

Dr. Byrd said he didn't know when the board of regents would meet to consider the Shaughnessy case. But he didn't say the board hadn't already met and given its rubber stamp to the selection.

Asked if the board could block any move to get Shaughnessy, Dr. Byrd reminded The Post that under the rules of the Southern Conference, of which Maryland is a member, the school president appointed all coaches.

10-Year Contract Reported Offered

Santa Paula, Calif., March 20 (U.P.)—Clark Shaughnessy, head football coach at Stanford University, will resign his position there tomorrow to accept a similar post at the University of Maryland, his son, Clark Shaughnessy, jr., confirmed tonight.

Young Shaughnessy said his father will accept the offer of Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, to be director of athletics and physical education and head football coach.

The veteran gridiron mentor will receive an estimated salary of $10,000 a year for what is expected to be a ten-year contract, the son said.

'Bums' Smash Yankees, 12-4, With 19 Hits

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 20 (AP).—Succeeding where they failed in the 1941 World Series, the Brooklyn Dodgers crushed the New York Yankees, 12-4, today in the first meeting of the major league champions since the October classic.

The Dodgers teed off on Johnny Lindell, Rugger Ardizoia and Johnny Murphy for 19 hits, including a home run and three doubles, for a total of 25 bases.

Johnny Allen and Newt Kimball limited the world champions to eight blows, but the Dodgers had to come from behind after Phil Rizzuto's single and Joe DiMaggio's triple in the first inning and a second-inning homer by Joe Gordon kept the Yanks in front for two frames.

Arky Vaughan led the Dodger attack with four hits, driving in four runs. Johnny Rizzo slashed a homer inside the park and two singles. Pee Wee Reese hit a double and two singles.

Buc Rally Wins, 10-8

Los Angeles, March 20 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates broke loose today with a six-run sixth-frame rally, featured by a pinch-hit homer by Vance DiMaggio with one on base, and beat Chicago's White Sox, 10 to 8.

Pete Coscarart and Maurice Van Robays also hit homers for the Bucs, while Taft Wright got one in the third for the Sox sending home two mates ahead of him. Wally Moses also got a four-bagger for Chicago. About 500 fans witnessed the game.

Dartmouth And Kentucky Cage Winners

By International News Service

New Orleans, March 20.—Dartmouth defeated Penn State, 44 to 39, tonight to enter the final round of the Eastern playoffs for the N. C. A. A. basketball championship.

In the other game Kentucky beat Illinois, 64-44.

Jim Olsen, Dartmouth's 6-foot 5-inch center, and George Munroe, lanky forward, were the individual stars for the winners. Olsen was particularly hot on his rebound shots, and his total of 19 points was made up of eight field goals and three gift throws. Munroe counted four field goals.

Dartmouth went all out for offense, shooting frequently and from all angles. The Big Green led from the start and was never headed, holding a 22-to-16 lead at half time.

J. Egli scintillated for Penn State, sinking five field goals and two free throws for a total of 12 points.

By virtue of its victory tonight, Dartmouth will meet Kentucky tomorrow night, with the outcome determining the Eastern team which will meet the winner of the Western playoffs at Kansas City next

Don George Quits Wrestling, Joins Navy

Buffalo, N. Y., March 20 (INS).—Ed Don George, former heavyweight wrestling champion, today signed his papers as a lieutenant, senior grade, in the Naval Reserve, after Lieut. Comdr. Norman J. Haverly approved his physical examination.

The wrestler will report Monday for training at Annapolis, Md. He closed his wrestling career Thursday night at Toronto, going 30 minutes to a draw against Earl McCready.

Robinson Wins in 7th As Referee Stops Fight

Rubio Gives Foe Toughest Fight; Cut Eye Brings End by T. K. O. Route

By the Associated Press

New York, March 20.—Ray Robinson ran his long winning streak as a professional campaigner to 29 straight by stopping Norman Rubio in seven rounds at Madison Square Garden tonight, but only after having the toughest battle he has ever encountered. Robinson weighed 143¼, Rubio 144.

The finish came in the minute rest period between the seventh and eighth rounds after Rubio had been floored and his right eye cut in the seventh. But Rubio wanted to continue and Referee Arthur Donovan ended it only because Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, stood up in his ringside seat and ordered the arbiter to halt the proceedings.

His decision was greeted by a storm of boos from the crowd which half-filled the Garden to see the skinny Harlem hammerer, No.1 challenger for the welterweight title, put his big guns on display.

The guns were plenty good enough to put the Albany bull on the floor twice during the evening, but could not keep him there. In fact, on the Associated Press score card, Robinson had only four and Rubio three.

A total of 11,274 of the faithful contributed to a gross gate of $22,000.28 to sit in on the tussle.

A Convincing Display

Despite this narrow margin on the score card, Robinson gave a convincing display of how he has run through 89 amateur opponents and 29 professional rivals to post the longest winning streak any fighter in the ring boasts today.

Rubio took the first round simply by boring in and banging away at the body, but the Harlem "Sugarboy" went to work in the second and third, dancing away from Norman's charges, spearing the shorter

Warmerdam Sets Chicago Vault Record

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 20.—Earl Mitchell, Indian sophomore, tonight won the 1000-yard run at the Chicago Relays with a powerful stretch "kick" that Max Lenover, Loyola College of Chicago runner, was unable to match.

Lenover had led throughout the race, except for one lap when durable Gene Venzke, veteran New York A. C., competitor, tried setting the pace. Mitchell's time was 2 minutes 13.6 seconds, almost five seconds above the world record.

Cornelius Waarmerdam, San Francisco ace who has been a one-man show in the pole vault at the Nation's top meets this season, set a new relays record as he cleared the bar at 15 feet 2 inches—the sixteenth time in his career that he has bettered 15 feet.

When the bar was raised to 15 feet 9 inches for a try at a new world record, Warmerdam failed in three attempts. On his last trial he barely touched the bar with his chest, and the crowd of 17,000 roared as the stick bobbled on the standard before falling.

D. C. Eagles Thumped by Rovers, 7 to 3

By Jack Munhall

The New York Rovers turned on the heat at the start last night and kept it on until they melted Goalie Craig McClelland down to their size and dealt the Washington Eagles a damaging 7-3 setback in their quest for honors in the United States Amateur Hockey Association playoffs at Riverside Stadium.

By the victory the Rovers tied the Eagles for first place in the playoffs, each with two victories for four points. The Rovers, however, have lost none, while the Eagles have dropped two in succession.

A crowd of 3191 fans, many of whom had applauded McClelland for consecutive shutouts in the Eagles' previous two series home appearances, saw the portly Washington net-minder collapse in the third period as the Rovers poured through five goals.

Washington, off to an uncertain start, managed to slow up the faster skating and more spirited Rovers only once. That was early in the third period when both teams began to rough it up a bit. The Eagles, seeming to thrive on these tactics, were forcing the pace until tempers cooled off and again New York's superior skill asserted itself.

Hollinger Stars

The guy who gave the Eagles the hockey equivalent of a Mickey Finn was shifty Howie Hollinger, a winger who wasn't considered good enough for the Eastern Amateur League's first all-star team. Hollinger, a second team choice, scored New York's first, fourth, fifth and sixth goals, the last three coming in succession in about five minutes of the third stanza.

Hollinger's most effective work was done just after Odie Hallowell on a spectacular diving shot had stirred the Washington fans by bringing the Eagles to 3-4 at 10:35 of the final period.

At 11:22 Hollinger slipped away for one goal, off passes from Red Tilson and Gordon Davidson, and at 11:58 he had another, this one on a quick break and a feint that brought McClelland to his knees even before the shot was released.

Rovers Grab 5-3 Lead

Those two quickies gave the Rovers a prohibitive 6-3 advantage, which was boosted to its final margin on Tilson's marker in the eighteenth minute.

Les Hickey, the eagle-beaked, eagle-eyed Eagles' winger who has been enjoying a prolific scoring streak, did nothing to disturb it last night. His two goals, together with Hallowell's, were about all Washington could boast in an offensive way.

Each time Hickey tallied he was tying the count. He matched Hollinger's opening goal for the Rovers early in the second period. Then after Bill Robinson reclaimed the lead for New York at 2-1, Hickey re-

Catcher Al Evans Deferred by Army; He Returns to Nats

Special Dispatch to The Post

Miami, Fla., March 20.—Catcher Al Evans has been deferred by his draft board, he informed the Washington Club from his Kinly (N. C.) home tonight. It was welcome news to Manager Bucky Harris, of the Nats, in as much as Evans, with Jake Early, comprised the Washington set.

Evans was advised by the board last week that he had been classified in 1-A. He left immediately from the Washington camp to ask the board to review his status. He claimed dependencies in as much as his wife and his parents lived on a farm which he rented. The catcher will rejoin the club immediately.

Sid Hudson Shines for Five Innings

Carrasquel Victim Of Eighth-Inning Assault; Johnson, Blanton Stop Nats

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Miami Beach, Fla., March 20.—You wouldn't have been very fond of the Nats today. All they acquired in nine innings today was a deeper shade of sun tan. They were shut out, 2 to 0, by, of all people, the Phils.

Two venerable Philadelphia pitchers, Si Johnson and Cy Blanton, who own up to a total of 55 years in this world, did the shutout job on the Nats. Johnson's curve ball and Blanton's right-handed screwball stymied the Washington athletes with eight hits.

At that, the Nats outhit the Phils, 8 to 7, but unfortunately Alex Carrasquel appeared on the scene in the late innings and in the eighth the Phils bumped him for four hits and the ball game's only two runs.

Hudson Shows Form

It was Sid Hudson, though, who emerged as the ptiching hero of the afternoon and there was comfort for Manager Bucky Harris in the five-inning stint of the tall boy. Hudson gave up a hit in the first inning, another in the second and that was all. He walked only one batter and pitched very nicely indeed.

The Phils, in fact, were being limited to two hits going into their game-winning eighth inning, but they caught up with Carrasquel's fast ball after he retired the first hitter in the eighth.

Lloyd Waner, who has bobbed up as an outfielder with the Phils, launched Carrasquel's grief with a single to center, and with two out Danny Litwhiler, the club's best hitter, acted just that way. Litwhiler banged the first pitch far into leftfield for a two-bagger and Waner scored from first.

Two Veterans Stop Nats

Nick Etten bashed a single to right, and the second run was home. Ronald Northey singled to center for the third hit in a row before Carrasquel got out of the inning on a quick third out—Warren's line drive to Galle. The big Venezuelan wasn't much pitcher today.

The Nats couldn't get up a gallop against the two old timers of the Phils. They got only two men past second base, and after relieving Johnson in the sixth, Blanton pitched three-hit ball.

Bob Repass made two of the Nats' hits but he was getting little help from his pals. Bruce Campbell, up three times with men on bases, never got the ball out of the infield and under the same circumstances Stan Galle also went hitless.

Only about 500 of Miami Beach's population troubled themselves about seeing the game.

Notes of the Nats

The Phils have now supplanted the Nats as Grapefruit League leaders with five wins in six games . . . The Nats have won 8 out of 11 . . . Jake Early, who has been taking punishment all spring, got another shaking up from Benjamin in a play at the plate in the third inning . . . Bob Repass made his second error of the spring today, but he had a half dozen tough chances . . . Manager Bucky Harris is pining for the day when Bobby Estalella returns to third base, because the Nats need his punch . . . Trainer Mike Martin, suffering from a lame arm, did not make the trip to Miami with the club . . . Second Vice President Herbert Guggenheim is representing the Washington club's front office on the trip . . . Tomorrow the Nats move over to Miami for the first of two games with the Giants . . . Early Wynn will get a five-inning pitching assignment.

Faculty Overrides Student Council, Football Is Kept

By the Associated Press

Tempe, Ariz., March 20.—Education is all right in its place, but—

The student council of the Arizona State Teachers College of Tempe recommended that football be dropped.

The faculty overrode the students and insisted that the sihool would play all scheduled games.

"It develops leadership and teamwork and is in line with the wartime physical fitness program," the faculty ruled.

In a meeting last night, the board of education announced the appointment of Hilman Walker, assistant coach, to succeed Millard (Dixie) Howell, who resigned Saturday because he said, prospects for a winning team were dim.

Speed to Spare Captures Tamiami Purse at Tropical Park

Don Meade Keeps Victor In Command

Scotch Trap Runs Second and Hy-Cop Is Third; Winner Returns $5.50 Price

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 20.—Speed to Spare, a 9-year-old gelded son of Balko owned by J. H. Miles, proved that he still can outrun most of the sprinters in training when he easily won the Tamiami Purse, 6-furlong top attraction here today. Don Meade, who is at his best astride front running horses, had the old fellow in command from end to end, the combination reporting two lengths in the van, timed in 1:10 4-5.

G. W. Peak's Scotch Trap, a come-from-behind type, ran over horses with a fine rally but fell short of menacing the winner while earning second money by a length and a half. Circle M Ranch's Hy-Cop was third.

Speed to Spare paid $5.50, giving favorite players their fourth success in six events decided. The attendance of 6429 was the smallest of the meeting to date.

Meade had Speed to Spare away on his toes, with Wise Niece staying within a length of the choice for the first half mile. Hy-Cop was close behind. As the field swung around the top of the stretch Speed to Spare widened his advantage and continued smoothly to the end, showing no inclination to falter in the final stages, as he sometimes does. Hy-Cop put Wise Niece away, only to fall prey to the belated bid of Scotch Trap.

Van Dusen Back at Churchill Downs

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., March 20.—Clyde Van Dusen, a mite of a man, who gained fame as a jockey and later when he saddled a red gelding bearing his name for a surprise Kentucky Derby victory in 1929, was back at Churchill Downs today.

A native of Kentucky, Van Dusen has been in California since 1938 when he went West to manage the racing stable of Movie Magnate Louis B. Mayer. Later he relinquished his association with Mayer, but elected to remain in California.

For the last two years he has raced a mixed string of thoroughbreds in his name and that of Walter T. Wells, president of the California Breeders Association.

The war's blackout of racing on the West Coast forced the Walls-Van Dusen string eastward and they reached Churchill Downs late yesterday. Little Clyde rode into town by automobile today.

They are Tremontier, Hollywood, Rounders, Valdine Alpha, Valdina Orphan, El Cabrill, Gallant Laddie, Jean Ferrante, Patriot, Tatu, Southern Hills, Winwithme, Stinging Bee and Syl's Jimmie.

Benton in the first five innings. Twelve men faced Hal White in the last four innings and only one batsman was able to get the ball out of the outfield.

The Tigers also were limited to four safeties, but one was York's homer in the sixth and another was a single by Bob Patrick in the first which drove in Barney McCosky after Ben Wade issued three walks with two out.

No Rest for Giants

Miami, Fla., March 20 (AP).—The New York Giants, who have lost nine of their eleven spring training games, had an open date on their exhibition schedule today but Manager Mel Ott didn't let them take it easy.

Ott, declaring there was nothing wrong with the Giants that a little hard work wouldn't cure, hustled his squad through more than two hours of batting practice and followed that with a lengthy fielding drill.

"Naturally I am disappointed," Ott said of his team's play to date. "We all like to win, but there's no use getting panicky about it, especially as our showing is not difficult to understand. It's mostly a case of the older players requiring more time getting in shape."

Ott said Bill Werber, who was benched yesterday by a knee injury, would be back at third base in tomorrow's game with Washington.

Browns' Auker Shines

Deland, Fla., March 20 (U.P.).—The St. Louis Browns' concern over Pitcher Elden Auker, hurt in a January automobile crash, was eased today when he worked five innings in an 8-to-1 victory over the Dodger "B" team. Auker allowed the one run and gave three hits. Bob Harris shut out the Dodgers in the last four, allowing four more hits. St. Louis meanwhile got to Freddy Fitzsimmons and Tom Drake for 11 safeties.

Braves Score Late

Clearwater, Fla., March 20 (U.P.).—Two big innings at the tail end of the game gave the Boston Braves an 11-3 triumph over the Cleveland Indians today. The Indians held a 3-0 lead going into the eighth, when Phil Masi hit a homer with one on to lead a five-run attack. The Braves counted six more in the ninth. Boston collected 16 hits off Joe Krakauskas, Joe Heving and Steve Gromek. Will Donovan, Ed-Wallace and Warren Spahn gave Cleveland six safeties. The Indians committed two errors against one for the Braves.

Cards 7-2 Victors

Sarasota, Fla., March 20 (U.P.).—The St. Louis Cardinals defeated Boston, 7-2, in an exhibition game today by coupling five hits with three Red Sox errors. Boston got six hits but the Cards contributed only one misplay.

Matt Surkont, George Munger, Ernie White and Ira Hutchinson hurled for St. Louis with Heber Newsome, Nelson Potter and Wilbur Butland working for the Red Sox.

A's Finally Win

Hollywood, Calif., March 20 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics ended a five-game losing streak today by shutting out the Chicago Cubs, 8 to 0, behind the five-hit pitching of Veteran Bill Beckman and Rookie Fred Caligiuri.

Paul Erickson stopped the A's for three innings, but in the fourth Ken Richardson, rookie first sacker, hit a homer with Bob Johnson on base for enough runs to win the game.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

Jockey Eddie Arcaro, whose "broken arm" finally was diagnosed as a badly pulled muscle, is coming along O. K. but it is doubtful if he will ride until early in April. Inactivity generally throws a jockey off stride. Prior to the spill that caused his injury, Arcaro was hot as the proverbial firecracker. He had accounted for Hialeah's two biggest prizes—the Flamingo and the Widener—and was riding in the best form of his career. Jockeys are that way—hot and cold. During the interval that Eddie must stay on the ground, he is bound to cool and must work himself back. He hopes to ride his third Kentucky Derby winner this spring but he will have to let that arm heal thoroughly. In a mile and a quarter race, a jockey's arms are second only to using his head and having a horse with a chance. Although the "no pass" rule has shaved Tropical Park attendance a bit, the paid admissions are ahead of last year. Jockey Bobby Wholey, considered a top 2-year-old rider, has been performing in good fashion for Bill Hicks. He was aboard Wise Bob when the son of Wise Counsellor accounted for two stakes and he has been showing to advantage in other races. Wholey reported late at Hialeah but has been making a hit in Florida. He came East from Agua Caliente where he was getting only Sunday work to show the winter vacationists in Miami that he is pretty much of a saddle artist. He has a good head on those little shoulders and should go far. Yesterday would have been a swell day to open Bowie. By the way, if you read this column at 8:45 this morning there will be exactly ten days, five hours and 15 minutes before post time for the first race at Bowie. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—COMMENDADOR II may take the day's opener at good odds. This one likes the track and is due for brackets. BAD COLD gets a good figure and belongs in the thick of contention. QUEEN ECHO to take care of the minor money.

Second race—MERSA MATRUH gets in a field that suits and I'm going to string along with this fair sprinter. BATTLE LARK is tossed in this with 103 pounds and is dangerous. WEST-HO to fill out the cash circle.

Third race—VICTORY DRIVE had poor racing luck last out and promises to take it all in this field providing he gets clear sailing. MY ZACA is a fair sort and belongs close. RUBBER CITY is a possible surprise.

Fourth race — BALMY SPRING carries 118 pounds, but I'm going to string along with this fit one. VOTUM has closing ability and is a threat. ARMY SONG might awake with a bang.

Fifth race—MISFLYING gets my call in this field. Needs only some help from the saddle. BOOT HIGH and MICHIGAN SWEET to take care of the place and show awards.

Sixth race—I'm going to string along with a horse I know is fit. I mean GET OFF. He is sharp as the proverbial tack and may lead MIOLAND and OUR BOOTS to the wire in the day's feature.

Seventh race—STIMULI likes this route and is ready for the best. COUSIN NAN gets in light and will be a factor. WOODVALE LASS will be hard to keep out of the money circle.

Eighth race — MEMORY BOOK, providing he is patched up for the occasion, should take it all in this field. OVERSIGHT and PILATES

Defending Champions Snead, Wehrle Advance in Am-Pro

Jim Hines And Minkley Are Beaten

Winners to Play Harper, Bates Today In Semifinals; Nary, Haas Win

By the Associated Press

St. Augustine, Fla., March 20.—Defending Champions Sammy Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., and Wilford Wehrle, of Racine, Wis., paced a select quartet of teams into the semifinals of the $3000 National Amateur-Professional best-ball golf tournament today in two rounds of match play.

Sammy was hitting the ball far and true and Wehrle was steady as a rock in the afternoon round as they triumphed, 4 and 3, over Jimmy Hines, of Great Neck, N. Y., and Arnold Minkley, veteran Chicago amateur. Minkley, usually almost on a par with the best of the pros, was off form today and cost his side 2 holes by missing short putts.

Play Harper, Bates

In tomorrow's 36-hole semifinals they play Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., and Amateur Sam Bates, of Virginia Beach, Va. Harper and Bates had to go 22 holes to turn back long-hitting Jimmy Thomson, of Chicopee, Mass., and Hal Van Sickle, of Savannah, Ga., 1 up, in the closest match of the day.

In the other semifinal the rollicking, talkative team of Bill Nary from Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., and Fred Hass, of New Orleans, La., will play Al Brosch, of Farmingdale, N. Y., and Amateur Harry Offutt, of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Brosch, who has been burning up the course so far in the tourney, and Offutt both turned in some spectacular shots to defeat Light Horse Harry Cooper, of Minneapolis, Minn., John Hackett of Chicago, 2 and 1. Brosch holed a 20-foot chip shot from the back of the green for a birdie three on No. 10 and sank a 100-yarder for another birdie on the par four fourteenth. Offutt almost holed out for an eagle on the par four twelfth and won with a birdie.

Finals Sunday

Nary and Haas won by 3 and 2 from the veteran Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, and Carl Dann, capable amateur from Orlando, Fla. Haas sank a 25-foot putt from the edge of the green for a birdie two on the ninth to put his side into the lead and they won the next two holes.

The finals, also 36 holes, will be played Sunday.

Robinson Wins; Referee Halts Bout

Norman came back somewhat in the fifth and sixth, but the Negro came out swinging in the seventh and floored Rubio in his own corner with a smashing hook for a nine count. Norman got to his feet and met a barrage. One left hook tore his eye open, a right sent him reeling across the ring. Still he fought back until the bell rang. Then Donovan and Phelan did what Robinson couldn't do.

First of Campaign

This was the first of six fights in Robinson's self-styled campaign to become the "world's greatest uncrowned champion."

From here he takes on Harvey Dubs in Detroit April 16, Sammy Secreet in Cleveland April 30, the winner of next Friday's Lew Jenkins-Mike Caplan tussle in Boston May 15, Marty Servo in the Garden May 28, and Young Kid McCoy in the Garden in June. He hopes sooner or later that this campaign will lead to Red Cochrane and a shot at the crown.

After the fight Ray Arcel, Rubio's trainer, said the gash in his charge's eye would require three stitches.

Archer Beats Shans

Freddy Archer, Newark clouter, spoiled the New York debut of Cleo Shans, a miniature Henry Armstrong, from Los Angeles, tonight by winning a slam-bang eight-round decision in the main preliminary.

Archer, scaling 138½ to Shans' 135, had too many long-range guns for the charging little Negro from the coast. Shans, outreached by several inches, scored with a crowding body attack, but couldn't reach his rival's chin often enough. The Jerseyite, meantime, did most of his damage by catching Cleo with long wallops as he barged in.

In a companion eight-rounder, Jimmy Hatcher, 129¾, of Lakeside, S. C., gave Billy Speary a solid going over to take a one-sided decision over the 131-pounder from Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Hatcher cut Speary's left eye in the second and slowed the Pennsylvanian down with rights to the body in every round.

Ray Rovelli, 148, West New York, N. J., outpointed Pete Geno, 148, New York, and Charles Parkham, 137¾, Detroit, did the same to Frankie Cardinal, 141, New York, in four-rounders.

Hyattsville Five Trips Greenbelt

In the feature event of "All-Greenbelt Night" last night the host high school quintet, after leading by 9 points with eight minutes to go, suffered a 28-26 defeat at the hands of Hyattsville High.

A field goal by Rody Kidwell in the waning seconds decided the game.

Record 169 Game Rolled By Ruth King

Ruth King strung eight straight spares together in the first eight boxes, missed a spare in the ninth and came back with a strike to bowl her way to an all-time league high of 169 for her Willis Esso quintet in the Brookland Ladies League. She also had high set of 366 to further spark her team to highs of 591-1581, the former total a season record. The Willis girls, however, dropped a pair to Jack and Jill School. Gemeny's Flowers won the odd tilt from DePerini to take over the league leadership.

Vivian Nolan, Mid-City Auto, and Ruth McClintic, Daly's Food Shops, were the leading bowlers in the Ladies Independent League at Arcadia after respective pinfalls of 132 and 345. The girls of Fletcher's Cafe had 544 for best team game, while a 1529 set won the set honors for Charles Grill.

The Clarendon Church League found Foster, Central Methodist No. 1, best for the single with 137 that led his quintet to high team game of 575, while Clarendon Methodist No. 1 posted best set of 1,601 when Rex Byrne came through with a 351 effort.

Huber MacWilliams, Miscellaneous, and R. Bennett, Optical No. 1, had respective highs of 155 and 388 to lead the Navy Yard boys at Fort Davis. The team honors were garnered by Tool No. 1 with 609-1688.

The Silver Spring Business Men's loop found that H. Franke, Friars Club, had 157 to lead his team to best set of 1,696, while the set honors went to Gordon Bonnett, Southern Maryland Seafood, with a 373 total. Maryland Personal Bankers rolled 599 for high team game and the lone sweep of the night was scored by Gottwals Builders over the Muth boys.

Army Leads In Collegiate Fencing Field

New York, March 20 (AP).—Rallying with 17 points in the Foils Division after a disappointing epee showing, Army's fencing team earned a two-weapon total of 28½ points in the Intercollegiate Fencing Association Tournament today, and took a two-point lead over New York University, the defending three-weapon champion.

Army's foils tally was matched by Columbia, which went into third place with 25½ points. Penn State, scoring only 10 foils points, was fourth with 24, and Navy, favored to win the three-weapon title, fifth with 23½.

Army's pace-setting trio consisted of Arthur Weigel, George Prior and Vincent Guadiani. Each dropped only one bout, Guadiani and Weigel winning six apiece, and Prior five.

Movie Five Loses Crown to Legions

Denver, March 20 (INS).—The national basketball crown tonight was knocked off the heads of the Hollywood Twentieth Century-Fox quintet, when the Denver Legions beat the Hollywoods, 38 to 31, in the semifinals of the 1942 National A. A. U. tournament.

The Legions, 1937 and 1939 national champions, were led to victory by Jack McCracken, the old war horse who has played in 13 national tournaments. He tallied 12 points.

Army Makes Ghezzi Private First-Class

Fort Monmouth, N. J., March 20 (INS).—Vic Ghezzi, the pro golf star, is going places in the Army, it was revealed tonight.

Ghezzi has just risen from buck private to private first class here at Fort Monmouth, and it was announced he will help with athletic activities.

His first job will be to assist Lieut. Norman Fertig, Fort Monmouth athletic director, taking the place of Staff Sergt. Augie Bossu, football line coach and former Notre Dame guard, who is attending the officers' candidate school.

Veteran Lombardi May Prove Surprise Package of Braves

'Lom,' Surrounded by Promising Rookie Talent, Seems Determined to Have Big Season

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sanford, Fla., March 20.—The Boston Braves have a camp full of rookies, some of whom Casey Stengel is counting upon to carry a big load in this year's National League campaign, but the newcomer who may give them the biggest lift is none other than old Ernest Natali Lombardi.

"Lom" lumbered around in a Cincinnati uniform for ten years, during which time he achieved the National League batting championship once, was voted the most valuable player, caught Johnny Vander Meer's double no-hit classics and helped punch the Reds to two pennants and a world championship.

He became almost as much of a Cincinnati landmark as the Ohio River and also apparently decided he was about as unlikely to leave. The big fellow, who stands 6 feet 2 and weighs 195 pounds ordinarily, let his weight go up and his speed (if any) go down last year and the result was a miserable season and a move to Boston.

"Lom" Comes Around

From the time that the trade was announced in February until the training season started reports kept creeping from the Pacific Coast that Lombardi was so disappointed at being turned loose by Cincinnati that he probably would give up baseball.

However, President Bob Quinn of the Braves says Lombardi was one of the easiest men he had to sign and the big fellow showed up here this month not only in the finest shape in many years, but also determined to convince everybody that he still is quite a catcher, even at the age of 34.

"Lom" is just about the hardest working player the Braves have and every time Stengel suggests he might want to sit out the next waltz, the big catcher grunts, "I want to work." His hitting has been tremendous and it seems the Braves not only have found a good-hitting backstop to mend their most serious weakness of last season, but also have obtained a long-distance cannon capable of pacing the whole Boston barrage.

Yale's Swim Team Takes Four Titles

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., March 20.—Yale's swimming squad, loaded with power to spare, tonight missed sweeping the Eastern Intercollegiate League's opening day's program by two-tenths of a second—the margin between victory and defeat in the 50-yard free style event.

Coach Bob Kiputh's brilliant aquatic stars captured the other four events—the 150-yard back stroke, 220-yard free style, 1-meter dive and 300-yard medley relay by impressive margins, as expected.

Ed Heuber, University of Pennsylvania star, won the 50-yard dash, the only "outsider" to crash the Blue monopoly. Heuber scored in a blanket finish in 23.4 seconds and just ahead of Ed Hall, of Massachusetts State, and Jack Lilley, of Yale. The Penn Valley (Pa.) youth, who earlier today annexed his heat in 23.3, equaling the meet record, succeeds Bob Garrett, of Army, as the champion.

Ohio Kegler Leading A.B.C. Tournament

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, March 20.—For the eighth straight day, leaders toppled in the American Bowling Congress tourney today.

Robert Tritschler, of Norwood, Ohio, banged his way into the top spot in the singles on a 731 and Frank Purse, of Detroit, hammered out 686 for fifth.

Arthur Hanson and Louis Yodan, of Waukegan, Ill., spilled 1227 for a fifth-place tie in the doubles.

High spot of tomorrow's schedule will be the appearance of Andy Varipapa, Brooklyn trick shot artist who can topple pins in two alleys on a single roll.

Varipapa, however, will stick to the straight stuff as he makes his singles try and pairs with Junie McMahon, of Lodi, N. J., in the doubles. The Brooklyn wizard has a 201 A. B. C. average and his partner 207.

Kansas City Cop Shatters World's Record With '.45'

By the Associated Press

Tampa, Fla., March 20.—Francis O'Connor, Kansas City, Mo., policeman, today shot the best score ever made in competition with a .45-caliber automatic to win the rapid fire event of the national pistol matches.

O'Connor had 298, one more than the previous world record set last year by Harry Reeves, Detroit, Mich., policeman. A score of 193 won the event here last year.

Ambassador Natators Pace Swim Meet

Ambassador Hotel swimmers captured the bulk of the qualifying honors in the preliminary heats of the District A. A. U. indoor swimming championships at the Shoreham Hotel pool last night. The downtown natators placed nine men and seven women in the titular heats, which will be contested tonight, while the Shoreham Swimming Club was a close second with a total of 13 finalists—11 girls and one male, who won two events.

Shoreham's lone male is Don Boyer, who turned in the fastest times to become eligible for the 50 and 100 yard freestyle crowns.

One new meet record was established when Jean Ort, competing unattached, toured the 50-yard freestyle in 29.9 to displace the old mark of 30.2, set several seasons back by Ann Bono.

Patsy Palmer, the District's outstanding mermaid, handily won a trio of heats to reach the finals in the 100-yard breast stroke, 100-yard backstroke, and the 220 freestyle. The 17-year-old Wilson High School senior currently holds the 220 crown, but is invading a new competitive field in the two former events.

Men's Events' Qualifying Finalists

Basketball Heads Propose 2 Major Rule Alterations

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, La., March 20.—Two major changes in college basketball rules were proposed today by the National Basketball Coaches Association.

To be considered here Sunday and Monday by the association's rules committee, the projected changes are:

1. That a player legally in the game at the start of an overtime period will be permitted five personal fouls before disqualification.

2. That time out will be called for held balls and official playing time resumed concurrently with the tip-off.

Louise Suggs Captures N.-S. Golf Title

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 20.—Louise Suggs, of Lithia Springs, Ga., won her first women's North and South golf championship today by defeating the defending champion, Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, jr., of Chapel Hill, 1 up, in the final round of the fortieth annual meet.

Mrs. Page, five times winner, was trying for her fourth consecutive title. She advanced to the final round yesterday by defeating Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, Ga., her four-time finals opponent in previous tournaments, 1 up at the nineteenth hole.

Miss Suggs got into the finale by winning from Jeanne Cline, of Bloomington, Ill., 6 and 5.

The young Georgian had Mrs. Page three down at the seventh, but the former national champ took the eighth, ninth and eleventh to square the match. She went one up at the thirteenth with a birdie three on a successful long putt.

Navy All-Stars Face Americans

Navy Department All-Stars will be confronted by their outstanding intercity ice hockey test of the season tonight when they entertain the Baltimore Americans at Riverside Stadium at 8:30 o'clock.

The Americans are comprised of star talent recruited from Baltimore and vicinity. The Navy Stars will be at full strength, however, and are confident of making their strongest showing of the season.

Louis Suffers A Bloody Nose In Fast Drill

By the Associated Press

Fort Dix, N. J., March 20.—George Fitch, New Haven (Conn.) heavyweight, bloodied Joe Louis' nose in a workout today, but the round was too near over for the heavyweight champion to get revenge.

He took out his spite, however, on Eddie Blunt and had the giant New Yorker on the verge of a knockout in the second frame. Blunt is built along the same lines as Abe Simon, Louis' foe in the Army relief bout at Madison Square Garden March 27.

Louis also spent some time perfecting a defense for a left jab. After the drill he weighed approximately 210 pounds.

Abe Simon Works Four Fast Rounds

Summit, N. J., March 20 (AP).—Abe Simon had his left jab working to perfection today and the head of Sparmate Johnny Shkor bobbed back and forth as though it were fastened with hinges through four blistering rounds.

Manager Jimmy Johnston said it was the best day's workout of the training campaign for Simon, who meets Heavyweight Joe Louis in the Army emergency relief bout at Madison Square Garden March 27.

Simon weighed an even 247 pounds after the workout.

Life Insurance Sales Up 16% Here in Month

February sales of ordinary life insurance soared to $5,856,000 in Washington, a gain of 16 per cent over the same month last year, it was reported yesterday by the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau of Hartford, Conn.

For the first two months of this year Washington volume totaled $14,491,000, a jump of 47 per cent over the same 1941 period, according to the same survey.

Nationally, ordinary life insurance sales totaled $634,538,000 in February for an increase of 19 per cent, and in the first two months this year the volume hit $1,636,191,000 for a sensational upturn of 65 per cent over the same 1941 period.

Virginia and Maryland likewise showed sharp gains. Old Dominion sales were $10,283,000 in February and $22,643,000 in the first two months, up 23 per cent and 52 per cent, respectively. Maryland sales were $10,133,000 in February and $24,568,000 in the first two months, up 29 per cent and 54 per cent, respectively.

In a special study the research bureau reported that the average-size ordinary policy sold in Washington last year was $2501, as compared with a $2366 average in 1940. This was the largest average in the Nation. Estimated number of policies outstanding in the District of Columbia was 281,281 and the estimated total volume was $720,922,000. The per capita insurance in force here was estimated at $1087.

Westinghouse Farms Out War Subcontracts To 345 Firms, Teaches Them How to Produce

The white-haired proprietor of a tiny machine shop in a western Pennsylvania coal-mining village was ready to retire a year ago. Materials necessary to operate his business—he repaired oil-well machinery—had become more difficult to get.

But today he's working harder than ever. He used to have only one employe. Now he has 12.

Materials roll in whenever he needs them. Reason: He is making items urgently needed in the war program.

He is making parts under subcontract for Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

Westinghouse is but one of many big concerns which through subcontracting have spread war work out into the hands of little firms throughout the country—little firms that without war-goods business might have had to close.

Westinghouse has "farmed out" over 425 subcontracts totaling about $26,300,000 to more than 345 firms.

Today Westinghouse is subcontracting at a rate to provide 6,400,000 man-hours of work a year—enough to keep 3,200 men busy for 12 months.

Westinghouse Vice President R. A. McCarty explains:

"In the Pittsburgh district, for example, are a number of companies now machining brackets and frames for the motors which Westinghouse previously made entirely in its own factories. This type of subcontracting releases many skilled Westinghouse workers for exacting war production and at the same time keeps standard products rolling off assembly lines to meet the increasing needs of other war manufacturers."

McCarty is in charge of Westinghouse's subcontracting activities.

The Westinghouse subcontracting plan, while not exactly comparable to the York plan in which small manufacturers in York, Pa., pooled their productive resources to obtain defense contracts, might be called the Pittsburgh one-company pool plan, he explains. In effect, it accomplishes the same results as the York plan but is dependent on a single large company rather than the cooperation of a group of smaller manufacturers.

The Westinghouse plan also has been called the mothering plan, because the one big company must encourage its little subcontracting companies and teac hthem to do new jobs the big company way.

In contrast with the York plan, where 230 manufacturers equipped with the necessary machine tools for war production share the work in a single locality, the Westinghouse subcontractors just about cover the national map. The 345 subcontracting firms are scattered from Connecticut to California through 24 States and the District of Columbia.

How did the company locate the other 245 subcontractors?

Westinghouse sent its manufacturing engineers into the field in a search for idle machine-tool and plant capacity, McCarty explained.

"These engineers found what they needed in surprising places—in cross-roads villages and in great manufacturing plants. "As a result of this unique hunting expedition, a mechanic-handyman with one lathe in his shop is now kept busy full time turning out small bronze parts for switches used in war-plant powers systems.

"A glass plant and an oil-well equipment company are making turbine generator parts.

"Felt, raw hide, corrugated box, rubber and paper container plants and a ceramics factory are Westinghouse subcontractors."

"With the subletting of orders, our engineers gave subcontractors advice and instruction on tolerances, costs, man-hours and manufacturing techniques involved in making the articles we needed," he added.

"The largest individual Westinghouse subcontract is for $3,780,000 worth of goods for the Navy. The smallest to date is for an $8 gauge used for checking the accuracy of machine parts."

Tax Payments Fail to Curb Sales Surge

By the Associated Press

New York, March 20.—Buying of spring apparel lifted retail trade volume this week to a new high level since the January buying rush, Dun & Bradstreet reported today in its weekly business review.

The reaction feared by some retailers to income tax payment day showed little signs of developing on a broad scale, the review added.

"A moderate broadening of sales comparisons with last year," it continued, "brought the average increase for the week to 15 to 20 per cent. Gains were affected in several regions by adverse weather conditions.

"Estimated percentage sales increases for major regions compared with the same week a year ago were New England, 17 to 23; East, 20 to 24; Middle West, 15 to 19; South, 14 to 22; Southwest, 14 to 18; Northwest, 12 to 17, and Pacific Coast, 15 to 20."

In wholesale markets, the survey reported, a keen interest was shown in forward covering of so-called scarcity items.

"The influx of buyers into central markets continued to run heavier than a year ago, but in spite of brisk showroom activity wholesalers reported that a considerable volume of advance purchasing was also being handled by mail."

U. S. Income Tax Receipts Running Double Last Year's

By the Associated Press

Official Treasury records of income tax collections through March 18 totaled $1,671,591,218. In the similar period last year collections were $768,910,731.

Although March 16 was the deadline for filing annual returns, delay in reporting collections form the regional offices to the Treasury assured substantial additional collections before the month's books are closed.

The Treasury has estimated that the total taxes on 1941 income, including excess profits taxes on corporations and individuals, will be $8,753,000,000, but a large part of this sum will not be due until the quarterly payment dates in June, September and December.

In the current fiscal year, which will end June 30, the budget estimate of income tax collections is $7,147,000,000, of which $3,911,459,648 actually had been collected through March 18.

Scrap Shortage Cuts Youngstown Output

Youngstown, Ohio, March 20 (AP).—Tightening of the scrap situation once more is forcing a cut in steel output in the Youngstown district. Republic Steel Corporation will take one open hearth off the active list next week, for lack of scrap, cutting the active list to 74 and output 1 point, to 94 per cent. Four open hearths in condition to operate are being held idle because of lack of scrap.

WPB Studies Copper Scrap Transactions

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board announced yesterday that it had started an investigation of 4000 copper scrap dealers, 2500 foundries and 80 melters of scrap copper and brass to determine whether there have been violations of priority orders or of the inventory control regulations.

A survey of 90 primary processors of refined copper has been completed, WPB reported, and the compliance branch is now analyzing the findings with a view to enforcement action if violations are turned up.

The investigation of refineries, like the newly started survey of foundries and scrap dealers, was conducted by inspectors of the Labor Department's wage and hour division, acting as agents of WPB.

Reports have been received of some instances in which dealers in copper and brass scrap and users of pig iron had placed nondefense orders ahead of war orders in violation of priority regulations. The inventory restrictions provide that dealers may not keep on hand supplies of materials larger than the minimum necessary for ordinary operations.

Coconut, Palm Oil Use Is Restricted

The War Production Board yesterday prohibited the use of coconut oil and other oils having a high glycerine yeild in the manufacture of margarine, shortening or cooking fat, and restricted their use in soap making to 75 per cent of 1941 consumption.

Another order sharply restricted the use of palm oil after April 1. Because of wartime demand for glycerine in explosive production, palm oil use will be permitted only in manufacturing processes in which all but 1.5 per cent or less of the glycerine is extracted as a by-product. Unrestricted use also is permitted in the manufacture of critically needed tin plate, terne plate, steel sheets and strips, and black steel plate.

The ban on margarine, shortening and cooking fat usage is effective immediately, along with the 75 per cent limitation on soap manufacture.

Chicago to Test 'Stanley Plan'

The War Production Board said yesterday the "Stanley Plan," providing a directory of war work available to small plants and factories desiring subcontracts, would get a tryout in Chicago in the near future.

The plan, perfected by Arthur T. Stanley, formerly on the staff of Floyd B. Odlum, director of contract distribution before the creation of WPB, is outlined in a 16-page code book printed by the Government for trial purposes. It has had preliminary tests in Indianapolis.

In the Chicago tryout selected prime contractors of the area will list the work they have to be done by separate parts, classifying each by the machines needed to make it, the tolerances allowed and the machine-hours required to complete the subcontract order.

This information will be condensed in brief code form and arranged alphabetically, so that factory owners and machine shop operators—armed with the code book—will know without studying piles of blue prints whether they have the machines to make the wanted parts. They would then be able to deal directly with the prime contractor.

Wage Rate Increased In Clothing Industry

Boston, March 20 (AP).—A general nation-wide wage increase of approximately 10 cents an hour for 150,000 workers in the men's clothing industry has been agreed upon by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union (CIO) and management representatives, the union announced.

"The increase in wages agreed to is 10 cents an hour for all week workers," said Joseph Salerno, New England regional director of the union. "For those on piecework, the average earnings of each section will be adjusted to approximate increase of 10 cents an hour. Thus, low-paid workers will receive a proportionately higher per cent increase."

Third Pay Boost Granted

Philadelphia, March 20 (AP).—The Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Co. today announced pay increases amounting to more than two million dollars a year. The increase, third in 14 months, ranges from 5 to 7 per cent. It was made effective as of March 8.

Grains Rally After Break To Year's Low

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 20.—Grain prices were at virtually the lowest general level of the year today as the market slumped badly around midsession before regaining part of its loss.

Rye fell almost 2 cents, wheat more than a cent and corn and oats almost that much. Weakness of grains helped to touch off brisk stop loss selling in the soybean pit around noon and bean prices collapsed 6 cents a bushel, the maximum permitted in one session.

Liquidation of contracts held by traders for some time was blamed for much of the selling. Recent modest declines in prics, brokers said, had undermined confidence of many owners and at the same time had carried prices to levels where there were resting stop loss orders.

Soybeans Lead Drop

After this selling had spent itself the market developed some rallying power, but wheat closed ⅝ to 1⅛ cents lower than yesterday, May, 1.26@1.25⅞; July, 1.27⅛@1.28; corn, ⅛ to ½ down; May, 87@87⅛; July, 89¼; oats, ½ to ⅝ off; rye, ⅝ to ⅞ lower, and lard unchanged at ceilings. May oats closed at 55@54⅞; rye, 77¾@77⅝, and soybeans, 2.89⅝.

The general market was affected by lagging demand for spot delivery grain, except corn and oats. Slow milling and flour trade and the favorable outlook for new winter wheat, which will be moving into consumption in about three months, was a factor in the wheat pit.

Rye Is Less Used

Reports that distillers were using wheat and corn instead of increased quantities of rye continued to disturb that market while traders asserted more Canadian rye is held in bond in domestic markets pending payment of duty.

Traders said there were no developments to account for the break in soybeans, but they blamed the market's action largely on a technical reaction brought on by urgent sales in the temporary absence of support.

Wholesale Commodity Index Rises in Week

By the Associated Press

Higher prices for livestock and clothing brought a 0.2 per cent increase in the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Index of wholesale commodity prices during the week ended March 14.

The index, the bureau reported yesterday, stood at 97.1 per cent of the 1926 average, the highest level since September, 1928, and 20 per cent above the corresponding week of last year.

The bureau said that although there had been a slight increase during the week, the rate of advance had been relatively slow during the last seven weeks.

Farm and textile products rose 0.8 per cent, building materials were up 0.3 per cent, but average prices for fuel and lighting materials declined 0.4 per cent during the week ended March 14.

Cons. Aircraft Votes Dividend of $1

Fort Worth, Tex., March 20 (AP).—A dividend of $1,284,244 to holders of common stock, $1 per share, has been declared by directors of Consolidated Aircraft Corporation.

The dividend is payable April 18 to stockholders of record April 1. A $2 dividend was declared December 27.

Weekend Lightening of Commitments Depresses Stocks in Light Trading

New York, March 20.—It was another case of lightening commitments as a weekend precaution in today's stock market and leading issues cut their prices by fractions to a point or so.

While selling pressure was absent throughtout the lackadaisical proceedings, bidding was half-hearted at the best and the downward drift which started at the opening prevailed to the close. There was a smattering of favorites, however, that managed to cling to modest advances.

Fairly encouraging business developments, including an upswing in this week's retail spending and a number of good earnings statements, were pretty well ignored.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .2 of a point at 34.7, the decline wiping out the MacArthur rally on St. Patrick's Day. Transfers of 276,000 shares compared with 274,800 Thursday and again were among the smallest since last June.

The pleas of Stock Exchange President Schram and the American Federation of Labor to Congress for a revision or repeal of the capital gains tax brought a little cheer to boardrooms but failed to touch off any real demand for securities.

Among stocks down a point or more at new lows for the year were American Telephone, International Harvester and Homestake Mining. One of the few issues to record a new 1942 high was Chicago Great Western preferred which ended with a net gain of ⅝.

On the offside were United States Steel, General Motors, United States Rubber, Consolidated Edison, Kennecott, Phelps Dodge, Westinghouse, Dupont, Union Carbide, Montgomery Ward, Standard Oil (N. J.), Union Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Santa Fe and Pennsylvania.

Plus signs were retained by Sperry, Consolidated Aircraft and Texas Co.

Bonds were fairly steady with scattered rails ahead. Commodities dipped. At Chicago wheat was off ⅝ to 1⅛ cents a bushel, corn down ⅛ to ⅛, soybeans, 5¼ to 5⅝ cents lower, and hogs about even. Cotton lost 5 to 20 cents a bale.

Curb trends were ragged. Inclined to slip were Brewster Aero, Lake Shore, Gulf Oil, Electric Bond & Share, Cities Service and American Light. Minor improvement was posted for American Cyanamid, Aluminum of America, Creole Petroleum and Pennroad. Turnover here was around 76,000 shares versus 73,000 yesterday.

Food Purchases Under Lend-Lease Revealed by U. S.

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday that it purchased 30,435,252 pounds of pork meat products and lard this week for shipment to Great Britain and Russia under the lend-lease program.

The products bought included: Canned pork products, 15,295,740 pounds; cured pork products, 4,235,000 pounds; Wiltshire sides, 4,230,000 pounds; frozen pork loins, 710,000 pounds, and lard, 5,964,512 pounds.

The department did not make known prices paid for the pork products.

Other food purchases for the lend-lease programs announced yesterday included 9,164,700 pounds of dry skim milk and 803,400 cases of evaporated milk.

Rail Revenues Increase 27.6% In February

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported that 89 Class I railroads had estimated operating revenues of $377,183,729 in February, compared with $295,705,966 in February, 1941, an increase of 27.6 per cent.

The reporting carriers, the association said, represent 82.5 per cent of the total operating revenues.

Freight revenues amounted to $308,763,201, compared with $244,362,780 in February, 1941, an increase of 26.4 per cent.

Passenger revenues totaled $44,266,830, compared with $29,528,831 in February, 1941, an increase of 49.8 per cent.

Marine Insurance Premiums Rise 30%

Philadelphia, March 20 (AP).—Premium volume of the Insurance Co. of America's ocean marine insurance increased 30 per cent to $7,712,087 during 1941, John A. Diemand, president, reported at the 150th annual meeting of stockholders.

Diemand said the company's fire losses increased during the year because of "the feverish rate of production in our industrial plants, the introduction of new manufacturing hazards and the widespread employment of new and inexperienced workmen."

Fire premiums in 1941, he said, were $16,712,845, an increase of 9.6 per cent over the 1940 figure. Inland marine net premiums were reported at $4,638,950, a gain of $672,000.

United Corp. Acts To Create Special Capital Surplus

Philadelphia, March 20 (AP).—The Securities Commission gave the United Corporation permission today to restate the value of its outstanding 2,488,712 shares of $3 cumulative preference stock from $50 to $5.

The company must get the approval of holders of the issue before making the change.

The restatement will create a special capital surplus fund of $111,992,047 against which no charge may be made without the approval of the SEC.

United proposed the alteration to facilitate the payment of dividends on the preference stock. It told the commission that a Delaware law barred declaration of dividends when the value of the issuer's property depreciated to less than the aggregate amount of capital represented by outstanding stock entitled to preference in the distribution of assets.

The company said, however, that its own view was that the true value of its portfolio exceeded the liquidation value of the preference at its present stated value.

United is a holding company with substantial blocks of common stock of Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation, Niagara Hudson Power Corporation, Public Service Corporation of New Jersey and the United Gas Improvement Co.

Hearing Set April 25 For Defunct Utility

Richmond, Va., March 20 (AP).—Judge Robert N. Pollard, of the United States District Court, fixed April 25 as the date for a hearing on the appointment and compensation allowances of the trustee and their attorney in the bankruptcy proceedings of Central States Electric Corporation, one-time huge utility holding company.

A list of approximately 33,000 stockholders of Central States, along with a list of creditors, will be filed by Monday. John H. Eccles, former secretary of the corporation and now employed by the trustees to assist theme said that debenture bonds of the corporation in the hands of the public amount to approximately $18,037,000, the main indebtedness.

C. N. R. Revenues Set New Record

Ottawa, March 20 (Canadian Press).—The Canadian National Railways reported today 1941 was the most successful financial year of its history, and showed a cash surplus of $4,016,000, after taxes and interest, against a substantial deficiton in 1940.

Net revenue for the year, after operating expenses, was $66,308,341, an increase of $21,600,929 over the previous year.

Orders 70 Engines

Forty steam locomotives and 30 Diesel-electric switch engines were ordered by the Southern Pacific Co. at a total cost of approximately 12 million dollars, A. T. Mercier, president, announced. Deliveries are expected to start in October, 1942.

B. & L. Assets At 173 Million, Off Slightly

Combined assets of the building and loan associations doing business in the District of Columbia totaled $173,139,929 as of February 28, according to the monthly analysis released yesterday by F. Willson Camp, secretary of the league. This reflects an increase of $13,191,706 over the comparable period of last year, although a slight decline under the preceding month is noted when resources reached the high water mark of $173,544,212.

Loans made on real estate at the end of February, 1941, $149,623,398 while this year the figure had climbed to $162,486,029 or an increase of $12,862,131. Amount due shareholders also revealed a substantial gain, rising from $141,939,366 last year to $149,616,368 or a net increae of $7,677,302. Surplus and reserves continued to show marked improvement, growing $2,854,852 during the year. The present reserves of $13,890,601 are the highest ever recorded.

While construction loans reflected the expected slump, total mortgage loans made during February showed an increase over 1941 of $322,359. More than $3,500,000 in advances were recorded during the month, the report disclosed.

Small share accounts closed during recent weeks indicate the investing members are responding to the patriotic urging of the member groups and are transferring funds to defense bonds. These withdrawals are paced, however, by share accounts opened by new members, Camp said.

Late Earnings Statements

American Water Works & Electric Co. reported for 1941 net profit of $3,808,663 after all charges, including depletion and depreciation, equal to $1.11 a share on the common stock. This compared with $4,041,182, or $1.21 a share, in 1940. The report to stockholders said it may be necessary for the company to seek rate increases in certain operating properties to offset rising cost of operation and higher taxes.

Engineers Public Service Co. reported consolidated net income for 1941 was $2,429,497, equal to $1.27 a common share, compared with $3,068,967 or $1.61 a share in 1940.

Diamond Shoe Corporation showed a consolidated net income for 1941 of $876,529, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $1.96 a common share, compared with $812,739 or $1.66 a share in 1940.

Yale & Towne Mfg. Co. showed 1941 profit of $1,669,386, equal to $3.43 a share on the capital stock, compared with $1,411,167, or $2.90 a share, in 1940.

Federal Mining & Smelting Co. reported for 1941 net profit of $1,035,551 before depletion, equal to $4.20 a share on the common stock, against $973,621, or $3.95 a common share, in 1940.

Canadian Celanese, Ltd., reported its 1941 net profit was, $1,853,039 against $1,341,429 in 1940, indicating net earnings last year were $3.99 a comon share, against $2.87 a share in 1940, allowing for preferred dividend requirements.

Average Earnings At $2141 a Year For G. M. Worker

New York, March 20 (AP).—Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the General Motors Corporation, said today the average hourly earned rate of the company's employes in the United States in 1941 was about 43 per cent higher than in all manufacturing plants and approximately 29 per cent higher than the rate in 25 major manufacturing industries.

He reported average annual earnings of regular hourly rate employes in the United States were $2141, compared with $1804 in 1940 and $1503 in 1939. Average hours worked per week were 40.7 in 1941 against 39.1 in 1940.

During the year, Sloan said, total employment and pay rolls of General motors reached a record high, with the average number of salaried and hourly employes increasing 22 per cent to 303,827, compared with 249,386 in 1940, and pay rolls at $669,744,870 against $492,246,017 in 1940.

ANYTHING BEEN GOING ON HERE, NICHOLS?
WELL CHIEF— WILDA KEENE WENT OUT WITH HER MANAGER THIS AFTERNOON— THEY CAME BACK ABOUT THREE— HAD A SUITCASE WITH HER—
SOUNDS AS IF THEY WENT TO THE BANK FOR THE RANSOM MONEY—
IT'S GETTING LATE— I GUESS IT'S ABOUT TIME WE PAID OUR CALL— COME WITH US, NICHOLS!
SORRY, SIR, BUT MISS KEENE HAS RETIRED— SHE CANNOT BE DISTURBED!
TELL HER IT'S THE F.B.I.— WE MUST SEE HER!
YOU GO ALONG, JANE— SEE THAT SHE DOESN'T USE THE PHONE!
NICHOLS— WAKE UP THE SERVANTS —BRING THEM INTO THE KITCHEN!

ODD BODKINS — BY FRED FOX and CHASE CRAIG

IF SIR ECHO KNOWS I'M HERE, HE'LL SPEAK TO ME, AND SOMETHING WILL HAPPEN! HIS PREDICTIONS ALWAYS COME TRUE!
I CAN SEE HIM UP THERE. HE'S KIND OF CUTE!
I'LL SHOUT INTO THIS CAVE, AND MY VOICE'LL ECHO SEVEN TIMES THROUGH THE CANYON!
IT'LL SOUND LIKE IT'S COMIN' FROM EVERY DIRECTION AND HE'LL BELIEVE EVERY WORD OF IT!
DO ME A FAVOR, PLEASE?
TELL HIM HE'S GOING TO— BZZZ-BZZZ--ZZ-BZZZ---
I'LL TELL HIM TO— AND HE'LL BE A DOG-GONE NITWIT IF HE DON'T!

We presume that even when sackcloth and ashes become the general feminine attire they'll still be nominating the "Ten Best Dressed" women of the year.

And, although that has nothing to do with the case at this time, this is to announce that you'll be able to find out who they are for 1942 by listening to WJSV at 1:20 p. m. today.

The revelations are to be made by Emil Alvin Hartman, director of Fashion Academy, who then will introduce the winners to the feminine public which is interested in such things. The affair is coming from a luncheon at New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The fact that these are times of stress is being thought of too, however, and Rosellen Callahan, CBS's fashion editor, who will interview the winners—including the best dressed debutantes, the best dressed radio star, opera singer, business woman, night club entertainer, screen actress, Broadway actress and what have you—will bring out pointers on what being "well dressed" means in wartime and on a wartime budget for the average woman.

The winners have been chosen in a poll of 100 American designers from all parts of the country, and their instructions, according to the eminent Mr. Hartman, were to gauge their clothes on the women's ability to choose clothes suitable to both their personalities and professions, rather than an extensive, extravagant wardrobe.

So endeth this fine fashion note.

Contract Bridge

The luck which all champions must have to succeed was demonstrated during the play of today's deal by Mrs. Murray DeLeeuw and Truesdale Clark, of Rochester, winners of the Niagara Frontier mixed pair championship. Mrs. DeLeeuw, declarer at a four-spade contract, was confronted by a "double-or-nothing finesse." She could either refuse the finesse and go down one trick or risk the finesse, in which case she would make her game or be defeated two tricks. Declarer decided in favor of the gamble and won a high score on the board.

West opened the club seven, which was won by dummy's king, and the ace was continued, giving South a heart discard. The ace, king of trumps were played and declarer saw she must lose three hearts as well as a spade for down one.

There was a chance, however, of throwing off one of the losing hearts on the diamond ace if the finesse against the king were taken successfully. South realized that a score of minus 100 points, down one, might be averaged, whereas minus 200 points, down two, probably would be bottom at match-point duplicate. To offset this was the very fine score of 620 points she would receive if the finesse went through.

Mrs. DeLeeuw finally led the singleton diamond from the closed hand and finessed dummy's queen when West played small. A losing heart was then discarded on the ace of diamonds and the game was safe. South gave up two hearts and a spade.

Most declarers were defeated one trick at a three notrump or four-spade contract.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — "As We Say Farewell to Peaceful Valley . . ." — BY MILTON CANIFF

THE SOLDIER HAS RED HAIR! IT IS A TRICK! FORGET THE AIRPLANES.... FIRE INTO THE CROWD!
HIT THE DECK, GANG! ...THEY'RE ON TO US!
THE BARGE GUNNERS ARE LOWERING THEIR ANGLE OF FIRE... THEY'RE TURNING ON THE REFUGEES...
THE BARGE FILLED WITH CIVILIANS IS OUT INTO THE CURRENT!
AND WHOEVER IS IN THAT TANK IS MOVING INLAND! I DON'T QUITE GET IT... BUT I'M GLAD I'M NOT RISKING MY NECK IN THAT ST. VITUS WAGON... GIVE ME A NICE, QUIET BOMBER ANY DAY! LET'S GO HOME...

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

BILL! COLONEL CANFIELD IS NOT IN HIS ROOM! HAVE YOU SEEN HIM?
PARDON ME, MRS. WORTH! WHILE YOU WERE DOWNTOWN, HE WENT OUT THE BACK DOOR!
I SUPPOSE HE DECIDED TO TAKE A LITTLE WALK!
I DUNNO! HE WAS CARRYIN' HIS GRIP!
AN' HE LEFT THESE TWO LETTERS--ONE FOR YOU AN' ONE FOR THE EDITOR OF THE PAPER!
Dear Mary: It's no deal! I could'nt get you go into a game with the deck stacked against you!
...BLESS HIS HEART--! THE OLD LAMB IN WOLF'S CLOTHING!

HELLO, TOM —WHERE'S JOHNNY?
HE'S UP IN THE COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE!
GEE, I WANTED TO TALK TO HIM BEFORE I WENT UP THERE! I'M GOING TO ENLIST!
HOT DOG!
I KNOW OUR WORK IS IMPORTANT AND THAT THE DEPARTMENT NEEDS EXPERIENCED MEN— BUT I JUST CAN'T WAIT ANY LONGER!
WHAT'S IT GONNA BE—ARMY OR NAVY?
THE NAVY!
PARDNER—YOU'RE NOT GOING UP TO THE COMMISSIONER ALONE!

MR. AND MRS. — The Voice of Experience — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

HOW DO YOU LIKE THIS COAT?
VERY NICE. VERY GOOD
I HAD THIS ONE SENT HOME, TOO. HOW DO YOU LIKE THIS ONE?
VERY GOOD. VERY NICE
BUT CAN'T YOU GIVE ME SOME IDEA WHICH YOU THINK LOOKS BEST?
UP TO YOU. YOU'RE GOING TO WEAR 'EM, NOT ME
BUT HAVE YOU NO OPINION? CAN'T YOU HELP ME AT ALL?
NO! IF I SAY I LIKE ONE MOREN ANOTHER, YOU'LL THINK OF FIFTY REASONS WAY I'M WRONG

DIXIE DUGAN — In a Hurry! — BY J. P. McEVOY and H. J. STRIEBEL

RONNIE'S BIRTHDAY PARTY PROGRESSES!
WHEN THE CLOCK STRIKES 12, THE RING WILL BE OPENED AND IT'S CONTENTS DIVULGED!
FASHION NEWS FOR DIXIE'S DRESS BY RUTH WEBER, REGO PARK, LONG ISLAND
I HAVE A CONFESSION TO MAKE! I PLANNED A SPEECH TO CELEBRATE MY 21ST BIRTHDAY—A SORT OF DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE—I WAS GOING TO TELL ALL OF YOU WHERE TO GET OFF—BUT—BUT GEE—YOU'VE BEEN SO NICE TO ME I JUST CAN'T DO IT!
HEAR! HEAR!
HE'S SUCH A SWEET BOY!
NICE KID—RONNIE!
NOW I HAVE ANOTHER CONFESSION TO MAKE! I'M GOING TO BE ON A TRAIN AT 12 O'CLOCK—ROLLING ON TO A NEW JOB—NEW ADVENTURES—I WANT TO BE ALONE ON MY COMING OF AGE—
BUT—BUT, RONNIE! AREN'T YOU EVEN GOING TO TAKE ME HOME???
SORRY, DIXIE—I DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS SO LATE—TAKE A CAB—AND PLEASE FORGIVE ME!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Cryptogram — BY FRANK MARTINEK

COMMANDER WINSLOW CALLING IN BY RADIO? IS THIS A GAG?
N-NO, SIR. WANT TO LISTEN?
HELLO! HEL—WHAT? HM—YES. GO ON—
BY THE GODS! IT SOUNDS LIKE HIM, ALL RIGHT. BUT HOW IN THE—!!
HUMPH! THAT'S ALL. HE'S SIGNED OFF. MINDFUL OF ENEMY LISTENERS, I SUPPOSE. NOW WHAT DID HE MEAN—THE "DIGIT"?"

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

MR. ROPER! AN INVALID SHOULDN'T BE UP AND DRESSED!
PLEASE, MRS. HUBBARD! DON'T CALL ME MR. ROPER, AND DON'T CALL ME AN INVALID!
I FEEL GREAT! WHERE'S A TOWEL—I WANT TO PITCH IN, TOO, AND PAY MY BOARD!!
NO YOUNG MAN WHO NEEDS HELP EVER HAS TO PAY BOARD AT MOTHER HUBBARD'S CUPBOARD—STEPHEN!
UGH! YOU PICKUM HEAP SLOW WAY TO GET RICH!
OH—BUT I AM RICH! RICH IN MEMORIES! GOLD WOULD MELT AWAY, BUT I'LL ALWAYS HAVE THE MEMORY OF THE FINE BOYS—LIKE YOU—THAT I'VE BEEN A MOTHER TO, EVEN FOR A LITTLE WHILE!
MRS. HUBBARD, I'M SURE NO BOY COULD ASK ANY FINER THING IN LIFE THAN TO HAVE YOU FOR A MOTHER!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

ED'S STORY IS TRUE, SERGEANT—HE TOLD ME ABOUT THE DEATH TRAP HE SET IN TH' BARN!
IF YOUR WIFE'S DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL, ED, WHY DIDN'T YOU TELL ME INSTEAD OF HOING?
THERE DON'T SEEM NO WAY TO PROVE MY STORY—IT LOOKED LIKE MURDER. I WAS AFRAID I COULDN'T EXPLAIN—!
THEN WHY DO YOU EXPLAIN NOW?
BECAUSE NOW IT DON'T MATTER WHETHER YOU BELIEVE ME OR NOT—!
